Roosevelt Backs Benson; Farley Supports Rival

Lehman, Dewey Close Governor 1% Ahead Wagner Well in Lead Mead Has Slight Edge

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Nov. 2.—After a little less than four weeks of spectacular campaigning, Thomas E. Dewey is still running neck-and-neck with Gov. Herbert H. Lehman in the contest for the Governorship of New York State, according to the semifinal results of a State-wide survey by the Institute.

GALLUP.

With Gov. Lehman's majority in New York City almost exactly counterbalanced by Dewey's huge lead upstate, the race is so close that the margin of victory will likely be less than 3 per cent.

Up to late yesterday the survey results were showing Gov. Lehman ahead by a small lead—only one per cent—which, if translated into votes, would represent only a few thousand. With the election six days off and a final survey already under way, the two-party results today are:

Dewey	49.5

But any one of a half-dozen factors could tip the scales. Those factors are intangibles which no scientific survey can accurately measure. In a race as close as this, the relative efficiency of the political machines in getting out the vote may prove decisive. No survey can foretell precisely what proportion of registered Democrats or Republicans are going to vote, and what proportion will stay at home. Nor can it attempt to measure the irregularities of the weather, the effectiveness of last-minute campaign appeals, or dishonesty in the counting of the vote.

The normal, or expected, error in any scientific survey is 3 per cent; that is, the vote for each candidate might be 3 per cent too high or 3 per cent too low. This normal error must be kept in mind in evaluating any survey.

Lehman 2 to 1 in the City; Dewey Nearly 2 to 1 Upstate

Traditionally Democratic in its gubernatorial vote, New York City, with about half the voters in the State, is for Lehman by approximately 2 to 1, roughly the proportion he polled against the Republican candidate in 1936.

In the up-State counties, on the other hand, the survey points to a greater Republican sweep than the G.O.P. has enjoyed in many years. Whereas the last Republican candidate, William F. Bleakley, came down to the Bronx with 57 per cent of the up-State vote, Dewey is now running 63 per cent in the survey up-State.

	Dewey	Lehman
New York City	35	65

Lehman's support comes principally from voters in the younger age groups and voters with incomes below the average. In this respect, his backing comes from the same type of people who support President Roosevelt.

As in the case of the President's popularity throughout the Nation, the top income group in the State is strongly Republican, the lower income group overwhelmingly Democratic. The middle income

Schism in Minnesota President Will Speak Broadcast Tomorrow Mayor for Lehman

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt and Postmaster General Farley yesterday were revealed to be supporting rival candidates for the Minnesota governorship, as campaign lines noticeably tightened throughout the country and the 1938 election fight rapidly approached its ballot box climax next Tuesday.

Extraordinary efforts to swing the November 8 elections, construed as a test for the 1940 battle, were reflected in these other developments:

Mr. Roosevelt returned to his Hyde Park home and became the center of political interest in anticipation of his lone campaign address to be delivered by radio tomorrow night.

A majority of Republican candidates for Senate and House, to combat any relief pressure to control votes, joined in a statement that they would "demand and seek unceasingly" an investigation into political activities of Federal relief agencies.

The Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee, saying it had evidence indicating likelihood of election frauds in Hudson County and Jersey City, N. J., warned that candidates claiming election on such "fraudulent methods" will be challenged in the Senate.

Mayor LaGuardia of New York was reported by the New York Times to have decided to support Democratic Gov. Lehman for re-election over Thomas E. Dewey, Republican.

Big-gun speakers of both parties were campaigning strongly. Farley spoke at Hartford, Conn., and Senator Arthur Vandenberg at Newark, N. J., while Secretary of Agriculture Wallace issued an appeal for re-election of Senators George McGill, of Kansas, and Guy M. Gillette, of Iowa.

Stands by "Liberals"

The Chief Executive, it was learned, pursuing his stand that candidates of liberal philosophy should be elected, with less regard to party designation, has expressed his "high esteem" for Gov. Elmer Benson, Farmer-Labor candidate for re-election in Minnesota, and "the interest I take in his efforts to develop liberal governmental policies in Minnesota." In a telegram to the Working Newspapermen's Benson Volunteer Committee, he added that "there is every reason why liberals throughout the Nation should be working this year in the closest of harmonious co-operation."

Farley, however, as Democratic national chairman, carrying out his determination to give all possible assistance to all of the party's nominees, is actively backing Thomas Gallagher, Democratic nominee against Benson, and twice has entered Minnesota to declare his support.

The Minnesota situation came to the forefront with publication of President Roosevelt's telegram to George W. Kelley, co-chairman of the newspapermen's committee sup-

Husband Beat Her Whenever Sox Lost, She Gets Divorce

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Bernice Witos, 25, told the Superior Court today her husband, Stanley, 30, used to follow the Chicago American League baseball team ardently, and every day they lost he'd beat her up.

On June 18, 1936, she said, he left home and told her he wouldn't return until they took the pennant.

Hitler Girl Friend Coming to U. S.

Berlin, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—Red-haired Leni Reifenstahl, actress friend of Reichsfuehrer Hitler, is on her way to the United States to offer Americans a two-and-a-half hour motion picture of the 1936 Olympic games.

Fraulein Reifenstahl, 30-year-old daughter of a plumber, said she had turned down suggestions of American distributors that the film be cut and would exhibit it as a road show if necessary.

Burned Bone Found in Kidnap Den

May Be Part of Man Hidden in Cement Room Bullet-Pocked Executions Suspected

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—A small bone, buried under a cement floor patch, and a machine gun were found by police tonight in the furnace room of Ukrainian Hall, where G-men said a killer-kidnap gang crudely cremated a victim's body.

The gun was in a secret compartment, which contained about 15 holes, similar to those made by bullets.

Bone Is Analyzed

The bone was sent immediately to a city laboratory to determine whether it was a remnant of the body of Arthur Fried, 32, a White Plains (N. Y.) businessman who disappeared last December 4.

The bullet holes in the ten by ten compartment were duplicated in the wall of a telephone booth in the larger furnace room, indicating, the police said, that the place might have been a gangland execution chamber.

Access to the place was gained, according to Federal agents, by a former porter at the hall who kept a key and is now one of four men in custody for three alleged kidnapings in the metropolitan area and the slaying of Fried.

Blood Stains Found

The secret chamber formerly was used as a closet for storing the colorful costumes worn by the Ukrainians on fete days.

The three men held here were turned over by G-men to the New York district attorney. The other named by J. Edgar Hoover, F. B. I. chief, is in Sing Sing.

The decision to dig into the floor was prompted by a city chemist's report that the patching was done after Fried's abduction for a demanded ransom of $200,000.

A laboratory report said stains on a wooden frame of the coal chute at the front of the building were made by human blood and plans were made to dismantle it.

Assistant District Attorney Jacob J. Rosenblum, who took charge when the G-men gave up the case for lack of Federal jurisdiction, continued what he expected to be a night-long grilling of Demetrius Gula, William Jacknis and John Virga, those in custody here.

Jacknis, meanwhile, was described by Benjamin Farber, Brooklyn coal dealer, who was kidnaped last April and ransomed for $1,900, as an erstwhile friend. Farber expressed surprise that Jacknis was arrested for his abduction.

"One of My Pals"

Farber also said that in offering possible intermediaries who might arrange his release he named Jacknis as a likely go-between—"He's one of my pals," he said.

The other victim of kidnaping was Norman Miller, 19, whose well to do father paid $13,000 for his release last July in Brooklyn.

Hoover said the gang might have engaged in at least two other kidnapings and several robberies as well.

The discoveries in the furnace room were anxiously awaited at the district attorney's office, where it was said a murder charge would be futile without a substantiating corpus delicti (body, or fact, of the crime).

A portion of the body might establish its presence and investigators surmised that the patches in the floor might cover bones unburned in the furnace.

Under a New York law adopted after the Lindbergh kidnaping, abduction is a capital offense if the missing person has not been returned unharmed at the time of the trial.

In the event a murder charge is not filed, the district attorneys of nearby Westchester and Kings (Brooklyn) counties stood by ready with kidnaping charges.

Fried was seized in Westchester, and according to Hoover, was shot dead four days later in New York. Miller and Farber were kidnaped in Brooklyn.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Nov. 2.—An international scheme for smuggling heroin into the United States concealed in the covers of the Talmud and Jewish prayer books was apparently solved today with the announcement by United States Attorney Michael J. Walsh, in Brooklyn, of the arrest of Mrs. Gitele Leifer, of Brooklyn, who, it is charged, received the smuggled drugs from her husband in Paris.

French police have already arrested the husband, Isak Leifer, who calls himself "Grand Rabbi of Brooklyn." Extradition proceedings will be instituted to bring Leifer to Brooklyn to stand trial with his wife.

According to Assistant United States Attorney James G. Scileppi, the prayer books were passed without suspicion here for some time, but customs officials have now been

Labor War Ban Urged; Troops Called in Ohio

Union Ends Strike Plant Reopens Today Davey Assails Lewis He Replies 'Poltroon'

La Follette Reports Proposes New Laws Strikebreaking Curb No Arms to Industry

By the Associated Press.

Middletown, Ohio, Nov. 2.—C. I. O. Organizer Sam Sponseller announced tonight that members of the Pioneer Workers Union had voted to call off their month-old strike at the P. Lorillard Co. tobacco plant here at midnight. The vote was 577 to 1, he said.

The announcement came as police waited on the city's outskirts to escort to their quarters 500 Ohio National Guardsmen ordered here by Gov. Martin L. Davey for the plant's scheduled reopening tomorrow.

Governor Assails Union

The union acted at the request of a C. I. O. leader who telegraphed a plea to Sponseller that the strike be called off.

Gov. Martin L. Davey, arch foe of the C.I.O., tonight condemned what he described as a "brutal, lawless and tyrannical invasion of this State by the C.I.O. high command."

The plant employs 1,100 persons at processing tobacco and manufacturing chewing scrap. A C.I.O. union, demanding a closed shop and check-off but seeking primarily to bargain under the Wagner act, called a strike there October 3. An attempt to reopen October 25 precipitated a clash which Gov. Davey called a "serious riot."

Charges Terrorism

"We will not permit the lawless invasion of Middletown or any other community," the Governor said, asserting "a reign of terrorism has been inaugurated in a peaceful community."

Several hours after Guardsmen were ordered on duty, Paul W. Fuller, regional C.I.O. director at Cincin-

Sweeping changes in the conduct of American industrial relations, including prohibition of strike-breaking and drastic restrictions on private detective agencies, are being drafted by the staff of the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee into bills for presentation at the next session of Congress, The Post learned yesterday.

Tentative bills are in process of formulation, radically curtailing the activities of strikebreaking and detective agencies and company police as well as the use of munitions by employers.

Other proposals also are under consideration, including a requirement that citizens' "law and order" committees reveal the sources of their funds, and amendment of the Wagner act to prohibit employers' associations from practices now forbidden to individual employers.

The proposed legislation is the direct outgrowth of the La Follette committee's long-standing investigations into employer-employe disputes of the last few years. Still subject to considerable alteration, the program as it now stands affords an accurate picture of the general tenor of labor laws soon to be proposed to Congress.

It is understood that the proposals of the committee's staff contemplate a broad definition of strikebreakers, based on the definition in the original draft of the wage-hour bill.

Under these terms, strikebreakers would include those individuals whom the employer believes to be unqualified for the work they are engaged to do, as well as persons employed at a higher wage rate than that normally paid to the strik-

D. C. Man Indicted With 11 Others in Stock Fraud Case

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today filed an indictment against 12 individuals and five corporations charging use of the mails to defraud.

The indictment names Philip A. Frear, 44-year-old Washington banker and son of former Representative James A. Frear, of Wisconsin; Harold B. Grow, George J. Mitchell, jr., George H. Clayton, Vincent E. Ferretti, Ralph H. Robb, Thomas W. Morris, S. Leo Solomont, Sartell Prentice, Jerome C. Brady, Alexander B. Beverly, Howard F. Hansell, jr., Calmur & Co., Inc., Fiscal Management Co., Ltd., Northern Capital Holding Co., Ltd., Chantry, Ltd., and National Construction Co., Ltd.

The indictment alleges that the scheme to defraud consisted of a plan for the defendants to gain control of certain investment trusts.

500 Jews, Fleeing Vienna, Reach Crowded Shanghai

Special Cable to The Post.

Shanghai, Nov. 2.—Shanghai's relief problems were increased today with the arrival here of about 500 Jews from Vienna. About 500 more are already on the way here and are scheduled to arrive before the end of the year. They are penniless for the most part, since their properties in Austria were confiscated.

Because of Japanese control of the customs here, the Chinese government at Chungking has ceased granting visas to Jews from Vienna, but the Japanese have given them landing permits good for the international settlement.

Germany, Ireland Reach Trade Pact

Dublin, Nov. 2 (AP).—Germany, engaged in a trade building campaign throughout southeastern Europe, extended her efforts to Britain's backyard today with the completion of a commercial agreement with Ireland. Details of the pact, which replaces a 3-year-old agreement expiring December 31, will be published Thursday.

Japan to Rule China as a Manchukuo

Japan-China 'Bloc'

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Nov. 2—Japan tonight warned the world of her intention to force China into a solid bloc with Manchukuo and the Japanese Empire for the political and economic domination of east Asia.

Extension of her domination over China to carry out Japan's "immutable policy" for Far Eastern reconstruction after the present war with China, was formally announced with the Japanese government's aim envisioning an "Asia for the Asiatics."

It meant that insular Japan—her principal islands comprising some 148,000 square miles—intends to more than double the vast empire unrolling behind her conquering armies and make Japanese interests supreme despite the protests of the United States and other foreign powers.

Territory Doubled

Japan's plan was announced in commemoration of tomorrow's national holiday on the birthday of the late Emperor Meiji.

Already Tokyo rules 575,000 square miles of the Asiatic mainland—Korea, annexed in 1910, and Manchukuo, a puppet empire created out of Manchuria by conquest in 1931-33. That territory has been doubled by the present war, which started July 7, 1937, and thus far has brought 575,000 square miles of 13 Chinese provinces under at least nominal Japanese rule.

Only those nations "which are in sympathy with us"—apparently Germany and Italy with whom Japan is allied in an anti-Communist pact—were singled out for Japan's gratitude in the government statement. Other western powers were ignored.

"Stability" Sought

"What Japan seeks is establishment of a new order which will insure permanent stability in East Asia," said the statement. "In this lies the ultimate purpose of our military campaign.

"This new order will have for its foundation a tripartite relationship of mutual aid and co-ordination among Japan, Manchukuo and China in political, economic, cultural and other fields. The object is to secure international justice, to perfect a joint defense against communism, to create a new culture and to realize close economic cohesion throughout east Asia."

The statement indicated Japan considered China, with half her populace and virtually all seaports and large cities now under Japanese control, would become a protectorate like Manchukuo.

Bid to Deserters

"Even participation of the Kuomintang government would not be rejected" in the new East Asiatic regime provided the policies and personnel of Gen. Chiang's government are changed, the statement said.

Since previous official Japanese statements had said the Kuomintang would not be dealt with by Japan, the pronouncement was seen as a loophole which observers interpreted as a bid to Chiang's aides to desert him and make peace with Japan.

(Shanghai dispatches quoted a Japanese spokesman that circulation of vast amounts of "military scrip" was being encouraged in the occupied areas of China to help pay war expenses and start a new currency system for China.)

Insurgents Sink Ship In Sight Of British Coast

'Spain No Menace to Peace,' Says Chamberlain Naval War Reaches 'Doorstep' as He Speaks Commons Votes Confidence on Italian Pact Crowds Watch Cruiser Destroy Freighter

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Nov. 2.—For the first time since the World War, a naval battle was fought this evening in the North Sea. This time the trouble was not between the British and German fleets, but between two Spanish vessels.

The scene of the spectacular one-sided battle was 10 miles off Cromer on the Norfolk coast, about 150 miles northeast of London. After three hours of shelling, the Spanish merchant steamer Cantabria, bound from London to Leningrad, was set on fire and sunk by the motor ship Nadir, one of Gen. Franco's armed auxiliary cruisers. The majority of the Cantabria's crew of 37 were taken off by the Nadir; the rest were picked up by British boats and brought ashore tonight.

The intermittent Spanish naval war penetrated within sight and sound of England's chalk cliff just as Prime Minister Chamberlain was telling the House of Commons:

"The Spanish question is no longer a menace to the peace of Europe."

Late tonight the Commons, which had received only fragmentary reports of the naval action in Britain's own front yard, indorsed by a vote of 345 to 138 the Prime Minister's motion that he be authorized to put into operation the Anglo-Italian accord of last Easter, which provides, among other things, for British recognition of the Italian conquest of Abyssinia.

Chamberlain said both Premier Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler assured him they had no territorial ambitions in Spain. He asked that Abyssinia be recognized to reward Mussolini for having withdrawn 10,000 troops from Spain, and furthermore for having interceded with Hitler at Chamberlain's request, to bring about the Munich conference which dismembered Czechoslovakia without war.

War "Near Your Doorstep"

An unintentional postscript to the premier's speech flashed through the air by radio as English fishing vessels scurried away from the booming guns. Wirelessed one trawler to another:

"It's getting damn near your own doorstep."

Crowds of people standing on the lofty cliff of Cromer witnessed the sea struggle. Word had been received via Coast Guard radio services that a Spanish cruiser was firing on a merchant steamer 10 miles out.

Immediately townsfolk rushed for the cliff, and there as dusk descended they could barely discern the two vessels. From one came the boom of cannon. From the other ascended volumes of reddish smoke.

Captain, Family Saved

The crippled merchantman was on fire and heading for shore. The cruiser was flying the signal: "Heave to, or I fire," according to a radio message received from a passing British steamer, the Monkwood. The cruiser fired more than a dozen rounds in all and then pulled up alongside the fast-sinking merchant ship, whose crew took to boats.

Life savers from the Cromer Coast Guard station went out in a boat which brought ashore the captain of the blazing ship, Manuel Arguelles, his wife, Trinidad, his 6-year-old son, Ramon, his 8-year-old daughter, Begoma, and the second steward, Joaquin Valleso.

Capt. Arguelles said that his ship was the Cantabria (not the Cartagena as first reported), a vessel of 5,649 tons from the port of Santander, which was captured by the Franco forces. The Cantabria, which was known as the Alfonso Perez when it operated from Santander, but was reported chartered by the Mid-Atlantic Shipping Co. of London, left Gravesend last night in ballast for Immingham, near Grimsby, where it was to pick up a cargo for Leningrad.

The cruiser Nadir evidently had been tipped off as to the merchant ship's movements, for it was waiting for the Cantabria and waylaid her halfway from Grimsby.

Of the 37 people aboard the Cantabria, there were five children and three women. Eleven Spaniards, some of them wounded, were picked up by the British steamer, the Pattersonian, which brought them into Great Yarmouth. The rest of the crew were taken prisoner aboard the Nadir.

Rescuer Tells Story

Coxswain Henry Blogg, of the Cromer life boat, said: "As we approached the Cantabria we saw the captain on the bridge of his sinking vessel, his family around him. He was waving a lantern to guide us. The warship lay astern. We had to hurry to get the captain and his family off before his ship sank."

As the rescue work went on, the residents of Cromer were still peering seaward, through night glasses, in an attempt to follow to its finish the first North Sea battle since the war years. People were reminded of the days when German battle cruisers appeared off the east coast and shelled the Yarmouth and Lowestoft and other ports.

Just after the Spanish naval battle broke out Prime Minister Chamberlain rose in the House of Commons and began a long explanation as to why he wanted to put into effect without further delay the Anglo-Italian accord. Asked whether the agreement would become operative in a fortnight's time, as reported in the press, Chamberlain said the Italian and British governments would have to fix the date.

When the prime minister asserted that since the accord was signed at Rome last April 16, there have been no differences between the two countries, Labor members shouted "What about Spain?"

Duce's "Assurances"

Ignoring that interruption, Chamberlain recalled that when he was in Munich last month Mussolini volunteered the information he intended to withdraw 10,000 men, about half the Italian infantry forces, from Spain, and since then these men have actually been withdrawn.

"We have received from Signor Mussolini three definite assurances," the prime minister continued. "First of all that the remaining Italian forces of all categories will be withdrawn when the nonintervention plan goes into operation; secondly, that no further Italian troops will be sent to Spain; and, thirdly, that the Italian government never for a moment entertained the idea of sending compensatory air forces to

Insurgents Claim Victory in Battle Of 400 Planes

Hendaye, France, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The insurgents tonight claimed a victory in one of the biggest air battles of the Spanish civil war, fought by more than 400 planes over the Ebro Valley northeast of Gandesa.

Simultaneously, insurgent guns in the Guadarrama Mountains subjected Madrid to one of its worst shellings in its two years of siege, hammering the shattered city for more than two hours with 8 and 10 inch shells.

Reich, Italy Award Hungary Most of Demands on Czechs

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Nov. 2.—German and Italian mediators remapped the world war-created boundaries of Czechoslovakia today, awarding Hungary the major portion of land and population she claimed from the shrinking republic.

Official figures were lacking, but it was estimated Hungary gained 4,875 square miles with 860,000 inhabitants. Czechoslovakia already has lost Sudetenland to Reichsfuehrer Hitler and the Teschen region to Poland.

Czechoslovakia semiofficially protested tonight against terms of the Vienna agreement as "a crime of injustice which the great nations have committeed against us," it was reported from Prague.

Lambert Urges Housing From Private Capital

Differs With President On $5-to-$10 Renters 5,000,000 to Shelter

By Robert C. Albright.

Tapping of large corporate investment capital to finance low rental dwellings for 5,000,000 urban renters, unaided as yet by other housing programs, was recommended yesterday by Gerard B. Lambert, special adviser to the Federal Housing Administration.

He said the plan could be launched without additional legislation, "except to provide some incentive to attract private capital."

Elaborating on a new housing plan suggested by the President to accommodate urban renters in the $5 to $10 a room class, Lambert's proposals conflicted on important points with financing arrangements favored at the White House.

Would Lure Capital

Lambert, who claims authorship of the idea, said he thought it essential at first to interest big corporate investments. He said he would remove the speculative motive, but at the same time provide some tax exemption incentive to attract private capital to the new housing field.

The President said Tuesday he thought it would be better to organize small investors into a tremendous pool to finance the construction on a 3½ per cent basis. He opposed tax concessions to private capital. He said he was not specifically referring to "the Lambert plan."

The tall, gray mustached corporation executive, who came to the Federal Housing Administration five months ago to develop his proposals for large scale, low rental housing, said small investors might later come in, but he thought the field must first be opened by large private investment corporations. He said he knew of no other plan besides his own.

President Roosevelt, Lambert said, "appeared interested" in his proposals, but he could not speak for him. He said that he did not understand that the President completely barred his tax-exemption proposals, but merely said it was something he was trying to get away from.

Other investment incentives Lambert said, could be substituted for tax exemption, such as assured income from rentals, real estate tax concessions by local communities and mortgage insurance of the type now handled by the FHA.

But he believed it essential that large sources of private capital in big corporations "to break into a market that is not being supplied."

Lambert was introduced at a press conference by Stewart McDonald, Federal housing administrator, who said the FHA was "exploring" Lambert's idea and hoped to develop it.

McDonald Enthusiastic

"The FHA hasn't reached the class of people unable to pay $10 a month for a room," said McDonald. "Something is need to break that log jam. Mr. Lambert has developed something new, that is novel and ingenious, and it looks as though it would do just that."

McDonald estimated that between 51 and 55 of the urban population rent their dwellings, a large proportion of which "will always be renters and generally have the poorest housing."

He said a $30,000 housing experiment by Lambert in Princeton, N. J., provided the idea for solution of their problem. He said the $6.25 a month room rentals in the Princeton project were the "cheapest in America."

Lambert said his plan was based on eliminating first the speculative motive, but assuring an investment return of 4 per cent after slashing every possible charge above that which might add to room costs.

He said speculative capital could be eliminated by providing for return of the property to the community once the cost was amortized.

"The keystone is this," he said. "If you invest $100 in a building, and it pays you $6 a year, that will return your capital and 4 per cent on a diminishing investment. When the principal is paid back, you would take the building away from the investor and give it to the community."

In cutting room costs to a minimum, Lambert said he thought it was necessary to obtain an agreement with the community for reduction or elimination of real estate taxes until the debt is paid off, as is being done at Princeton. Using his Princeton project again as an illustration, he pointed out that the local housing authority taking over the property gave him 4 per cent, tax-exempt bonds.

If the tax-exempt feature is ruled out (and it is in sharp conflict with Administration proposals to abolish tax-exempt securities), Lambert said, the assured monthly return on such an investment should in itself operate as an incentive.

Green Backs Rep. Mead for Copeland's Seat, Calls His Record '100 Per Cent Favorable'

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, declared that "the highest and best interests of working men and women and all their friends in New York will be served through election of Representative James M. Mead to the United States Senate."

MEAD

Green wrote that to George Meany, president of the New York State Federation of Labor.

Mead is running on the Democratic ticket for the unexpired term of the late Senator Copeland. Senator Wagner (Democrat), running to succeed himself, also has been indorsed by Green.

The A. F. of L. president said Mead's record was "100 per cent favorable."

Madison, Wis., Nov. 2 (AP).—Chairman Harry R. McLogan of the Wisconsin Pension Department said today he would report to Arthur Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, in Washington, that Gov. Philip F. La Follette used a departmental list of old-age pensioners' names for political purposes.

McLogan, Democratic candidate for district attorney in Milwaukee County, announced he was prepared to make "a full report on this misuse of the list" to Federal officials who control allotments of social security funds to States.

Gov. La Follette, who last spring founded the National Progressives of America, is seeking his fourth term next Tuesday.

McLogan inferred the situation in Wisconsin was analogous to that in Ohio where the Federal Government has withheld contributions to old-age pensioners because, he said, the pensions had been made a political issue.

Indianapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Secretary of Commerce Roper, in Indiana to aid the Democratic campaign and talk at a businessmen's luncheon, said today he believes the coming election is having no retarding effect on business.

He pointed to new activity in the automobile industry and said there has been wide improvement in heavy goods industries.

Asked whether he thought President Roosevelt would be proposed for a third term, the secretary said:

"I think the answer to that should be delayed until after the election because such intermediary elections frequently develop leaders and some times eliminate leadership and also clarify issues."

At a Democratic rally at Fort Wayne tonight, Roper asserted the Republican Party "is out of step with the times" and invited "Progressive" Republicans "to continue to vote with the Democrats as they did in 1932 and 1936."

Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 2 (AP).—Overshadowed but undismayed by the Democrat-Republican struggle, five minor parties in Pennsylvania will thrust their principles before the voters next week.

The State's 4,650,000 registered voters will have their choice of seven tickets. On the ballot will be candidates of the Royal Oak, Socialist, Prohibition, Communist and Pathfinder parties.

Latest unofficial registration figures give Republicans 2,373,715 and Democrats, 2,216,170. The five minor parties shared a 66,938 registration.

Senators Find Fraud Evidence In Balloting in Jersey City

Evidence of wholesale illegal registration, illegal voting and dishonest counting of ballots in Jersey City and in Hudson County, N. J., led the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures to issue a warning yesterday that if this evidence should be substantiated on further investigation "whoever claims an election based upon fraudulent methods of the kind alleged will have to face the tribunal of the Senate to prove that his election is free from illegal or corrupt practices."

The committee, of which Senator Morris Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, is chairman, devoted four hours yesterday to charges made by W. Warren Barbour, Republican candidate for the Senate against William H. J. Ely, Democratic candidate who is backed by the Hague machine. Barbour alleged that "wholesale frauds" were contemplated in the general election on November 8 and set forth that he was reliably informed that between 35,000 and 40,000 fraudulent names would be inserted in the registry books of Hudson County and between 20,000 and 30,000 "floaters" would be permitted to vote on Election Day "to make a fraudulent vote total of between 60,000 and 80,000."

Aside from evidence which had been furnished the Senate committee by the investigating committee of the New Jersey Legislature, Senator Sheppard's men conducted an independent inquiry with the finding that the registration lists in Hudson County "are not properly purged and, as a result of this defect, there is a likelihood that the registration of voters and the tabulation of votes cast in the election will not be in accordance with the provisions of the law in that State."

Committee investigators had been furnished by the State commissioner of elections with the names of 38 persons assumed to be properly registered from two addresses in one ward of Hudson County.

Ten persons were located through the postal service as actually living where they were supposed to live. To the 28 other persons investigators sent registered letters.

Of these 28 letters, 26 were returned by the postal authorities with the report that one addressee was dead and 25 addressees were either unknown or failed to claim the letters. The remaining two out of the 28 signed for their registered letters.

Senator Sheppard's warning about a possible resultant election-contest in the Senate was addressed to "both Democrats and Republicans in New Jersey," but the Senator said later that he knew of no charges against Republicans.

Pennsylvania Inquiry Asked

Philadelphia, Nov. 2 (AP).—Ralph M. Bashore, Pennsylvania secretary of labor and industry and secretary of the Democratic State committee, today telegraphed Chairman Sheppard, of the Senate Campaign Expenditures Committee that "voters registration lists of Delaware County indicate that there is a conspiracy to violate the election laws."

Bashore urged an immediate investigation saying that under Pennsylvania law "it is impossible to remedy this situation at this time due to the fact that the registration lists were made available for inspection and investigation after the time had elapsed in which there could be redress in the courts."

Drought Hurts Grain as Sales Abroad Lag

'Real Efforts' to Export Wallace Expects Buyers Damage Here Spreads

As Secretary of Agriculture Wallace disclosed extraordinary Administration efforts to dispose of unprecedented surpluses from a bumper farm year, the Weather Bureau announced yesterday that a severe fall drought is damaging late plantings.

Extending from the Appalachian to the Rocky Mountains, the drought is spreading through a wide midwestern area. The Weather Bureau called it "one of the most severe and widespread fall droughts of record."

Although Forecaster C. A. Donnel predicted showers through much of this Midwest area in the next 24 hours, the bureau report indicated the drought already has taken a heavy toll of winter wheat.

Late Grain Deteriorates

One of the driest Octobers recorded was reported throughout the area, with eastern Nebraska, southern Minnesota, northern Iowa, much of Wisconsin, eastern New Mexico and the Texas Panhandle the only exceptions listed.

Except in these favored areas, early seeded wheat was reported at a standstill, and late planted grain was deteriorating.

Wallace meanwhile applied new pressure behind plans to dispose of surplus wheat and cotton crops piled up by favorable weather through three-fourths of the year.

Export Sales Lag

And he announced that a special committee will confer November 11 on how to distribute cotton mattresses to needy persons, under the recently proposed "two price system."

Wheat export sales slowed seriously in October, as the AAA waged a losing battle with foreign competitors for a "fair share" of the world wheat market.

But Wallace yesterday predicted a step-up in wheat sales abroad in the next few weeks.

"We are putting on some real sales efforts and believe we will line up some new customers soon," he said.

Meanwhile the marketing agreements division of the Agriculture Department reported sales of wheat and flour for export totaled 39,000,000 bushels from July 1 to October 15. Wallace has aimed at an export goal of 100,000,000 bushels of wheat under his subsidy plan.

Country Citizens Favor

The November 11 conference on distribution of cotton mattresses to needy persons will bring the first formal test of Wallace's "two price plan" for selling surplus products to low-income groups at a price below the regular consumer level. Wallace told reporters yesterday there was "unusual pressure" in the country for the system.

Little Business, Green Assail Labor Act

Board Visits President King Favors Changes Calls Law 'Ambiguous'

By the Associated Press.

Insistent demands for alteration of the Wagner labor act to make its operation less one-sided were renewed last night, despite the National Labor Relations Board's flat opposition to change.

Headed by Chairman J. Warren Madden, the board visited President Roosevelt to discuss the question, expected to be one of the hottest issues of the next Congress. Madden said he and his colleagues, Edwin S. Smith and Donald Wakefield Smith, told the Chief Executive that "we don't think the act needs amendment."

Later, President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, one of the strongest advocates of revision which would curtail the board's powers, said:

"Because of maladministration by the National Labor Relations Board we thnk it imperative that the act be amended."

Little Business Seeks Change

The federation supports the principles behind the act, which guarantees free collective bargaining rights to labor, outlaws employer interference with unions, and bans other "unfair labor practices." But federation leaders contend that the labor board, which administers the act, has tended to favor the C.I.O.

Similarly employers have argued that the act weights the scales in favor of labor and against employers. The American Federation of Little Business, in a statement issued yesterday, urged amendment of the act "to put an end to the board's power to act as prosecutor, judge and jury, to permit employers as well as employes to invoke its aid, and to extend and develop greater reliance upon the processes of mediation."

The United States Chamber of Commerce and Donald R. Richberg, former NRA administrator, have taken a similar position.

C. I. O. Officials Silent

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, one of the few legislators now on Capitol Hill, said he believed the act was "ambiguous and in some respects uncertain."

"In my opinion," he added, "it has not justified the high hopes of many who supported it. I am inclined to think the attitude of Mr. Green and the attitude of many others who are favorable to proper legislation dealing with labor justify re-examination of the law with a view to making it workable . . ."

Opposition of the C. I. O. to all proposals to amend the act is reaffirmed in a pamphlet just published by the C. I. O. under the title, "Why the Wagner Act Should Not Be Amended."

Dies Testimony On Farmer-Labor Party Assailed

Minneapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Paul Y. Anderson, Washington correspondent, criticized an investigation by the Dies committee, in which testimony was given purporting to show communistic influence in the Minnesota Farmer-Labor Party, in a special radio broadcast tonight.

Speaking for the Minnesota Working Newspapermen's Committee, directly from Washington, Anderson described the testimony of six Minnesota witnesses before the committee as "an effort to smear the Farmer-Labor Party."

He attacked the Dies committee as "a group given $25,000 by Congress to investigate un-American activities, but which instead had turned to baiting candidates favorable to the New Deal.

"They attempted to smear Gov. Murphy of Michigan the same week they staged their show against Gov. Benson (Farmer-Labor) of Minnesota, and used the same tactics against California," Anderson said. "It is my honest belief they have not the slightest intent to investigate un-American activities."

Pennsylvania Voters Here in Rally Tonight

Pennsylvania old-line Republicans and New Deal Democrats will rub elbows at a political rally of the Pennsylvania Democratic Club tonight at the Willard.

Ramsey S. Black, Third Assistant Postmaster General, and Henry Harner, solicitor for the Pennsylvania State Authority, will speak. Schedules for the special election trains which will carry Pennsylvania voters residing in the District to their home State November 8 will be announced.

Committee Is Planned On Infant Diarrhea

Health Officer George C. Ruhland said yesterday he would appoint a committee of hospital officials and physicians to study methods to advance the treatment of infectious diarrhea in new-born infants.

Physicians for the committee are to be selected from the local medical societies. Health officials yesterday met to discuss preventive methods against the disease. Several infants died from it recently, it was reported. Dr. Ruhland stressed there was no cause for alarm.

400 Italian Catholics Give Spaghetti Dinner

Four hundred parishioners of Holy Rosary Italian Catholic Church dined last night on spaghetti, marking the first function of its kind held in the recently completed paris hall at Third and F streets northwest. It will be repeated tonight from 5 to 9.

Catherine Passero headed the committee in charge of the dinner. Assisting were Mrs. Joseph Storti, Mrs. T. Segreti, Mrs. Mary Peretti, Miss Tilli Maisti and Miss Christine Mosca.

Justice Hughes May Testify in Widow's Case

U. S. Sues Mrs. Imbrie Husband Murdered Was Secret Agent

Chief Justice Hughes may shortly be summoned to testify against the Government in District Court by Mrs. Katherine Gillespie Imbrie, whom the State Department is suing for $1,366.11 she claims her husband spent on secret missions in the Near East for big American concerns. Her husband later was murdered on duty and honored as a hero.

Hughes was Secretary of State when Maj. Robert W. Imbrie was on detached service. Mrs. Imbrie's answer, filed yesterday in District Court, said that in this period Hughes sent Imbrie, in official secret code, an authorization to open headquarters in Angora, Turkey, from which to carry out his confidential work.

The Government sued Mrs. Imbrie as executrix two years ago, claiming that the $1,366.11 was money for which he turned in expense vouchers which were not approved by the auditors. The answer yesterday disclosed for the first time that Maj. Imbrie was an important instrument of the American High Commission in Turkey 18 years ago, and that, while detached from his official connection as vice consul, he was active throughout the Near East in behalf of American industrial and other interests.

Couldn't Reach Sebastopol

Attorneys Royal T. McKenna and Henry J. Balzer drafted the answer in which Mrs. Imbrie acknowledged the bond made by her husband when he became vice consul in Constantinople April 20, 1920. He was ordered to Sebastopol October 1, 1920, but the conditions of the country were such at the time that it was impossible for him to get there.

Admiral Mark L. Bristol then asked that Maj. Imbrie be assigned to help the high commission by "gathering information" and, Mrs. Imbrie contends, he was so assigned. She declared Commissioner Allen W. Dulles ordered him to inspect Russian refugee camps at Gallipolis and Lemos.

Then, she said, Maj. Imbrie was instructed to carry out "confidential missions" relating to Standard Oil Co. interests in Anatolia and properties of the American Tobacco Co. in Angora. He was instructed not to use his official title in carrying out these missions, she said.

Hughes Sent Orders

Secretary Hughes sent him coded orders to set up the base in Angora. "I have a copy of this dispatch," Balzer said, "and if the Government refuses to admit it was sent, I may subpoena Chief Justice Hughes."

"There is no comment to be made," the Chief Justice said last night when told of the answer and its disclosures.

Mrs. Imbrie contends that the money her husband did not account for was spent in these confidential assignments.

Imbrie also received both oral and written instructions from Henry P. Fletcher, later Ambassador to Italy, the answer said.

After taking part in the Lausanne conference, Maj. Imbrie was sent to Persia, where a mob of native fanatics murdered him in the streets of Teheran in June, 1924. The American Government demanded of the Persian government $60,000 indemnity for the widow, $110,000 to pay for a cruiser to bring the body home, a guard headed by two generals and a salute of 11 guns.

Nine years later, the widow, who had resumed a prominent place in Washington society, entertaining at her home at 1016 Sixteenth street northwest, was accorded a place of honor at ceremonies at which Secretary of State Stimson dedicated a tablet to heroes of the foreign service.

Twelve years later she was sued for the $1,366.11.

35 Veteran Employes of Old C. & O. Canal To Keep Their Jobs as Park Service Takes Over

Post Staff Photos.

Among the 35 canal workers who will keep their jobs since the Government has taken over the historic waterway are J. H. Speaker (left), oldest employe, who has been with the firm 50 years and is 88 today, and Charles S. Stewart (center), also of 50 years' service. They are shown with Mrs. Speaker. Inset is Mrs. Frances J. Worthington, who has been in the Georgetown office 15 years and also will have a new boss, the National Park Service

All 36 Offered Same Posts, but One Retires J. H. Speaker to Carry On Despite 88 Years Finnan Declares Their Aid Is in Public Interest

Thirty-five employes of the old Chesapeake and Ohio Canal will receive notification today that Uncle Sam needs their services in connection with maintenance and operation of the historic waterway between Georgetown and Cumberland, Md.

Letters to this effect will go out from offices of the National Park Service, which is to supervise restoration of the old canal.

Secretary Ickes ordered that all 36 workers be retained, but Albert Sahli of the Georgetown office, announces he is ready to retire. He has been with the canal 40 years.

Mrs. Frances J. Worthington, who has been with the Georgetown office for only 15 years, however, will report to a new boss—C. Marshall Finnan, superintendent of the National Capital Parks.

"I think it is nice the old employes are to be retained, but I don't know whether I'm thrilled to be moving from this office. Most of our records have already gone, but it's hard to teach an old dog new tricks," Mrs. Worthington said yesterday.

The 35 employes affected by the order are scattered all along the old transportation system. Most of them are lock tenders and will remain at their stations under the new regime—despite their advanced years.

Oldest in point of years is J. H. Speaker, who is today celebrating his eighty-eighth birthday and who has been tender of Lock 14 at Cabin John, Md., for 35 years. With his close neighbor, 76-year-old Charles S. Stewart, who has been with the canal 50 years, Speaker yesterday made a jubilant inspection tour of the old canal route near his home.

Happy that he can keep the home in which he has lived since 1913, Speaker does not want people to get the idea the canal is going to be what it once was.

"This is going to be just for pleasure. They're making a park of it. That's nice, but it's not going to be the same as the commercial travel and freight that used to go by here," he said.

Mrs. Speaker was elated over prospects that the ditch might again have enough water in it for fish.

"We'll move back home now, too. We've been staying down here at Lock 11 with Mr. Stewart because the bridge to our house gave way, and the doctor could not get in to visit Mr. Speaker. I've been going back up there almost every day to see about our things and to give a look at the lock," she said.

All three were pleased with the thought that more visitors can now be expected. They recalled the days when "somebody was passing all the time." For the past year, they admitted, however, their life has been "rather full of newspaper reporters."

"We've got so we know just what they want to know, and we always tell them," Mrs. Speaker said.

Other nearby workers include S. Pennifield, 80, who has been covering Locks 1 to 4 at Georgetown for many years and has been with the canal for a half century; S. Singaforce, 85, at Jefferson, Md., who has also served the company a half century; Charles Shaffer, 82, who for 45 years has been at Lock 7, near Glen Echo, and will stay at his post.

Dolly Vardon Under Suspicion

Accused of being as bad a pest, in her own distinctive manner, as the boll weevil, Johnson grass and women who wear tall, vertical hats in movies, the Dolly Varden trout will soon be vindicated—or condemned.

The Bureau of Fisheries has launched an experimental tagging program in the salmon spawning grounds off the Alaskan mainland, its purpose being to determine conclusively whether this species of trout is a major threat to Chinook, Sockeye & Co., or only a small-fry interloper.

"There is no doubt," commented Elmer Higgins, chief of the bureau's scientific division, "that Dolly Varden eats salmon fry (young 'uns) and eggs. But practically all fish are cannibals, for that matter.

"By the tagging method we hope to find out whether this variety of trout actually destroys nests of salmon eggs and makes a diet specialty of the fry. Also to determine just how extensively the trout is distributed."

Alaska, whose salmon is a multi-million dollar industry, is so vexed with the Dally Varden trout that for several years now it has paid a bounty on their tails.

Elizalde Denies Court Jurisdiction

Joaquin M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippine Commonwealth, yesterday told District court that his right to his post is a question which can be decided only by the House of Representatives, and asked the court to dismiss the challenge filed by Porfirio U. Sevilla, of New York.

Sevilla recently asked the court to enjoin Elizalde from acting as commissioner, claiming he was a citizen of Spain until two months ago and that he was otherwise unqualified.

Elizalde added that Sevilla had no right to bring the suit.

Mrs. Stinson's Suit Sped to Save Her Mind

She Seeks Annulment Trial in December Doctors Back Her

Her appeal that the District Court save her mental health yesterday won the wealthy Mrs. Lola M. Stinson early trial of her suit for annulment of her Bar Harbor marriage to Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, socially prominent artist and former Government official.

The trial, which was not docketed until late next year, was moved up to December after she pleaded that she was in a "depressed and obsessed state, due largely to the pending litigation." Supporting her claim were statements of Drs. Roger S. Cohen and John E. Lind, psychiatrists, and Drs. John C. Reisinger, Alexander L. Anderson and William E. Clark.

Mrs. Stinson also asked the court to advance trial of her case against the National Savings & Trust Co. and two attorneys by which she seeks to terminate a trust and to recover $27,000 she says she gave her husband.

Until her marriage September 27, 1937, Mrs. Stinson was Mrs. William Livingston Crounse, widow of the writer. She was declared sole heir to his $700,000 estate by the District Court December 16, 1925. As "Pepita Crounse" she was the author of two books of poems, "Through Remembered Windows" and "Fold of Dreams." From these and other writings she was well known in society and literary circles here and in Bar Harbor. She has lived here 25 years.

Less than a month after the wedding she and Stinson parted, on October 17, 1937, and last May she sued to annul the marriage. Stinson denied all her allegations.

Stinson studied civil engineering at Columbia University and became an attorney in the Latin-American division of the State Department. He has exhibited pictures in the Corcoran Art Gallery and in New York, Philadelphia and Chicago. He and Harriet McKee were divorced in March, 1937, shortly before he married Mrs. Stinson.

Scheduled Flights Across Atlantic Begin in Spring

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Scheduled commercial flights across the Atlantic Ocean under the American flag will begin next April, William H. Coverdale, president of American Export Lines, Inc., announced today. The line will run from New York, Baltimore and Boston, to Paris, via the Azores and Bordeaux, thence to Berlin, Rome, Athens and Alexandria.

Following experimental flights carrying express and mail, the company, through its wholly owned subsidiary, American Export Airlines, Inc., plans to create a non-stop, New York to Paris passenger service, he added. Pan-American Airways is co-operating in the plans.

Brig. Gen. Naylor, War Division Chief, To Retire Nov. 30

NAYLOR

Brig. Gen. William K. Naylor, World War Chief of Staff of the Thirty-third Division, Illinois National Guard, will retire from active duty November 30 upon reaching the statutory retirement age of 64, the War Department announced yesterday.

During the War he participated with the Thirty-third Division in the Somme and the Meuse-Argonne offensives.

Since the Armistice he has been an instructor at the General Service Schools, Fort Leavenworth, Kans., and the Army War College here.

A former Assistant Chief of Staff for Military Intelligence here, Gen. Naylor commanded the Fifteenth Infantry in Tientsin, China, from 1924 until 1926 and three years later was made chief of staff of the Second Corps Area, Governors Island, N. Y., for a four-year term.

Gen. Naylor has been commander of the Tenth Brigade at Fort Benjamin Harrison, Ind., since 1933.

Friends and Foe Of Group Health Address Jury Here

Friends and a foe of the group practice of medicine yesterday appeared before the extraordinary grand jury which is hearing the Government's charges that the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society waged an unlawful campaign against Group Health Association, Inc.

Dr. William C. Woodward, of Chicago, director of the A. M. A. bureau of legal medicine and legislation, entered the grand jury room with his brief case bulging with papers. It was understood that these were records of the A. M. A. which the grand juors spent all yesterday afternoon studying in a secret conference.

Dr. Woodward formerly was District health officer. Recently he wrote for the A. M. A. official journal a criticism of group health movements.

The first two members of G. H. A. to testify appeared yesterday, Mr. and Mrs. William Anderson, who pay $5 a month for clinical treatment by the Government workers' group.

3 More Men Seized in Drive On Drug Ring

2 Taken in New York
One in South Carolina
Carried Dope From D.C.

Smashing of a huge narcotics ring, launched here Tuesday in a series of raids resulting in the arrest of seven suspects, yesterday was carried into New York and South Carolina, where three more men were seized, including another ringleader and a businessman.

While District police were closely questioning the three women and four men being held under high bail for conspiracy to violate the narcotics act, Treasury Department agents made two raids yesterday in New York City and arrested George Birdwell, 38, of Brooklyn, and G. M. Reed, 40, of Manhattan.

Reed was said to be head of the New York division of the syndicate.

Maj. Garland Williams, chief of the New York narcotics bureau, said that the two men were charged with supplying heroin and morphine to headquarters here, which served as the distribution center for a flourishing trade with addicts in Southern cities.

The third man was captured in Rock Hill, S. C., where he had been trailed by Federal agents. The prisoner had left Washington with a supply of drugs Sunday, it was revealed yesterday by Lieut. Joe Shimon, head of the Washington police pickup squad, who has taken a leading part in closing in on the syndicate since the first clew to its operations was uncovered last June.

Police conducted an all-day grilling of the seven suspects and four witnesses, two men and two women. A fifth witness, also taken into custody during the raids on four richly furnished apartments here, was released. The man arrested in South Carolina yesterday was being returned to Washington by Federal agents. Police said he was a prominent Rock Hill businessman.

Counterfeiting Suspected

Meanwhile, Secret Service agents had joined the case, which had been planned and carried out by the police pickup squad, Narcotics Bureau agents of the Treasury Department, and postal inspectors. It was believed that the Washington headquarters not only served as a clearing house for the drugs, but also for counterfeit money.

Police officials declared that the ring, which had been operating for about a year, handled about $1,500 worth of dope each week, sent from New York in bulk by mail, then cut into smaller quantities for redistribution.

The raids Tuesday followed intensive investigation. The first clew was discovered in June during the capture of "Little Bennie" Ertel, wanted in the murder of a New York policeman. Besides a shipment of drugs, raiding officers confiscated loaded dice and decks of crooked cards.

Under High Bond

Alleged to be leader of the gang here is John A. Johnson, 35, who has served a term for passing bogus money. He is being held under $20,000 bond, as are George A. Brawley, 29, no address, and Frederick Brannon, 53, Thirteenth and L street northwest.

Held under $10,000 each are Raymond E. Price, 38, 215 Ninth street; Fannie Maggie, 34, 1009 ninth street northwest; Margaret Histon, 28, of 735 New Jersey avenue northwest, and Blanche Brawley, 30, no address.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Washington police, last night announced plans to create a racket squad, modeled after the one now operating in New York City, to be headed by Lieut. Joe Shimon, who as head of the pickup squad led the police narcotics investigation.

The plan, to be discussed today by Maj. Brown and Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, calls for merging of the pickup, narcotics, and fugitive squads, with additional detectives to be added from the precincts. The action follows a number of moves by Thompson to increase the personnel of the overworked pickup squad.

Shimon, at 34, is youngest lieutenant on the force. He won distinction in several cases resulting in the wiping out of burglary and robbery gangs in the city.

on the lookout for the ruse for several months.

The indictment charges Mrs. Leifer and her husband on three counts. The first alleges that they violated the tariff act of 1930 and the Federal narcotics law by importing heroin into the country. The second count charges violation of Title 21 of the United States code by concealing and transporting heroin, and the third charges conspiracy to violate the tariff and narcotic laws of the United States.

The prayer books were prepared in Paris, Scileppi explained. The covers were slit and a cellophane envelope containing two ounces of heroin were introduced inside each. After the covers had been carefully closed so as to show no signs of tampering, the books were then packed two in a container and forwarded to an accomplice in Jerusalem, whose identity, Scileppi said, has not yet been ascertained. It is believed that Leifer forwarded some of the books directly to the United States.

The books were mailed to various Brooklyn addresses. The indictment charges that the defendants rented rooms at these addresses under fictitious names and that they were thus able to receive the heroin-loaded prayer volumes. Federal officials declined to reveal how they learned that the heroin was coming into the country.

In Paris, at the time of his arrest, Leifer claimed that the books were for his Brooklyn coreligionists. Mrs. Leifer explained that her husband had no congregation and that he was a "private" Rabbi. The title of "Grand Rabbi" is a self-designated one, according to the Jewish Theological Seminary of America.

Mrs. Leifer was held in $15,000 bail for trial on November 21.

nati, asked the union to call off its strike.

"We do not intend to have our people murdered by a lame duck Governor of the State of Ohio who has proven himself to be America's notorious No. 1 strikebreaker," he wired Sam Sponseller, C.I.O. organizer here. He recommended that striking employes "return to work in orderly fashion."

Davey termed John L. Lewis, C. I. O. chairman, the "most dangerous man in America." He said the C. I. O. planned a series of strikes after he retires as Governor in January. Ohio C. I. O. leaders denied they had such plans. Sherman H. Dalrymple, leader of the United Rubber Workers at Akron—where Davey said the union planned tie-ups—called the Governor "a liar."

Lewis, for months at odds with Davey, joined in the fray.

"I think he (Davey) is too much of a poltroon to shoot down strikers again," Lewis said in Washington. "If he does, he will be a blood-thirsty fool in addition to being a rascal in public office." He called Davey " a lackey of the special interests in opposition to labor."

Steel Strikers Split

Cleveland, Nov. 2 (AP).—A group of C. I. O. "Little Steel" strikers returned to work at Republic Steel Corporation's Upson division today over protests of a plant union which claims to represent a majority of the employes.

Police stood guard to prevent any clash as the C. I. O. participants of 1937's "siege of Little Steel"—some of whom reported they were evicted yesterday by the rival faction—presented cards from the company authorizing their entrance.

President Roosevelt will wind up the Lehman campaign with a speech Friday night. Will his address switch votes? In a race as close as this one it might have a decisive influence, particularly in the middle income group, which is so evenly divided in sentiment.

Wagner Running Well Ahead of O'Brian for Senate

Senator Robert F. Wagner, the author of the Wagner labor act, is running well ahead in his campaign for re-election. He leads nearly 3 to 2 at this time over his Republican opponent, John Lord O'Brian.

But Democrat James M. Mead, who is running for the Senate seat vacated by the death of Senator Royal Copeland, is facing a close contest with Edward Corsi, Republican. At the present time the two candidates are running about even, with Mead slightly in the lead.

NYA Worker Faces Assault Trial Monday

Streamlined justice will bring Ralph R. Haynes, 23, to trial Monday ten days after two women charged that he attempted criminal assaults on them near their homes here.

Assistant District Attorney Krouse is directing the proceedings which may establish a record for prosecutions in the District. "The defendant will be given every right guaranteed him by the law," Krouse said last night, after Haynes was indicted, "but this is one case that is not going to drag. We hope to stop the activities of these sex maniacs by a prompt conviction. I have interviewed all the witnesses and the Government is ready for trial."

Organizations supplying guards for plants in interstate commerce that were engaged in labor disputes would be included, it is believed, in the regulations applying to strike-breaking agencies.

Although it is not proposed to enact a prohibition on such agencies, they and all their operatives would be subject to Federal license. Strict qualifications for licensing would be set up; and even after the agencies and their men obtained the licenses, they would be forbidden actually to engage in strikebreaking, to interfere with collective bargaining or picketing or intimidate the striking employes or their families.

Would Outlaw Guards

In practice the only thing these agencies could do, under the proposal, is to supply guards to a plant whose owner had complied with the National Labor Relations act but which was nevertheless threatened with damage or destruction. A Federal bureau even then would have power to supervise employment of the guards. (Only plants engaged in interstate commerce would come within the purview of Federal law.) The suggested legislation probably would prohibit the transportation of strikebreakers for any cause across State lines.

Detective agencies would likewise be subject to registration with a Federal bureau. Managers of detective agencies and their operatives would be licensed, and it is believed they would be forbidden to spy upon company employes or to interfere in any way with collective bargaining, picketing or other legitimate labor activities. Similar regulations would apply to company police.

Ban on Arsenals

The La Follette committee staff, it is understood, also is working upon sweeping restrictions on the use of arms by industrial concerns. Presumably arising out of revelations made in the Republic Steel and other inquiries, proposals will be made for limitations on the accumulation of arms. Such implements of warfare as machine guns and gas bombs will be denied to employers, it is believed.

Employers probably will be required to obtain licenses for the possession of small arms, and will be forbidden to furnish them to public officers, or to use them to interfere with collective bargaining or picketing.

The agency to administer the proposed legislation might be included in the Department of Labor, Department of Justice, National Labor Relations Board, or be set up as an independent organization.

Senators Robert La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, members of the committee, are expected to determine the final form of the proposals on their return to the Capital after next week's elections.

A parish social will be given by the Women's Guild of Transfiguration Episcopal Church tomorrow at the home of Mrs. Robert Funkhouser, 5315 Colorado avenue northwest, for benefit of the bazaar fund.

Roosevelt and Farley Split On Minnesota Governorship

Politics

porting Gov. Benson. The President wired:

"This is my reply to the telegram you and your associates sent me on October 29. Will you please advise them?

"I have read with great interest your telegram upon the character of the political campaign in Minnesota.

"Apart from every other consideration, it is encouraging to receive this further evidence that American newspapermen are taking an increasingly courageous and intelligent interest in the problems of government.

"If the political writers of Minnesota newspapers are inferring that I have deliberately withheld my approval or disapproved the candidacy of your progressive Governor for re-election, they are, of course, misinterpreting my attitude.

"I have repeatedly indicated the high esteem in which I hold Gov. Benson, and the interest I take in his efforts to develop liberal governmental policies in Minnesota.

"As a matter of ultimate good for the Nation, there is every reason why liberals throughout the Nation should be working this year in the closest of harmonious co-operation."

It was recalled that in 1936, when Mr. Roosevelt was running for re-election, he and the national chairman were said to have endeavored together to get the Democratic State candidates to withdraw in favor of the Farmer-Labor slate.

A short time ago when James Roosevelt, son of the President, was a patient at Mayo Hospital at Rochester, Minn., Gallagher headquarters released a telegram said to have been sent by James indorsing Gallagher and the other Democratic nominees. The telegram was promptly branded a fake.

Meanwhile, the Republican nominee for Governor, Harold E. Stassen, is said to be developing much strength against Benson.

Democratic Chairman Farley, speaking at Hartford, Conn., last night, urged the election of Senator Augustine Lonergan, and praised the Roosevelt foreign and national defense policies, declaring "there has been no attempt to bully the United States because the whole world knows we are too strong to be bullied."

He added that "for the first time in generations . . . the control of the people's government rests with the people. The power of Wall Street and the grip of ruthless financial combines has been broken. The enemies of President Roosevelt hate and vilify him, not because he has interfered with their legitimate rights, but because he has dared to raise his mighty voice to plead the cause of the laboring man, the farmer, the small businessman and the unemployed, the aged and the needy."

Senator Arthur Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, declared at a Newark, N. J., G. O. P. rally that, in the language of the Senate Expenditures Committee, "a free and unpolluted ballot is in danger." He pleaded for the election of former Senator W. Warren Barbour.

Vandenberg asserted that unprecedented powers had been given to President Roosevelt and said:

"He already has one foot in the door that leads to autocracy—and no amount of popular trust in his benevolence can blind a vigilant, liberty-loving people to the menace of these trends because the unbroken lesson of history asserts that when instruments of tyranny are once created, somebody always comes along to use them."

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, in a statement, went to the aid of Senator George McGill (Democrat), of Kansas, who is in a close race with former Gov. Clyde M. Reed, and criticized Senator Arthur Capper (Republican), of Kansas, for "switching his allegiance from the farmer to the Republican Party."

Wallace also criticized former Senator Dickinson, Republican opponent of Senator Gillette, declaring Dickinson is "in favor of big money control of the Republican Party" and predicting his defeat "if 90 per cent of the farmers vote."

The Republican call for an investigation of "relief in politics" last night bore the names of 25 Senate incumbents and candidates and 120 House incumbents and candidates. The statement said:

"Determined to provide and protect adequate relief for everyone in distress, we, the undersigned, pledge ourselves to demand and to seek unceasingly in the next Congress a sweeping investigation of political activities in connection with the Administration of all Federal relief agencies.

"We favor adequate relief for all in distress. It is for that we propose to do all in our power to expose and punish everyone playing politics with human misery. Our purpose is to safeguard relief administration against the corrupting and wasteful hand of the political spoilsman, so that the money appropriated for relief will go to those for whom it was intended. Our objective is to bring to account every relief administrator or supervisor who undertakes to influence the votes of relief beneficiaries as the price of the assistance given to them.

"We are moved to make this declaration by the evidence that Federal relief administration and funds are playing a distinct part in this year's elections presented by:

"1. Sworn statements testifying to efforts to dictate the manner in which relief beneficiaries shall vote that have been filed with the Senate committee investigating campaign expenditures.

"2. The pronouncement of that committee that its investigation of efforts to control and coerce the votes of relief beneficiaries in Kentucky revealed 'a deplorable situation' and facts that 'imperil the right of the people to a free and unpolluted ballot.'

"3. Indictments by grand juries investigating the spending of relief funds that charge illegal and criminal activities.

"4. Voluminous reports, many documented, published in reliable and reputable newspapers and periodicals citing instances of political coercion of relief beneficiaries.

"We are convinced the American people overwhelmingly will support our efforts to bring to light the truth about this situation, preparatory to a thorough house cleaning of those officials responsible for it. Only in that manner can we better care for those in distress."

Annual Capital Bridge Tourney Opens Today

Open to Outsiders Will Last 4 Days 5 Championships Up

By Marian Barre.

The Washington Bridge League's annual tournament for the contract championships of the District begins at 2:30 p. m. today at the Shoreham. A four-day program includes five championship events and two special one-session games. All games are open to outside competition and entrents from all over the country are flocking to the city.

The initial session of three separate events will be played today. A women's pair game is on the card this afternoon; mixed pairs and intermediate pairs this evening. The finals of the women's and the mixed pair contests will be held tomorrow. Intermediate players must wait until Saturday evening for the final decision in the amateur championship.

Trophies in competition include the Eynon Bowl, the Woodward Cup, the Capital Cup, the trophy of the Evening Star and the Columbia Cup. Washingtonians made a 100 per cent record in the tournament of 1937 by holding all trophies against visiting attack.

The American Contract Bridge League, national association of players, awards the titlists of the District tournament with national master points, which are similar to degrees in the educational world.

Mrs. E. B. Swanson, president of the local league, and Paul E. Golden, vice chairman of the tournament committee, will be in charge of arrangements. The illness of the chairman, Lieut. Comdr. W. A. Corley (retired), is a blow to the management. Tournament direction is under Russell J. Baldwin, of Cleveland.

Among the national celebrities who will play here this week are Dr. R. H. Ecker, of New York, present holder of the National Masters Individual; Harold B. Karp and Irwin Fisher, both of Baltimore, international winners of the 1938 World Bridge Olympic; Charles H. Goren, recently named as a life master of the A. B. C. L., and many others. The local defending champions are Mr. and Mrs. James H. Lemon, Mrs. M. R. West, L. R. Watson, jr., E. B. Connolly, Thomas Hamlin, Mrs. C. W. Boyce, Vic D. Zeve, Mrs. V. A. Clarke, Mrs. H. C. White and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Rosson.

Drought in Kentucky Declared at New High

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 2 (AP).—Gov. A. B. Chandler declared today the autumn drought had reached "unprecedented proportions" and urged precautions to forestall additional forest fires after reports came from southeastern Kentucky of widespread areas burned. Timber loss was estimated at $100,000.

Benson Aide Calls Red Tag Libelous

Minneapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Abraham Harris, editor of the Minnesota Leader, Farmer-Labor publication, and a leader in Gov. Elmer A. Benson's re-election campaign, today filed a $500,000 libel suit against four men and one publishing firm on a charge of defamation as the result of a book, "Communists or Catspaws."

Named as defendants are Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune; Ray P. Chase, former State auditor, author of the book; F. M. Steiner, Minneapolis business man and capitalist; E. L. Somerville, president of the Minneapolis Real Estate Board, and the Bureau of Engraving, Minneapolis publishing firm.

1939 Ford Cars' Cost To Be $5 to $20 Less

Detroit, Nov. 2 (AP).—The Ford Motor Co. announced tonight that its 1939 passenger car prices would be from $5 to $20 less than the corresponding 1938 machines. It added that truck price reductions would range up to $50.

2 Slain in Raid On Hangout of WPA Workers

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 2 (U.P.).—One policeman and the alleged owner of a "kitchen dive" were killed tonight and another officer was near death following an exchange of shots during a raid.

Patrolman Carl Rolf, 35, was killed outright and Alex Greski, 50, alleged owner of the establishment died within a half-hour in a hospital. The raid was one of a score upon establishments purportedly selling liquor to WPA workers and relief recipients.

Reported in critical condition at a hospital was Patrolman Edward Long, 40.

Rolf, Long and Officer T. C. O'Brien forced their way into the second-story tenement. O'Brien remained in one room as a lookout as his companions entered a darkened bedroom.

On hearing the shots, O'Brien entered the room and fired at Greski, fatally wounding him. Greski fired at O'Brien.

Rockefeller Center, A. F. L. Renew Contract

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—A union contract drafted last May by Rockefeller Center, Inc., and the Building and Construction Trades Council (A. F. of L.) was renewed for the year 1939 tonight.

The agreement, unique in labor relations, embraces the entire scale of workers without departing from the horizontal, or craft union, principle of the A. F. of L., although a number of unions are represented by the council.

Mrs. Barnett Freed In Home Dispute

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Anna Laura Barnett was released from jail today on her own recognizance after she had assured Federal Commissioner David B. Head she would not rty to regain possession of the mansion that belonged to the late Jackson Barnett, wealthy Creek Indian. Federal agents confiscated the home Sunday as a result of the Federal Courts holding her marriage to the wealthy Indian was illegal.

After her release, Mrs. Barnett went to a one-room apartment rented by her daughter, Maxine Sturgis, who previously had been released by Federal authorities. The women had been charged with resisting Federal officers.

S. F. Compton, Businessman, Musician, Dies

Was an Active Mason
A Prolific Composer
Funeral 3 P. M. Today

Samuel Francis Compton, 72, businessman, musician and composer, died Tuesday at the Masonic and Eastern Star home where he had lived for the past 17 years. He had been ill a short time.

Masonic funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. today at the S. H. Hines funeral home, Fourteenth and Harvard streets northwest. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

Mr. Compton had been active in Masonic circles, having been worshipful master of Myron M. Parker Lodge, F. A. A. M., and high priest of Capital Chapter and worthy patron of Bethlehem Chapter, O. E. S.

Music was Mr. Compton's hobby. For 12 years he had played clarinet in the District National Guard Band. He led choir at First Presbyterian Church, and sang in St. John's choir. He was a prolific composer of sacred, vocal and instrumental music.

He first came to Washington in 1894 to work temporarily at the Corcoran Gallery of Art. Subsequently he was assistant manager of Allegheny Coal Co. before establishing the printing firm of Compton & Co.

Two sons, Paul Leon and Samuel Raymond Compton, both of this city, survive, and three grandchildren.

Dr. J. W. Chappell Dies at 83; Rites Are Set Tomorrow

Dr. John W. Chappell, 83, of 3901 Albemarle street northwest, died at his residence yesterday after a short illness. Funeral services will be held at the Eldbrooke Methodist Episcopal Church, River road and Wisconsin avenue northwest, tomorrow at 3 p. m.

One of the oldest members in the District Medical Society, Dr. Chappell graduated from the Columbia Medical School in 1881. He was also president of the George Washington Medical Society in 1906 and 1907.

Surviving Dr. Chappell are his wife, Ida, a son, Lieut. Col. Sidney L. Chappell, of the United States Army Medical Corps, and a daughter, Mrs. Clara C. Brown. Burial will be in the Eldbrooke Cemetery, River road and Wisconsin avenue northwest.

Edward Stevens, Former Mission Leader, Dies at 73

Edward A. Stevens, director emeritus of Central Union Mission and well-known church worker, died yesterday at his home, 1804 Fourteenth street southeast. He was 73.

A native of Baltimore, Mr. Stevens came to Washington 48 years ago. He was for many years a machinist in the Navy Yard, where he was active in labor mediation. He was one of the original trustees of the Ninth street Christian Church, Ninth and D streets northwest, and past master of Hope Lodge of Masons.

He leaves his wife, Annie; three sons, Francis, of Lynchburg, Va.; Harvey and Richard, of Washington, and three grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 1:30 p. m. in Ninth street Christian Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Rites for Mrs. Page To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Helen Howe Page, 62, who died Tuesday of a heart ailment at her home, 3419 Mount Pleasant street northwest, will be held at the S. H. Hines funeral home at 10 a. m. today. Burial will be at Grace Episcopal Church, Woodside, Md.

Mrs. Page was an employe of the Census Bureau for a number of years, and a member of Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. She was born in Cincinnati, Ohio.

She leaves a daughter, Mrs. Robert L. Faris, of Pittsburgh; a granddaughter, Miss Jean Faris; a son, George N. Page, of Washington; a sister, Mrs. Marian Howe Price, Chevy Chase, Md.; four nieces, Mrs. Dorothy Hulsizer, Mrs. Lewis Conway, and Miss Marian Price, of Washington, and Mrs. Ben Clark, of Scarsdale, N. Y., and one nephew, Lieut. Walter H. Price, San Diego, Calif.

G-Man Tells Spy Jury Doctor Threatened Girl, But He Thought It Unnecessary to Arrest Him

Turrou Testifies
Names Dr. Griebl
Queried on Escape

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—The tale of a death threat was told today in the Federal court trial of three alleged German espionage agents.

Leon G. Turrou, former G-man, testified the threat was made in the New York FBI headquarters last spring while Miss Johanna (Jenni) Hofmann, 26, one of the defendants, and Dr. Ignatz T. Griebl, fromer Park avenue physician, were questioned about their alleged spy activities on behalf of the German government.

"Dr. Griebl told Miss Hofmann he would have her shot for the information she gave," Turrou said.

Just Warned Him

"Did you do anything about it?" he was asked.

"No," Turrou replied. "I just cautioned him not to threaten her again."

Fraulein Hofmann is alleged to have served as "pay-off" agent and courier for the ring. Dr. Griebl, a former United States Army Medical Reserve officer and German Bund leader, fled to Germany before his indictment was handed down by a Federal grand jury, before which he testified.

Turrou denied he had made any promises to Dr. Griebl if he would expose the spy ring, or that he had asked Dr. Griebl for money in return for a promise not to send him to prison.

Physician Warned
Expected to Return

A mysterious "spy code" match box seized from Dr. Griebl was introduced in evidence, prompting Fraulein Hofmann's attorney, George C. Dix, to question Turrou on Dr. Griebl's departure.

Disclaimed Code Knowledge

Turrou said Dr. Griebl swore he knew nothing about the code on the inner cover of the match book and explained it had been given to him by Karl Schlueter, a fugitive German agent, to be delivered to Eleanor Boehme, youthful Hunter College graduate.

Miss Boehme, who appeared as a Government witness yesterday, testified she unwittingly served as a messenger for German agents on several visits she made to the S. S. Europa while the liner was in port.

"Did you take Dr. Griebl into custody?" asked Dix, who repeatedly has charged that Turrou let Dr. Griebl escape in return for "putting the finger" on other agents.

Thought Arrest Needless

"We did not," Turrou said.

"Why?"

"We didn't think it was necessary. We told him to be in our office at 9 o'clock the next morning."

Sayre Decries 'Brute Force' Before Bishops

Nations Unspecified
10 Episcopalians Retire
4 Coadjutors Move Up

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Nov. 2.—Assistant Secretary of State Francis B. Sayre said tonight "the power of superior brute force will always be immediately conquering and temporarily profitable but a progressive civilization can be built only upon brains and self-restraint."

Sayre, who did not directly connect the assertion with recent European developments, addressed the House of Bishops of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

In executive sessions of the house, the resignations of ten bishops because of age or disability were accepted.

They were Bishop William L. Gravatt, of Wheeling, W. Va.; Bishop Ernest V. Shayler, of Omaha; Bishop George W. Davenport, of Easton, Md.; Bishop David L. Ferris, of Rochester, N. Y.; Bishop Irving P. Johnson, of Denver; Bishop Robert H. Mize, of Salina, Kans.; Bishop Theodore Dubose Bratton, of Jackson, Miss.; Bishop Warren L. Rogers, of Cleveland, Ohio; Suffragan Bishop John W. Nichols, of Shanghai, and Bishop James Craik Morris, of New Orleans.

Acceptance of the resignations meant automatic promotion for four bishop coadjutors. They were the Right Rev. Robert E. L. Strider, of Wheeling, W. Va.; the Right Rev. Bartel H. Reinheimer, of Rochester, N. Y.; the Right Rev. Fred Ingley, of Denver, and the Right Rev. William M. Green, of Jackson, Miss.

Spain in lieu of infantry forces now withdrawn."

Reassuring M. P.'s who fear that when the Spanish war is settled Italy will retain a foothold in the strategic Baleric Isles and Germany in Spanish Morocco, Chamberlain said:

"When I was at Munich I spoke on the subject of the future of Spain with both Herr Hitler and Signor Mussolini and both assured me that they had no territorial ambitions.

Franco's Neutrality

"When a little while ago, Europe was faced with the prospect of a major war, Gen. Franco made a declaration of neutrality."

The prime minister observed the September war scare had put the Spanish conflict in a new perspective and the nations of Europe, having escaped a catastrophic war over Czechoslovakia, were not likely to "knock their heads together" over Spain.

"In my own mind," Chamberlain said, "I am perfectly clear that the Spanish question is no longer a menace to the peace of Europe and, consequently, there is no valid reason why we should not take a step which, obviously, would contribute to general appeasement."

To Recognize Ethiopia

Chamberlain confirmed suspicions that Mussolini would receive recognition of his conquest of Abyssinia as a reward for his intercession with Hitler which led to the Munich peace of partition.

To those objecting to any legalization of aggression in Abyssinia, Chamberlain put the question: Were they prepared to withhold recognition in perpetuity? If so, he said, they would soon find themselves in isolation, as of all the countries of Europe, only two, Soviet Russia and Great Britain, have thus far restricted themselves as to de facto recognition.

The United States was not mentioned by Chamberlain, but the obvious inference was that Washington had the choice in going in isolation or following British foreign policy as to Abyssinia, as in other matters.

Follows French Lead

Chamberlain noted France was the latest country to recognize Italianized Abyssinia, the new French ambassador being accredited to the King of Italy and the Emperor of Abyssinia, and Chamberlain said Britain proposed to follow the same course and send new credentials to its Rome envoy.

The prime minister read messages from the prime ministers of Australia and South Africa, approving Britain's decision to make peace with Mussolini. Under cross-examination, Chamberlain admitted he had no message of any sort from the government of New Zealand. He passed over questions as to whether he had heard from Canada or Ireland.

Jailed Man Sues For Pension Profit

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (AP).—Earle E. Keynette, in jail awaiting the outcome of his appeal from conviction of bombing Harry Raymond, filed suit today to recover $60,000 from California's $30-every-Thursday pension plan.

Keynette, former head of the Los Angeles police spy squad, alleged he advanced money to Lawrence and Willis Allen to get the pension plan started, and stated he was to share equally with them in the profits. He also sued others connected with the plan.

Keynette estimated the Allens had received about $300,000 in contributions since September, 1937 and had made a net profit of about $30,000.

shortly after announcement of the Vienna agreement that "the decision of the conference is extremely painful, cruel and unjustified."

Ruthenia's Capital Lost

"Even regions where more than half the population is not Hungarian have been given to Hungary," it was said.

In negotiations before Rome and Berlin were called in to mediate, Czechoslovakia had agreed to cede 3,800 square miles without arbitration but the rest of Hungary's original demands—estimated as high as 8,000 square miles—were put up to the totalitarian powers for final decision.

Foreign Ministers Count Galeazo Ciano of Italy and Joachim von Ribbentrop of Germany in a short meeting today gave Hungary a wide strip of the territory she demanded, including Uzhorod, capital of autonomous Ruthenia, and the only railway connecting Ruthenia with Slovakia.

Censuses Conflict

In addition to losing Uzhorod, Ruthenia's capital and the seat of the Ukrainian Greek Orthodox Church, Czechoslovakia was shorn of Kosice, Munkacs, Lozonz and Leva, all populous cities.

The arbitrators chose an old census as the basis of the award. The latest 1930 census, according to Hungarian figures, showed the Hungarians were in the minority in these cities which, in spite of the new census, now become Hungary's. Hungarians asserted the cities originally were Magyar, but admitted they now were in the minority.

In the disputed region only Bratislava, on the Danube near the juncture of Czecoslovakia, Hungary and Germany, was left to the central Prague government along with the city of Nitra in southwestern Slovakia.

Both Czechoslovakia and Hungary agreed to accept the award as final and to start fulfilling it at once.

Occupation of the territory is to be started November 5 and completed November 10. A Hungarian-Czechoslovak committee was provided to work out the stages of occupation.

Minorities Protected

Czechoslovakia agreed to leave the lost territory in orderly condition, and to give the Hungarian minority in Bratislava the same rights as other minorities.

Hungary pledged that minorities in the ceded territory would be protected, and promised to aid adjustment of communcations between Ruthenia and Slovakia, which lost their only mutual railway.

German sources estimated that of the 860,000 persons in ceded territory 720,000 were Hungarian and the rest Slovaks, Ruthenians and Jews.

If trouble arises in carrying out the award and the two nations are unable to reach an agreement themselves, Hungary and Czechoslovakia agreed to empower Italy and Germany to arbitrate further.

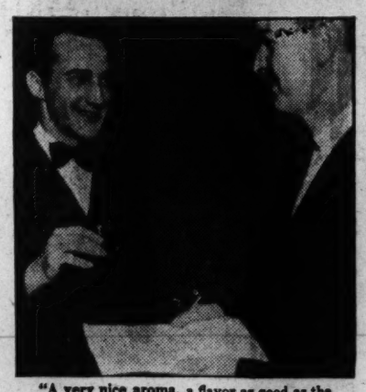
WE SAY OLD QUAKER BEST WAY TO SAVE MONEY ON WHISKEY



"A very nice aroma, a flavor as good as the best!" remarks T. B. Wilson, Druggist, to Investigator Anderson, after trying Old Quaker.

960 Out of 1,000 Men—in Dramatic Survey—Confirmed Our Belief that Old Quaker—Now 3 Years Old—is an Amazing Bargain at This Price!

● You'll welcome this news! You can save money on whiskey without cutting corners on quality. Why do we say so? Because the judgment of 960 out of 1,000 men is that Old Quaker—now 3 years old—is a mild, ripe, full-bodied whiskey. But—we call your attention to the fact that Old Quaker sells at an amazing low price.

We actually sought out 1,000 men—from 22 states—asked them to try Old Quaker and give us their unbiased opinion. "Smell it!", we said. "Taste it! Swallow a drink of it! Then, tell us what you think!"

Not one of these men knew the name, age or price of the whiskey he was trying. Yet 960 praised its smoothness, mellowness, mildness. So again, we say:—Look at Old Quaker's rock-bottom price.

What This Means To You

If these 960 out of 1,000 men are right, then Old Quaker has got something you want! It's got fine quality at a low price! Make this same simple trial yourself! Convince yourself that Old Quaker is good news for every thrifty drinker!

"It's mild—that's what I like about it," says Dan J. Negas, Atlanta Hotel Man, of Old Quaker.

Trade Isolation Vain Hope, Says Messersmith

Sees Dangers Ahead
Urges Preparation
Warns on Propaganda

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Assistant Secretary of State George S. Messersmith said today "there is no such thing in this modern world as political isolation which does not result in a corresponding degree of economic isolation."

Addressing the twenty-fifth annual convention of the National Foreign Trade Council, he continued:

"There is not phase of our business, economic, social, cultural and political life which will not be affected in a greater or lesser degree by events beyond our frontiers. These are facts which we cannot escape and we will do well to recognize them in time."

Warns of Difficulties

Foreign relations of the United States, Messersmith said, "are going to be very much more perplexing and we are going to have increasingly difficult problems. We must be prepared to protect our interests whenever they may be attacked as the result of the adoption by any states of policies based on force and coercion, or of endeavors to propagate their ideas beyond their borders . . ."

Dr. Alexander V. Dye, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, told the convention the United States held a commanding position in Latin-American trade in 1937 and the first half of 1938.

The trade official, however, warned American businessmen and industrialists that the easing of the crisis in Europe will allow European countries to give more attention to Latin-American trade.

"An over-all calculation," Dr. Dye said, "shows that the Latin-American republics purchased more from the United States in 1937 than from Great Britain, Italy, Germany and Japan combined. The share of the United States amounted to 34.4 per cent as compared with 14.1 per cent for Germany, 12.6 per cent for Great Britain, 2.7 per cent for Japan and 2.6 per cent for Italy.

"The United States was also the best customer of Latin-America, taking 31.1 per cent of the aggregate exports of the 20 southern republics. For fully three-quarters of a century the United States has regularly provided the largest and most dependable outlet for the products of most of the Hispanic American countries.

Share 13 Per cent

In discussing the economic consequences of isolation, Messersmith—former consul general in Berlin and Ambassador to Austria until shortly before the time of German annexation—said:

"At the end of 1937, the United States was the world's greatest exporter, with merchandise shipments abroad valued at $3,345,000,000. Purchases of foreign essential raw materials and other imports necessary to the maintenance of our industry and commerce were valued at $3,084,000,000.

"In other words, during this most recent year . . . the foreign trade of the United States represented 13 per cent of the total export and import trade of the world. How futile it is to argue, as some do, that a volume of trade such as this does not have a vital bearing upon our internal life and upon the standard of living of our population.

"It is worth while to refer to those who are tempted to dismiss the importance of foreign trade with the statement that after all our expjorts only represent 7½ per cent of total production of movable goods in the United States. This argument entirely ignores the importance of foreign trade to our agricultural and industrial interests and to specific areas of the country.

"To see this picture more clearly, it must be realized that last year 36 per cent of our tobacco, 44 per cent of our cotton, 18 per cent of our lard, 36 per cent of our dried fruit, 49 per cent of our naval stores, 40 per cent of our lubricating greases, 12 per cent of our radios, 23 per cent of our office equipment, 10 per cent of our automobiles and 35 per cent of our aircraft went into foreign markets."

The council, in its final declaration of the convention, turned its back on economic isolation, saying this country's foreign trade is "an indispensable part of our national economy." Continuing its support of the Administration's reciprocal trade agreements program, the council said this is "a most effective instrument for the expansion of world trade."

On other topics, the council urged Congress to extend the life of the Export-Import Bank of Washington for not less than 5 years; reaffirmed its belief that the conduct of foreign relations under the neutrality act should be left to the discretion of the executive branch of the Government; affirmed its conviction "that a return to stabilized currencies at a fixed ratio is one of the urgent demands for improvement of world economy," and urged the forthcoming Pen-American conference at Lima, Peru, to "assert the unity of interest in the Americas and support policies which will release in practice the ideals which are comprehended in inter-American cooperation."

BACKACHE, LEG PAINS MAY BE DANGER SIGN

Of Tired Kidneys

If backache and leg pains are making you miserable, don't just complain and do nothing about them. Nature may be warning you that your kidneys need attention.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 2 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait. Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Navy Opens Bids on Construction of 3 Dreadnaughts

Navy to Ask Bids on New Rigid Airship

Smaller Than Planned
Battleship Costs Rise
About $75,000 Each

Experiments with monster airships, with which it has been notably unlucky in the past, will be resumed by the United States Navy.

Yesterday the Navy announced it would ask bids on a rigid airship not more than 325 feet long and with a gas capacity of 1,000,000 cubic feet. At the same time, bids were opened on three new battleships which indicated they would cost considerably more than the official preliminary estimates of $70,000,000 each.

The proposed airship, one-third the size of the 3,000,000 cubic feet authorized in the billion dollar fleet expansion act, will be even smaller in comparison with the ill-fated Macon and Akron, each of which was 785 feet long and of 6,500,000 cubic feet capacity. The decommissioned Los Angeles, built in Germany just after the World War, is of 2,470,000 cubic feet.

May Be All-Metal

The size of the proposed new lighter-than-aircraft led observers yesterday to speculate on the possibility the Navy might be contemplating an all-metal ship. Builders of this type of craft told Congress during consideration of the expansion bill they were unwilling to undertake an airship of the authorized maximum size.

Informed of the Navy's proposal, Dr. Theodore Troller, director of the Guggenheim Airship Institute at Akron, Ohio, said, "as an engineer I am sorry" the new ship 'is so small."

"A dirigible that size," he explained, "cannot show all the things it should. Obviously it can't show what could be done as an airplane carrier. A bigger ship would be better but still the Navy's announcement is good news."

Battleships' Cost Rises

The new airship would be used for coastal patrol, to speed launching of planes and to continue training of lighter-than-air experts. The Navy has had no rigid airship in operation since the Macon crashed in 1935.

In bids on three 35,000-ton battleships, three builders asked from $49,840,000 to $54,794,000 for hull and machinery of each ship, to which the Navy must add about 40 per cent for guns, armor and ammunition. Each ship, then, would cost about $75,000,000 commissioned to join the fleet.

Four Years for Delivery

Bidders were Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corporation, Quincy, Mass., $52,145,000; New York Shipbuilding Corporation, Camden, N. J., $54,794,000, and Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock Co., Newport News, Va., $49,640,000. The Virginia concern stipulated the Government furnish boilers, turbines and gears, which would add about $3,500,000 to the estimate.

All bids specified that adjustments up to 15 per cent be made to meet any changes in present costs of material and labor.

British Trade Pact Ready Soon, Officials Reply to Tariff League

The reciprocal trade agreement with Great Britain is in the final stage of negotiation, and completion may be reached within two weeks, it was stated in an official quarter yesterday as the American Tariff League sent an open letter to Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, requesting "an explicit statement" on the pending pact.

There was no formal comment at the State Department but in informed official circles came confirmation of the report that the recent exchanges between Washington and London as to desired British concessions on several important items had never threatened collapse of all negotiations. London did not yield to all the American requests but a basis for continued bargaining was established.

German Autos Problem

One of the principal American requests was that in view of a threatened British rise in the duty on auto imports Britain should freeze its present tariff on American automobiles, with exception of low horsepower cars. Thus the British tariff could be boosted against small German cars, whose competition is particularly feared by British manufaturers, but the larger American cars would be exempt. It is believed that in principal some such provision is being worked out.

The Tariff League letter to Secretary Hull said: "The purpose of this letter is to request you make an explicit statement concerning the pending trade agreement with the United Kingdom.

"Such a statement could put an end to the uncertainty and confusion with which many branches of American industry, together with exporters and importers are now confronted.

Uncertainties Great

"The uncertainties which are created in the minds of domestic producer, exporter and importer alike because of the indefiniteness of the outlook are very great. It is possible that with the other tremendous responsibilities which you have had to carry during the last trying months that you are unaware of how widespread and how serious these uncertainties are.

"Any well-informed members of your own trade-agreements staff could tell you of numerous cases of lost export orders, of curtailment of imports and of hesitancy on the part of American producers because they did not know when the trade agreement would be completed, they did not know when it would become effective and they did not know what commodities would be affected and how seriously."

U. S. Protests Girl's Death by Japan's Bombs

The State Department said yesterday American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew in Tokyo had made a strong protest to Japan over the killing of a 3-year-old American girl by bombs from Japanese airplanes.

The girl, Phoebe Nyhus, was killed and her mother and elder sister, Ruthie, were wounded when bombs destroyed the Lutheran mission at Tungpeh October 26. Her father, Arthur E. Nyhus of Fertile, Iowa, a missionary, was unhurt.

Grew informed the State Department he called on the Japanese vice minister for foreign affairs and made oral representations which were supported by a note couched in very strong terms. The vice minister for foreign affairs promised an immediate investigation.

Europe Nearer U. S. Than Mars, Britons Point Out

London, Nov. 1 (AP).—The "Martian Invasion" radio scare of the United States received wide comment in Britain's newspapers today, but there was no laughter in a country just emerging from a real war crisis and still uneasy as to the future.

Editorials emphasized that the panic was proof of the vigilant care that must be exercised in the use of radio.

The Manchester Guardian said the scare was a "striking illustration of what might be called the relativity of isolation."

"Europe may be a long way off (from the Untied States), but Mars came far too near to be pleasant," the paper explained.

"Inculcation of community jitters" is a serious matter, the paper continued, and a "reminder of how swiftly panic might be spread by any deliberately malicious use of broadcasting."

2 New Envoys Soon to Join D.C. Diplomats

Finns Name Procope
Prince Colonna Slated
Succeeds de Suvich

A minister, selected yesterday, and an ambassador not yet definitely announced, are scheduled to join the Washington Diplomatic Corps soon.

The Finnish government said yesterday Hjalmer Johan Procope, its minister of foreign affairs and former president of the League of Nations, has been appointed Minister of Finland to the United States. He will assume his duties February 1, 1939.

Probable successor to Italian Ambassador Fulvio de Suvich will be Prince Ascanio Colonna, an Ambassador for the past two years but so far unassigned to a foreign capital. Prince Colonna's appointment is not yet "definite," but it was understood he is Mussolini's choice for Washington.

Only the fact that the State Department has not yet completed its study of the prince's record, preliminary to pronouncing him persona grata to the United States, is holding up formal announcement of the selection, it is believed.

Ambassador de Suvich left Washington yesterday for New York to pay his farewells to the thousands of Italian-Americans there. He will return to the Capital, however, before sailing for Rome on November 12.

Representative of Italy here since October 20, 1936, he is retiring from the diplomatic service to head a large insurance company in his homeland.

Ascanio Colonna dei Principi is 55 years old and married. He entered the diplomatic service in 1908 and was stationed in Constantinople and London before the World War. He was appointed Minister to Sweden in 1926 and to Hungary in 1933.

After leaving Budapest he represented Italy on the International Debt Commission. About two years ago he was promoted to the rank of Ambassador. Prince Colonna has never been in the United States.

Procope visited here last year as guest of Minister and Mme. Jarefelt. On that visit he was entertained also by Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, whom he met when they visited Finland three years ago.

In 1937 he received world-wide notice when he declared a free trade policy among nations to be the surest guarantee of world peace. He has been managing director of the Finnish Paper Mills, minister of commerce of Finland and Finnish minister to Poland. He is under 40.

Pan-American Board Re-elects Hull Chairman

Secretary of State Hull yesterday was unanimously re-elected chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union. The Minister of Uruguay, Senor Don Jose Richling, was named vice chairman.

Several reports, including that of the commission of experts on the unification of the law of exchange, and the director general's annual report, were approved.

Five members of the board will be delegates to the eighth international conference of American states at Lima on December 9. The Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, and the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, will head their countries' delegations. The Ambassador of Colombia, Senor Don Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, and the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Gauchalla, will go as delegates, while Secretary Hull is expected to head the United States delegation.

British Sentence 5 Arabs to Death

Jerusalem, Nov. 2 (AP).—Five Arabs were sentenced to death by a British military court today for carrying rifles and ammunition in revolt against British rule of the Holy Land.

British troops clashed with Arabs in two engagements. Thirteen Arabs were reported killed, and six wounded.

Five Arabs were killed and two wounded in the first of today's troop clashes, in the Samaria district. Forty-five were arrested.

In the second, eight were reported killed and four wounded. It was a spirited encounter with the British Westhampshire Regiment near Ramallah, 15 miles from Jerusalem.

Pan-American Board Re-elects Hull Chairman

Secretary of State Hull yesterday was unanimously re-elected chairman of the governing board of the Pan American Union. The Minister of Uruguay, Senor Don Jose Richling, was named vice chairman.

Several reports, including that of the commission of experts on the unification of the law of exchange, and the director general's annual report, were approved.

Five members of the board will be delegates to the eighth international conference of American states at Lima on December 9. The Ambassador of Mexico, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, and the Minister of Venezuela, Dr. Diogenes Escalante, will head their countries' delegations. The Ambassador of Colombia, Senor Don Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, and the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Gauchalla, will go as delegates, while Secretary Hull is expected to head the United States delegation.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Time Is Turned Back By November Theater

Stars of Earlier Day Returning
Maurice Evans' Prodigious Feat
Patter of the Playhouse

FORTHCOMING weeks in the theater in Washington will awaken many fragrant memories in the minds of Capital theatergoers.

Most immediately at hand is the week of November 11, at the Earle Theater, which will bring that patriarch of minstrelsy, Eddie Leonard, and the composer of "The Darktown Strutters' Ball" and "Some of These Days," Shelton Brooks, to the stage as featured members of the cast of Ted Lewis' new revue.

BELL

Eddie Leonard, perhaps, is best remembered for the novelty of his style of singing "Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider" and "Rolly-Boly Eyes," two of the most popular songs of their day, thanks to his unique rendition. It was this original "wah-wah-wah-wah" method of vocalization that gave rise to a controversy that raged for many seasons in the burlesque, vaudeville and "family" theaters. Harry Fox used the same style and there was long-drawn-out and bitter dispute between him and Leonard as to which was the first to introduce it. Eddie had a slight edge, by reason of his longer service behind the footlights. Harry, later the husband of one of the Dolly Sisters, at that time was a comparative beginner, on the burlesque wheels, as a featured comedian and singer under the rigid tutelage of that old war horse of the smoker circuits, Dave Marion, better known for his perennial characterization of "Snuffy, the Cabman."

And Ted Lewis, who brings both Leonard and Brooks to the local stage for the first time in many years, is no novice in the field of entertainment, himself. By the sheer skill of his showmanship and ability to catch the musical moods of the public from year to year, he and his band have survived many less adroit, imitative organizations, which long since have languished by the wayside. He also brings with him the inimitable "Snowball" Whittier, his famous and ubiquitous "shadow." In his native town of Circleville, Ohio, also the birthplace of George C. Tyler, famous theatrical producer, Ted Lewis, of course, still is known by his real name of Theodore Friedman.

Ten days after this reminiscent booking at the Earle, Tallulah Bankhead will bring her "I Am Different" company to the stage of the National for a week's engagement. Prominent in the supporting cast will be Fritzi Scheff, another brilliant star of an earlier era in the theater, whose most memorable success in operetta was achieved in the late Victor Herbert's "Mlle. Modiste."

During the period of its initial popularity, this column probably viewed "Mlle. Modiste" a dozen times, but the first and most memorable performance was some 33 years ago at the Columbia Theater—the same Columbia, barring a few coats of paint and yards of upholstery, now known as Loew's Columbia. One of the male leads in that original cast was Claude Gillingwater, who will be seen on the screen at Loew's Capitol, beginning tomorrow, as the "Uncle Sam" Henshaw to Shirley Temple's "Penny" Hale, in "Just Around the Corner." Another was William Pruett, a native born Washingtonian, cast in the gouty, basso role. He made famous, and was made famous by, that thundering basso-profundo bit of vocal rebellion, "I Want What I Want When I Want It," as familiar in its day as Miss Scheff's "Kiss Me Again," or her picturesque soubret number with the snare drum, "The Mascot of the Troop."

Heigho! The voice of that documentary newsreel is right—"Time Marches On."

So a week from today, Ronald Colman, in "If I Were King," will succeed "Suez" on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, and a week from tomorrow, "Submarine Patrol" will come into the Capitol and, presumably, the "Dracula"-"Frankenstein" chills-and-fever will be chased out of RKO-Keith's by Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda in "The Mad Miss Manton." Some weeks since, this space deveted itself in large measure to the declaration tha. the new vehicle for Ronald Colman represents the most exciting version of the Justin Huntly McCarthy legendary romance that has been made available to the public in many years. Of "Submarine Patrol," first made known under the working title of "Splinter Fleet," it seems fitting to observe that it is believed to be the first service picture, involving the official operation of the U. S. Navy in times of war, which has survived a Navy Department preview without a single suggested alteration or cut. Twentieth Century-Fox must have done pretty well by the wooden subchasers in its treatment of a semi-fictional story.

When he was here last season in Shakespeare's "King Richard II," we marveled at the prodigious memory and expressive speech of Maurice Evans. That wonder is constantly being multiplied.

It is Richard Maney who sends along the reminder from New York that Evans' performance of the complete script of "Hamlet" has confounded all the Broadway prophets of doom. Their contentions that John Gielgud and Leslie Howard had exhausted the potential "Hamlet" clientele two years ago, and that Manhattan lovers of leisurely dining would not patronize in profitable numbers a play the curtain of which rose at 6:30 in the evening, not to fall until 11:15, both have proved bad guesses. Not only have capacity audiences prevailed at the Evans' "Hamlet," but they have arrived more promptly than the conventional 8:30 to 8:50 crowd. And they have been rewarded. Mr. Evans has so perfected his and his company's enactment of the play that audiences now are allowed a full hour, from 8:10 to 9:10, for dinner or supper. At the Wednesday and Saturday afternoon performances, this intermission is cut to 15 minutes, with the result that the house arriving at 2 p. m. is dismissed at 6:15.

The complete "Hamlet" is given only six times a week. There is no Wednesday night performance. On Saturday nights, Mr. Evans reverts to the traditional cut version of the play, which extends from 8:25 p. m. to 11:20.

Such malleability is a gift bestowed upon few actors. And Mr. Evans, ladies and gentlemen, is an actor, if we ever had one.

The marching song in Paramount's aviation epic in Technicolor, "Men With Wings," coming to the Earle screen tomorrow, was written especially for the pi ture by two of Hollywood's foremost composers, Hoagy Carmichael and Frank Loesser. The song is called, of all things, "Men With Wings." I didn't know they marched. However, just to ref..esh your memory, Carmichael and Loesser are the lads who also wrote "Small Fry" for Bing Crosby's "Sing, You Sinners"—a number that was familiar to every ear before the picture ever got here. Not that it matters.

Incidentally, if you care to hear popular pieces played like nobody's business, herd Woody Kessler, pianist with Herbie Kay's Orchestra, now at the Earle, and a grand piano into a dim corner some time and turn the good ear toward them. This lad really is a virtuoso. His "um-ta-ta" chord accompaniments with the band give you no idea. He should have a solo spot on the stage.

Them-as-Has-Gits Note

Having "You Can't Take It With You" for a fifth capacity downtown week, wasn't good enough for that high-strung Southern gentleman, Sam Galanty, Eastern division manager for Columbia Pictures. He also had to have Seabiscuit and Bain Marie, in the eighth, at Pimlico Tuesday. And he also had to hire a dray yesterday to haul home all that lettuce. The poor guy's predicament is breaking an old friend's heart!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Nov. 2.

FIORELLO LAGUARDIA, who still hasn't indorsed either gubernatorial candidate, has advised WNYC Director Novak to invite Lehman and Dewey to make campaign addresses the same evening, via WNYC with LaGuardia as chairman . . . The Municipal Court Justices—who have been informed that the mayor plans further reductions in their salary—held a secret conference yesterday and voted to print and distribute 1,000,000 cards telling voters to vote "Yes" on Amendment No. 5, which concerns the judiciary. Only one judge dissented . . .

JIMMY ROOSEVELT, accompanied by his wife and nurse, visited the Twentieth Century lot and was shown around the studio . . . He arrived at the set where Jack Haley's new picture, "Thanks for Everything," is being filmed and watched the scene . . . A doctor, using a stethoscope, was examining Haley . . . "This is for an insurance policy," Haley told Roosevelt, "but Jimmy ain't got it."

CONTINUED PUBLICITY about the Robert Irwin murder case, emanating from the district attorney's office, may result in a last-minute plea for a change of venue . . . Barbara Bannister, the Smithfield Ham heiress now entertaining at N. T. G.'s, has joined the American Federation of Actors . . . Clifford Odets summoned the Group Theater cast for a reading of his new play, "Rocket to the Moon." Odets, who is proud of his histrionic talents, acted out all the parts himself. Odets became so excited in his emotings that he sprained his back . . . Burrelle's has been commissioned by Canada to handle the news clippings of the British royal visit to America.

MEMBERS OF THE police department are being suspected of tapping the wires of Commmissioner of Investigation Bill Herlands, the State's best prosecutor . . . George Jessel, who concluded his engagement in Kentucky Sunday, flew to Hollywood to spend an afternoon with Norma Talmadge, and then flew back to New York . . . When David Selznick goes to United Artists to pick up his contract, he'll find that no contract awaits him—because of his recent publicity statements . . . The I. L. G. W. U., America's most powerful union, will decide on November 10 not to attend the C. I. O. meeting four days later. The union has a plague-o'-both-your-houses attitude toward the C. I. O. and A. F. of L.

WILLIAM SAROYAN, the young writer whose new book, "The Trouble With Writers," will be published next week, has had more stories published this year than any other writer in America . . . "How do you manage to get so much work done?" he was asked . . . "Work?" he replied. "A $20-a-week clerk in an office does five times as much work as I do now. I know, because I used to be one. I quit because they wouldn't pay me $22.50" . . . "And how much do you average as a writer now?" Saroyan was asked . . . "Well," he confessed, "not quite 20 bucks a week."

FRAU GOEBBELS, wife of Germany's propaganda minister, is trying to leave the country. She can't find a lawyer willing to handle her case . . . Van Wyck Mason's "3 Harbours" has gone into its fourth printing . . . Sandra Rambeau, displeased at the recent publicity about the jewels the Duke of Kent had presented to her, left New York last week and took the jewelry to Hollywood . . . George Backer, ablest of the Congressional aspirants, has recovered and will go sound-truck gunning vs. Bruce Barton this week . . . Jose Swann, who was secretary to Ivar Kruger, the Match King, is visiting the local cafes, making private recordings of the jitterbug music.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Nov. 2.—What a nice visit I had with Betsy and Jimmy Roosevelt. They'd just come from the Fox studio and were still in stitches over the Ritz brothers' double talk.

HEDDA HOPPER

When I asked Betsy if Shirley Temple had given her a police badge, she said, "No, does she give them away?"

"Well, your mother-in-law got one when she was here," I told her.

"That's different, we're the unimportant members of the family."

"Not according to Alva Johnston's spiel in a national magazine," says I. Then the phone rang drowning out that bit of cheek and we all took turns acting as Jimmy's secretary. The calls ranged from trying to sell him a painting of Windsor Castle to what time he'd be available for photographs on Navy Day, with a call from the White House from Mr. Early, one of the President's secretaries, who said to Jimmy, "I thought you were resting, but find you're in Hollywood with the glamour girls. If you need help I can take the next plane out."

Then we decided upon a seating arrangement for Walter Wanger's pary that night—always fun bossing other fellow's party—placing Jimmy between Hedy LaMarr and Joan Bennet, and Betsy between Charles Boyer and Spencer Tracy. Their guest, Mrs. Adams, of New York, said "well, if I can get him, I'll take Harry Joe Brown, he's the most charming man I've met here." That was the second time I'd heard that statement in 24 hours.

It wasn't discussed, but I believe we'll see Jimmy in a very important position in the motion picture industry within two years. He'd do a swell job, too. His father was offered it but turned it down.

Jimmy had just had a letter from his mother saying she'd be out soon. She expects to breakfast with his sister in Seattle, lunch with him at the Murphy Ranch at Hollister, Calif., and speak in Los Angeles that evening, hoping to cover the distance by motor. "Only thing mother's weak on," says Jimmy, "is geography."

We'll be seeing lots of the Roosevelts, I hope. They expect to be around until Christmas.

Can you imagine anything funnier than Jack Benny dressed as a cowboy walking down the rue de La Paix in Paris, France? He does, in "Artists and Models Abroad," followed by a horse, which seems to scent the prairie on him, and by Joan Bennett, as the fourth richest girl in America. Charley Grapewin is her old man, who fell down and came up with a brace of oil wells.

Into that idea they weave one of the best fashion shows, with most of the French designers tumbling over themselves trying to show their latest models, and doing it on an assembly track—an idea they copied from the Ford factory. Only in the picture the chassis are streamlined and assembled when they step on the track. It's a tasty lavish bit of nonsense spread on by Mitch Leisen's artistic hands. And it's Benny's best picture. You know, if Jack keeps on trying he' going to be a swell actor some day and live up to his personality.

John Beal certainly started something in "Soliloquy," which may have dire results. You can picture what we'll do with that idea. Greet an enemy sweetly, then under your arm carry a record, letting it blast forth exactly what you're thinking of the person you're talking to. It's hard to tell which is better, John or his voice. With a bit more strength in the plot, "Soliloquy" would grab and hold you like a nightmare.

I wish to commend Universal Studio for restraining the sound in "The Storm," and Charlie Bickford for the virility of his performance. Charlie's really a grand actor it's a mighty entertaining little picture, with the audience applauding Jack Mulhall, who assisted Bickford in his most hilarious sequence.

Your theater's been giving you three Frankensteins in one night. Universal's reversing that, and is handing you three horrors in one picture, with Basil Rathbone playing a nice guy. After that he goes to Fox as Sherlock Holmes, and I suppose will be looking for Boris Karloff. Following that "The Rains Came," washing all his troubles away. Only thing he missed was "Idiot's Delight." Yes, sir! Buck Basil is riding high, wide and handsome.

Why not cast Wendy Barie as Fern in "The Rains Came?" She'd be darned good. Part calls for an English girl born in India and she's both.

'The Sea Gull' Brings Lunts To National

Opens Monday Night
Today's New Bills
Other Programs

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne come to the National Theater next Monday night for a week's engagement in Chekhov's "The Sea Gull." Members of their acting company, in this play, again have an opportunity to display their adaptability to any roles. Richard Whorf, Sydney Greenstreet, John Barclay, Edith King, Margaret Waller and George Meador are prominent in the cast. The Lunt-Fontanne version of "The Sea Gull" was translated by Stark Young, famous author. Robert Milton staged the play. Miss Fontanne is Irina, the actress, and Mr. Lunt is Trigorin, the writer. Mr. Whorf is assigned to the role of the idealistic son; Mr. Greenstreet lends his hearty authority to the role of Sorin and Miss King is the unhappy Pauline. This is the first subscription play of the Theater Guild-American Theater Society season of six. There will be the usual matinees on Wednesday and Saturday.

"Men With Wings," Paramount's Technicolor cavalcade of aviation, comes to the screen at the Earle Theater for a week's engagement beginning tomorrow. Fred MacMurray, Ray Milland and Louise Campbell are cast in the stellar roles. William A. Wellman, himself a former flier, who made "Wings" a decade ago, directed this new production, which traces the history of aviation from the time of the Wright Brothers to the giant clipper ships of the present. On the stage, the "Novelties of 1938" revue will present Ross Wyss, jr., and June Mann in "If You Pease;" The Gauchos, "wizards of the springboard;" the Condos Brothers, Dick and Leota Ash, George Lyons and the Earle Roxyettes, in new dance routines.

Shirley Temple will be the pictured star of "Just Around the Corner," the screen attraction coming to Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. In this inspiriting subject she is supported by Charles Farrell, Joan Davis, Bert Lahr, Claude Gillingwater, Cora Witherspoon, Bennie Bartlett, Mary Forbes, Franklin Pangborn, Amanda Duff, a newcomer, and scores more. The stage portion of the new bill will be contributed by Major Bowes' "Third Anniversary Revue," featuring a long list of specialists selected from the most notable of Maj. Bowes' earlier productions. A wide range of entertainment is promised by these graduated amateurs.

Beginning today RKO-Keith's Theater will inaugurate its "horror week" of duplex thrills, chills and gooseflesh. The twofold medium of this adventure in blood-curdling melodrama will be a composite of "Frankenstein" and "Dracula." In the former the role of the monster is played by Boris Karloff; in the latter, the vampire is portrayed by Bela Lugosi. Both are supported by casts of recognized screen players who bend their abilities toward making the two pictures as eerie as possible—which is very eerie, indeed!

Tyrone Power, Loretta Young and Annabella, supported by an all-star cast, led by Henry Stephenson, Nigel Bruce, J. Edward Bromberg, Maurice Moscovich, Leon Ames, Miles Mander, George Zucco and hosts of others, will continue a second week in "Suez," at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning today. "Suez" is one of the big pictures of the year, depicting the semi-historical events surrounding the construction of the Suez Canal. The short subjects also will be held over.

The Metropolitan Theater announces "Touchdown Army" as its major screen feature for the week beginning tomorrow. Robert Cummings, John Howard and Mary Carlisle are the foremost members of the cast. The climax of the picture is reached in an exciting Army-Navy football game. The supporting cast is led by William Frawley, Benny Baker and Owen Davis, jr.

That surcharged celluloid melodrama, "Too Hot to Handle," co-starring Clark Gable and Myrna Loy, will return to F street for a repeat engagement at the Columbia Theater, beginning today. Walter Pidgeon and Walter Connolly lead the supporting cast, which is sufficiently extensive to people the action from China to New York, to South America and way stations. The story concerns the adventures of a newsreel cameraman and a young aviatrix.

A travelogue on Mexico, in natural color; "Crime Fighters," a novel short-reel; "The Bike Parade" and Donald Duck in "The Whalers" will be the short features of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater, opening tomorrow. The bill will be based on newsreel coverage of the world, as usual.

With the conclusion of the current week of grand opera, the Belasco Theater will revert to its motion picture policy next Monday with a return engagement, for one week only, of "Grand Illusion," already exhibited on Lafayette Square for three weeks. Pierre Fresnay, Jean Gabin, Eric Von Stroheim and Dita Parlo appear in the stellar roles of this exceptionally fine anti-war film.

"Three on a Weekend," Gaumont-British production starring Margaret Lockwood, last seen in "To the Victor," will be given its first Washington presentation for the week beginning Sunday, at the Little Theater. The principal male role is played by John Lodge, remembered for his work with Marlene Dietrich in "The Scarlet Empress." The story concerns three widely diversified characters thrown into a maelstrom of stirring events over a week-end in London. Hugh Williams, Rene Ray and Linden Travers lead the support.

Diane Johnson will be the added "guest star" attraction with the "Jazz Babies" burlesque company, opening a week's engagement at the Gayety Theater with the usual Sunday matinee performance. Comedy will be in the hands of Mike Sachs and Benny "Wop" Moore, assisted by Alice Kennedy, Winnie Garrett, Ina Thomas, the dance team of Pastine and Marylyn and numerous others. A beauty chorus will background the production.

WPA Hurricane Activities Filmed

The activities of the WPA in the recent New England hurricane have been combined into a movie, "Shock Troops of Disaster," which will be given a screening at 3 p. m. today in the Archives Auditorium, announces Lowell Mellett, director of the National Emergency Council.

The one-reel film was produced by the WPA as a record of its 110,000 workers' activities in the storm area. It includes rescue scenes from the Coast Guard, and activities of the Red Cross, the Army, Navy, National Guard, the CCC, NYA and local officers.

D. W. Robinson, Jr., PWA Unit Counsel

By the Associated Press.

Administrator Ickes announced yesterday appointment of David W. Robinson, jr., as counsel for the Public Works Administration power division.

Robinson, officials said, represented Greenwood County, S. C., in its case against the Duke Power Co., and co-operated with Government counsel in successful prosecution of the litigation before the Supreme Court.

Robinson succeeds Robert E. Sher, who was assigned temporarily to the post after Jerome Frank, former counsel for the PWA power division, became a member of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Office Workers Seek Over $17

The employe group representing several thousand office workers here on the minimum wage conference will request a weekly wage "in excess" of the $17 demanded yesterday by employers.

At the close of the first public hearing to establish a legal wage for women workers in this industry, Arthur L. Schoenthal, labor representative on the Minimum Wage Board, declared his group would submit a budget tomorrow covering needs of office workers.

The budget would call for an increase over the wage for workers in retail trades, which employer representatives stated they would be satisfied with.

Pedestrian Control

Control of pedestrians as a means of reducing traffic fatalities has been discussed in Washington for a number of years. It is rather discouraging to realize that only now have the District Commissioners appointed a special committee to draft the necessary regulations to inaugurate that safety plan.

Fortunately, however, there is no attempt to offset this delay by the hasty adoption of pedestrian control measures. To rush through a set of regulations without adequate study and preparation would be worse than further delay.

Every step outlined by the Commissioners in preparation for this experiment is essential to insure the most satisfactory results. Pedestrian control systems operating in other cities will be studied. Regulations will then be carefully drafted by traffic and legal experts. And the reaction of the public to the proposal will be ascertained. With these precautions taken, the possibility of a blunder will be reduced to a minimum.

The effort to ascertain the will of the public is especially desirable. There would not be much chance for the success of pedestrian control regulations which did not have widespread public support. Before civic groups are asked to state their conclusions, however, thorough discussion of the issue is desirable. People naturally resent regulation of their movements on foot. On the other hand, every citizen ought to face the fact that more than 70 per cent of those killed in traffic accidents are pedestrians. And in a large percentage of the cases the authorities have concluded that these victims have been responsible for their own slaughter.

If pedestrian control can be made effective in stopping this useless waste of life, it would be a small price to pay.

Japan Reveals Her Hand

Thus far there has been no formal reply from Tokyo to the American note of October 6 demanding that the Open Door in China be kept open and that Japan cease infringing upon American rights and interests in that country. It is not unlikely, when that reply is made, that it will consist, as in the past, of warm protestations of innocence and vehement denials of wrongdoing.

The course Japan actually plans to follow in China, has in the meantime been clearly outlined in the declaration of policy issued yesterday. The Tokyo government has set forth in scarcely veiled terms its intention of extending Japanese hegemony over all eastern Asia. The new order which Japan seeks to establish in Asia, says the statement, "will have for its foundation a tripartite relationship of mutual aid and co-ordination between Japan, Manchukuo and China in the political, economic, cultural and other fields. The object is to secure international justice, to perfect a joint defense against communism, to create a new culture and to realize close economic cohesion throughout east Asia."

Translated into practical terms, this means that China, if she is to be permitted to enjoy even the nominal independence vouchsafed to Manchukuo, must place her foreign policy, her educational system and her economic life at Japan's disposal even as is the case in Manchukuo. That is what Japan means by "co-operation."

To secure that "co-operation" from the Chinese will prove no easy matter despite the optimistic note struck in the Japanese statement. For 16 months China has fought against the effort to put a "made in Tokyo" yoke around her neck. Chiang Kai-shek and his government have indicated that they have not the slightest intention to stop. As long as there are Chinese armies in the field to fight the invaders the war will go on. This the Japanese now recognize. Indeed, Finance Minister Ikeda has seen fit to warn his nation once more that still greater sacrifices are ahead, that the budget will mount and that the total of national bonds to be issued "to meet the budgetary shortage will reach a considerable figure."

It is, perhaps, for the very reason that the task of subjugating China is proving far more formidable than was anticipated that Japan has now seen fit to lift the earlier ban on dealing with the Kuomintang government. Like China herself, the national government is to be allowed to exist as an entity provided it agrees to "join in the establishment of a new order," in other words provided it agrees to become the willing puppet of Tokyo.

New Housing Program?

President Roosevelt's discussion of a new housing program for families in the low income group who have no prospect of benefiting from slum clearance projects raises more questions than it answers. There is no doubt as to the need for better housing of a type that can be rented for $5 to $10 per room per month. But whether or not it is practical for private industry to supply this need, without subsidization, is quite a different matter.

One encouraging aspect of the discussion is the President's recognition of the fact that the entire problem of substandard housing can not be solved by granting Federal subsidies. Use of Government funds to provide decent, safe and sanitary living quarters for all families now lacking such accommodations would impose a staggering burden on the Federal Treasury. Certainly if the upper strata of the low income group are to be rehoused, it will have to be done by private industry or public agencies working without cost to taxpayers.

President Roosevelt speaks of dwellings that will cost in the neighborhood of $3,500. These would be constructed by private enterprise for families of a higher income group than those served by the United States Housing Authority. Some of the projects financed and subsidized by the latter agency will cost more than $6,400 per dwelling unit. A considerable part of that expense is accounted for by the necessity of wiping out slums. But even when that extra expense is written off, the cost of subsidized, nonprofit dwellings for low-income families is still substantially greater than the cost proposed by the President for private-built homes for a somewhat higher income group.

That fact naturally leads to the suggestion that if any one in the Administration knows how further to reduce building costs the information should be first submitted to the USHA.

Incidentally, it should be noted that the rentals mentioned by the President are approximately the same as those charged by the local Alley Dwelling Authority for dwellings built without subsidy in slum areas. Perhaps the ADA holds a partial solution of the problem with which the President is struggling. Of course, that agency has the advantage of low interest rates since its funds are borrowed from the public by the Federal Treasury. Moreover, the ADA operates without profit. Certainly some profit would be essential to lure private enterprise into this field of low-cost housing.

No doubt a lower income group could also be reached through the machinery now operated by the FHA. Ample mortgage money is reported to be available in nearly all parts of the country at relatively low interest rates. With these funds, private industry has an opportunity to build homes for income groups that could not previously be reached. It is reasonable to expect constructive development of this system so that lower rentals will be possible. By that means the President's objective may in time be at least partly achieved.

Such a gradual evolution of the FHA system would be a very different matter, however, from the inauguration of a new program separate from either the FHA or the USHA. Housing is necessarily divided between slum clearance, a public function, and the construction of homes as a commercial venture, which is a function of private industry. Within these respective fields the need is for co-ordination of policy. A third housing program might confuse and seriously jeopardize the vital work of existing agencies.

A Realistic Approach

The shift in the French cabinet which has brought Paul Reynaud into the finance ministry is, of course, too recent to warrant any surmises as to the consequences of the change. It is, however, encouraging to have this important post filled by a man who has a reputation for courage as well as for moderate conservatism.

Long the leading proponent of franc devaluation, M. Reynaud is now convinced that the problem confronting France is no longer monetary, but economic and financial. In other words, the alarms that have kept the French currency in a state of instability for so long stem from domestic disorders resulting in loss of confidence, flight of capital and refusal of investors to support the financial plans of the government.

It is an old story—this popular lack of confidence in the ability of successive French governments to put through essential reforms. At least M. Reynaud has made a propitious start by dispelling to a certain extent fears of further monetary manipulation and increasing hopes that the tripartite monetary agreement may be salvaged.

With less than two weeks before expiry of the decree powers conferred a month ago upon the present government, the new finance minister faces the formidable task of trying to outline a program of domestic reform that will be drastic enough to meet the emergency and at the same time not so far-reaching as to encounter the kind of opposition which has defeated earlier efforts to find a solution for France's international economic disorders.

Foreign Trade Problems

As Secretary Hull pointed out in his address before the National Foreign Trade Convention, the trade agreements program is based upon sound and constructive principles designed to strengthen economic ties among nations and by that token to further the cause of world peace. The one outstanding weakness of Mr. Hull's speech lies in its omissions, not in its affirmations of belief in the policies that this country has been following since he assumed his present office.

There can be no denying that an extensive and increasing area of the earth's surface is now outside the orbit of those countries with which we can effect trade pacts on the basis of most-favored-nation treatment. That, of course, is no reason why we should lose hope or relax efforts to reach accords with nations sharing our views and ready to acquiesce in our policies. But we are under no necessity of choosing, as Secretary Hull assumes, between the principles upon which our commercial policy is founded and adherence to a system of "ever-increasing economic isolation."

The real question before us today is how we are to conduct business with those countries that do not share our views but strive to attain increasing self-sufficiency with all that the system implies in the way of regimentation, lowering of living standards and loss of individual liberties.

The fact that Americans who believe in democratic ideals are thoroughly hostile to such a system does not mean that commercial intercourse with authoritarian states will be cut off. But it does involve serious problems of adaptation which we cannot afford to ignore. Assistant Secretary of State Messersmith emphasized that fact very strongly in his address before the Foreign Trade Council.

"We are living," he said, "in a world in which a country such as ours, firmly dedicated to the maintenance of certain principles in its practice among its own people and in the practice of its foreign relations, is obliged to face problems in the conduct of its relations with other states which up to a few years ago it would have considered altogether fantastic. Just as we have to meet these new problems in our major relationships with states, so the individual and the business organizations will find the same questions to be met in the relationships they have heretofore maintained beyond our frontiers."

If we are to pursue a realistic policy in accordance with Mr. Messersmith's advice, we cannot confine discussion to general principles or pretend that we live in a world sharply divided into those countries with which we can do business and those beyond the trading pale. Moreover, the struggle for world trade is not waged exclusively between authoritarian states on the one side and liberal nations, prepared to accord equal treatment to all, on the other.

As speakers before the Foreign Trade Convention pointed out, the bitterest competition between the conflicting trade systems has been waged for the favors of those not committed to either system. Countries like Germany, for instance, have held out strong inducements to nations with surplus raw materials to deliver goods to them in exchange for their own exports. The result has been to deprive our export industries of trade in some cases and often to deprive the "tied" nations of opportunities to dispose of their products in the most profitable markets.

When authoritarian states relying upon exclusive bilateral pacts resort to such practices, we have to face a real problem of economic preparedness against aggression. That necessity was brought out very clearly by the president of the Foreign Trade Council, Eugene P. Thomas. His remarks do not contravene, but admirably supplement, the generalizations of Secretary Hull. For, after stating that it is our first duty to "assert our economic leadership to assure the complete adherence and support of all liberal trading nations," Mr. Thomas concluded by saying that we must be ready to treat with nations pursuing nationalistic trade policies, "with a view to improving the mechanics of trade with them and limiting trade conflicts so far as possible."

This is a genuinely realistic policy involving no surrender in principle of Secretary Hull's objectives. The principle of reciprocity and most-favored-nation treatment can be upheld without arousing a spirit of antagonism among nations adhering to a different commercial policy.

Wants A "Firm Stand"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have seen Germany's irritation caused by "American meddling in European affairs," and it proves just how much weight the statements of the President carry in Germany. Before the Munich pact the President wrote two notes to the Nazi dictator asking for a peaceful settlement of the matter. These notes had a tremendous influence at that time. Today we see that the words of Roosevelt are being heeded and resented in Germany. If only the United States would take a definite stand on further aggression by the Nazi-Fascist countries, it would do more toward curbing such moves than all of the diplomatic forces of France and England.

Although the United States is not entirely ready as yet to be able to back up anything that it might say to the European powers by actual armed force, it is still a major power to be feared by the countries of Europe.

A firm stand on the European situation by the United States would definitely pave the way for a lasting peace in this world. There can be no doubt that Germany, at this time, fears us. But if Hitler can get away with anything in Europe and expect silence and neutrality on the part of the United States he will do it.

The United States must show Europe that it fears no power in the world although it wants no war. After all, the threat of fascism in the United States is not a very pleasant prospect. And, certainly, if this country continues to allow England to bungle as arbitrator in Europe and permit the spread and growth of fascism, that is what will inevitably happen to us. Let's speak now and save bullets afterward.

Kin Of Franklin

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have at my side a clipping from The Post March 31, 1938, headed "Two Women, Nearest Living Kin of Benjamin Franklin."

They evidently forgot that my sister, Mrs. William D. Baldwin, and I are their first cousins. Our mothers were sisters—granddaughters of Sally (Franklin) Bache; her son, Richard Bache, jr., had several daughters and sons. Sophia married Richard Irwin. Matilda, the mother of the two ladies, was married to Gen. William Emory. My mother, Henrietta Constantia Bache, married Charles Abert, second son of the late Col. John James Abert, chairman of the Topographical Engineers.

I do not understand how my cousins overlooked us.

Reactions To The Radio Panic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does no one in the United States read? Why the furor over the very excellent portrayal of H. G. Wells' "War of the Worlds," by Orson Welles and his "Mercury Theater" on October 30? Or was it all a publicity stunt?

I can't imagine an intelligent person who has not read Wells' story and thrilled to the excitement in that highly imaginative piece of fiction. Even people who never buy a book because they already have one should be able to read the "Radio Time Table;" and if they can't read and are listening to a radio program, can't they hear when an announcer says this is a "play"? As an example of gross ignorance and pure, childish stupidity, Sunday night's exhibition beats everything in the paper for weeks. The people who were "angry" were the most ridiculous of all—one is always angry when one is made to look foolish.

More power to Orson Welles and Columbia Broadcasting Company; may they continue to do things to shame Americans into the necessity of learning, at least, to read.

DOROTHY M. WHITE.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps nothing in these days tends better to show the mental attitude of a large number of our people than their crazy reaction to Sunday night's sensational radio theater broadcast. There have been numerous evidences of hysteria throughout the Nation of late, but this one tops them all. It is unequaled. No wonder we are sometimes the laughing stock of the world and held up to ridicule by other powers.

The cause of Sunday night's hysteria is not difficult to find. The all-night life, the senseless barbaric swing music, questionable songs, drinking parties, wild, drunken driving and other poise-wrecking activities have brought forth so many disgraceful and tragic results that in a great number mental stability has been almost destroyed. The name, "jitterbug," can properly be applied to many, but thank goodness all Americans are not jumpy. Some day, let us hope, we will get back to real American home life and sane living. The apparent preference for the ignoble, the irresponsible, careless and degrading, will not last forever, and I hope I may live to see the United States upon the upgrade again—educationally, morally and mentally. I. L. G.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No American newspaperman would willfully bring his country into disrepute or hold its people up to ridicule, and yet these are the net effects of the detailed stories of the hysteria produced among a few thousand persons out of all America's millions as a result of the absurdly realistic broadcast of Wells' "War of the Worlds."

These stories of "mass hysteria," indicating a horrible case of jitters on the part of our population, have already been placed before the chancelleries of many nations. It is all the more deplorable that they convey a totally false impression. Except for the scattered cases of ignorant or excitable people who telephoned police and newspapers in many cities, there was nothing approximating mass hysteria. I walked along F street at the hour of this broadcast. In many stores radios were going, yet I observed nothing whatsoever of the absurd supposed "terror of the populace." There was none.

But the main point is that stories of scattered evidences of fear that "the Martians are coming" will create abroad a contempt for American excitability, which it may require strong measures—otherwise unnecessary—to eradicate.

A. McK. GRIGGS.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the Sunday night broadcast of a fantastic war play, the panic which apparently aired itself throughout the entire country goes to show how inattentively the public listens to the radio. After the panic which the broadcast aroused, a voice finally stated: "It was announced four times during the performance that the play was a creation of the imagination of H. G. Wells."

Toujours de l'Audace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the slogans of the Communists is "Audacity and still more audacity." They are certainly living up to their slogan in their vilification of the Dies committee. Whatever one may think of the committee's methods of procedure, the bald facts remain that in the Michigan sit-down auto strikes, one group seized and held the properties of another group, in direct defiance of a court order, and under threats of irreparably damaging millions of dollars worth of fine machinery. When the sheriff sought to enforce the court order, he found his force insufficient. He called upon Gov. Murphy for aid, and it was denied. Now, no one will deny that the foregoing is a fair statement of what actually happened.

The apologists for Gov. Murphy seek to excuse his surrender to forces of lawlessness and violence by pointing out that by continuing negotiations he avoided possible bloodshed.

The point is that there should never be any compromise with lawlessness. It is a mistake to take the position that the mere preservation of human life is of such paramount importance as to dwarf all other considerations. Whenever the sovereignty of the Government itself is challenged by any group which seeks to enforce its views by force and in open defiance of law and order, then Government set up by the people of their own free choice is still supreme. President Cleveland took that position during his Administration, and he has been applauded for it ever since.

Our newspapers told us last week that the President of the United States had "warned" Japan in stern tones that American rights must be respected, and it was predicted that the next Congress would be called upon to vote billions for a great rearmament program. It takes more than the mere mechanical devices that money can buy to provide a well-armed nation. It takes men, loyal men, men who put the welfare of their country ahead of their own immediate advantage.

It is idle for this country to "warn" Japan or any other nation about anything, because if we became involved in war, we would be in more danger from within than from without. And all because we have permitted a doctrine to spread that any excess against law, order and general decency is justifiable if done in the name of "labor." Well, we all labor. The doctor who leaves his bed at night to tend his patient, and the nurse who cools the fevered brow through the long night watches, both labor. The small merchant who tries to keep his little business going, meet his pay rolls, and pay his taxes, labors.

Those of us who are unorganized are getting rather tired of having our country's welfare jeopardized and our own affairs kept in constant turmoil by lawless radicals. More power to the Dies committee. It is doing an important and useful work.

Satiric Note

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My heart nearly breaks these mornings when I open my Post and read of these millions of unemployed carpenters, electricians, plumbers, plasterers, paperhangers, stone masons, bricklayers, painters, auto mechanics, etc., who are all out of jobs because of these wicked married women.

The Post Impressionist

Radio-Therapy

ALTHOUGH I was within 40 miles of the landing of the Martians in New Jersey on the night of October 30 I was happily oblivious of the event. The children wanted to hear Charlie McCarthy, and they stuck with his program to the mocking end. I doubt that they were entirely conscious that he is a block of wood, animated by an exterior intelligence. To that extent they fell into the same credulity as those who, after hearing part of the more highly powered program, packed their most precious possessions and started to leave their homes.

None of us will ever know just what we would have done if we had heard the program. Would Daddy have been bright enough to realize what was going on? Would Betsy have believed him, or would Phebe, if he had told them it was all make-believe? Could parental wisdom hope to rival the radio; a parental wisdom too often ignorant of what products to recommend as aids to supernal beauty, glowing health, brilliant teeth, radiant hair, mental growth, night's rest, and what not? Besides, with Betsy a sophomore in high school, who could have contradicted her if she chose to declare the radio broadcast genuine and the end of our lives imminent and horrible?

Yet the next morning—though after what an evening and night of disagreement—the truth of the matter would have appeared. The amusement of the neighbors, the excited chattering and reminiscences over the telephone, the cold light of newspaper print reporting the hoax, and the manifest fact that there was school to be confronted as usual, would have brought their own peculiar comfort. Instead of finding it difficult, as they did, to believe that so many persons had been frightened out of their wits, they would have accustomed themselves gradually to the fact that the world was still safe: at least from last night's Martians.

As it is, those who heard the broadcast and those who did not alike look back upon it as something like a dream—a nightmare in which the whole country shared. And the subconscious effects of it are probably also like those of a dream. No doubt in the course of time some eminent psychoanalyst will get around to that feature of it and bring forth strictures on the whole affair that may reach print, or may not, depending upon how unsettling they may be, in turn, to the tranquillity of our 130,000,000 imaginations.

One aspect of the matter occurs to me that in its way is as disastrous as the original broadcast in unsettling the placid faith of the citizenry. Disastrous, that is, to broadcasters of many varieties, although perhaps not so unfortunate for listeners. It arises from the analogy with dreams. For somewhere or other I have seen the thought expressed that there is a therapeutic value in nightmares and bad dreams. They help to preserve our sanity, although momentarily appearing to threaten it. Like tales of horror they raise us to a point of dread, and then let us sink back comfortably onto the eiderdown of our illusions by turning out not to be true. By exaggerating our anxieties and then wiping them out as unreal, they make it possible for us consciously and sanely to do the same with our waking fears.

Applied to the radio and the sort of thing that comes over it, the hoax of October 30 may turn out to have the same kind of wholesome effect. When former Senator Crisis next addresses an impassioned 45 minutes of oratory to his great unseen audience, many of his hearers, with passing thanks to Orson Welles, may conceivably reach for another bonbon and tell themselves comfortably that this also is possibly not true. When His Excellency the Mikado of Glare, or His High Mightiness the Suzerain of Moronia, blares boldly to five continents his ultimatum as to what will happen if he doesn't have his way, even the premiers and chancellors of the world may pause and ask themselves whether this, too, is not a piece of too realistic fiction.

Perhaps even little Phebe, in listening to the persuasive accents of the Voice of Youth, telling of the marvelous effects of eating Desiccated Healthies cooked in Salto's Salinated Brine, may question whether she will not have as bright eyes if she eats what her mother puts before her. Perhaps.

"Sheer Cruelty"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest the trick [illegible] the Columbia Broadcasting System perpetrated Sunday night. I refer to the Mercury Theater of the Air program.

My aged mother was made seriously ill by it and my three children were terrified so that it was impossible to calm them for a long time afterwards. It was sheer cruelty on the partof the instigator of the program. It is incredible that there should be in authoritative positions in radio persons so devoid of understanding of human emotional reactions that they would sanction such a broadcast.

Moreover, announcements made as if emanating from various Government officials had every evidence of being official pronouncements.

Who is to pay for all of the needless expense incurred because of this hoax?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Bottled Pep

IN THESE DAYS when condition often makes the difference between victory and defeat in the final quarter of a big football game I sometimes recall a rebuff by Fielding H. Yost, that stout abstainer and prohibitionist who has walked these many years up to his eyes in incoherent old grads and never gnawed a dram. One afternoon Mr. Yost stood on the football field at Princeton watching a rather indifferent Michigan team go through the figures of the morrow's work against the Tiger and remarked that they lacked the old pepper. Rather brightly I suggested that some fighters when they went stale, including James J. Corbett—surely the most intelligent of them all—broke training with a crash, preferably on champagne, and when the swelling had abated came back better than ever.

"Now, if, instead of that water bucket, you were to send a half-dozen champagne coolers on the field along in the third quarter," I proposed, "you would see a surprising revival of spirits, or that which you call the old pepper."

MR. YOST TURNED a cold glare on the author of this heretical idea and walked away from an evil presence muttering, "Champagne wine! Champagne wine! I have never had a drunkard on a team of mine and never will."

Well, it was just an idea, tossed off as casually as that, but from knowledge, nevertheless, that before prohibition some football trainers brought their men along on ale and that in the ring some gladiators were known to take a small knock at a bottle of brandy between rounds when their knees began to flutter, and came back raging.

And even during prohibition one of the most painful social errors of the very elaborate social side of football nearly destroyed a fine old friendship between the business manager and the press agent of a famous team when the business manager phoned the social headquarters late in the evening and asked how things were going. It was common practice to buy several of those burlap hams of rye from some reliable bootlegger, set it out on the tables in several connecting rooms of the social headquarters in a big hotel and revive college memories far into the night.

ABOUT 10 O'CLOCK this night the business manager phoned and asked if the merrymaking was proceeding without undue bloodshed, and the publicity manager gayly replied: "Oh, yes, sir; yes, sir, indeed, sir; indeed, to be sure, yes, and the wine was wunnerful."

"What wine?"

"Why, the champagne wine," said the publicity man. "Everybody had some as long as it lasted, and it was cer'nly mighty fine, sir."

"That wine," the business manager said bitterly, "was for the team."

So, from piecing together bits of random information, I long ago arrived at the belief that Mr. Yost's fierce contempt for a mere mention of an idea then believed to be unique was not entirely just. He may have had no drunkards on any team of his, but other coaches had not been above recruiting as a ringer to help them through in grave emergencies the giant who lives in a bottle.

THERE MAY BE others who can match the experience of some who played for Washington and Lee against Virginia Polytechnic Institute about 1915 or 1916, a game which dragged through two listless quarters on a stifling autumn day and came brilliantly to life in the second half when Washington and Lee left the locker room stepping high and handsome and singing as they went. A sodden, lifeless football team began throwing passes which floated like bubbles and danced on the fingers of receivers who seemed to delight in juggling the ball ere plucking it down.

There were shocking violations of all the standard formulas, play so unorthodox that the enemy, through their own training in football routine, could not believe what they saw, and Washington and Lee won by a couple of touchdowns from a water-cooled squad whose coach had lacked vision or provision, or both.

MY INFORMANT, who saw Fordham lose to Pitt last week, said Fordham apparently was just played out in the latter part of the game.

"So were we and so was V. P. I. that day," he added, "but between halves certain persons unknown distributed several bottles of an unknown liquid which bubbled and whispered mischievously as our brave lads held the bottle necks to their innocent lips. I know we won, but I forgot the exact score. As a matter of fact, I was blind."

It's An Ill Wind, Etc.

One of the unexpected results of hostilities in China is less slicing by golfers. Rubber restrictions having led all golf clubs to ration their sales of balls to two per golfer per day, the unskillful performer has been obliged to drop the effort to add another yard or two to his drive, and to concentrate instead on keeping his ball somewhere near the fairway. In the end this may lead to an improvement in the general standard of the game, though the immediate price in patience and self-control appears rather a high one. In the meantime, there appears to be an opening for that type of caddy said to be chiefly in demand in Scotland. 'So you're good at finding balls? Then find one, and we'll start the game the noo.'

Ironic Anniversary

Bi-Decennial Of Czech Independence

Prague.

TWENTY YEARS of Czechoslovak independence have passed. And now the struggle begins anew. Yesterday it was a struggle for freedom. But today it is a struggle of adaptation and for survival in the new alien world now forced on Czechoslovakia.

On October 14, 1918, Benes announced the formation of a provisional government. Four days later in Washington, Masaryk issued the declaration of independence. On October 28, 1918, in Prague, the country achieved its freedom.

This year October was to be a month of jubilee. Instead it opened with extreme disillusionment followed by days in which the national mood fluctuated violently between deep pessimism and forced optimism. The Prague of a month ago, steeling itself to meet threats of war, has changed completely. Gone are the criss-crossed tapes on window-panes to keep them from shattering in a bombardment, gone are the blue street lights invisible from the air. The city has regained its normal appearance, but its spirit has changed.

THE BETRAYAL by western democracies had a much deeper significance to Czechoslovakia than material losses. It struck at the roots of the national life. Since it sacrificed the country it made a failure of the whole state policy. It made a failure of 20 years' work; it even shook the very democratic doctrines on which the country was founded. The Czechs asked themselves: "Why the teachings of Masaryk, why the policy of Benes, if these led only to capitulation and disaster? Why didn't we, years ago, accept a 25-year nonaggression treaty with Germany instead of standing by the democracies of the west?"

Their resentment grew. Bookstores had to clear their windows of the writings of Masaryk and Benes, the founders and greatest leaders of Czechoslovakia. Newspapers began a bitter campaign against the former President. Anti-Semitism began to grow where formerly there was none. How much this was a bitter reaction, and how much it might have been instigated by German propaganda or pressure is hard to say. You cannot make a failure of a country's ideals and policy without jeopardizing its sense of values. Had there been a defeat, then there might have been an immediate resistance, but with a failure came, first, disillusionment and apathy. Later, the government itself started moving against the dangerous trend that made an easy target of Jews, Socialists and Free Masons.

NOW THE FIGHT is over; now it remains to readjust the country in order to survive as independently as possible. At Munich and Berlin the "Big Four" took away from Czechoslovakia any say as to her frontiers. They played havoc with her economics, broke her constitution and paralyzed her political policy. It seemed at first as if nothing was left. "Nothing," said a Czech, "except the refugees."

People here in Prague stared wide-eyed at newspaper maps, and crowded around bookshop windows to see where the new lines ran, to see what towns were lost, to learn what homes and relatives or friends are now in Germany. Step by step the borders moved in on all sides at the will of other powers.

It seemed as if the partition would never stop—five zones to Germany, two districts to Poland, other areas to Hungary. For a while there were rumors that Slovakia and Ruthenia might desert to find a more powerful protector than Prague. The Hungarians started pressing for a common frontier with Poland. Not until then were the brakes applied. Germany wanted to keep a corridor open to the east. The creeping frontiers came to a temporary standstill at the bidding of Berlin.

Day by day the Czechs gradually took stock of their material losses. "This," says a Czech pointing to a Tatra car, a delicate glass tray or a cotton drape, "this was made in Czechoslovakia." Then he adds sadly, "But now it is German." "These cucumbers were grown in Czechoslovakia, now they are German." Everywhere the same refrain, usually said bitterly under a coating of assumed amusement.

To date, according to the government's figures, the Czechs have lost 2,317 factories—including 64 per cent of their glass manufacture, 49 per cent of their textiles, 73 per cent of the toys, and many other industries. Already the newspapers are warning against wasting coal, as a month ago they were warning against wasting food in case of war. For today Czechoslovakia has lost 89 per cent of its brown coal and 55 per cent of its lignite, and now it will be dependent on imports from Germany.

THE FIGHT AGAINST German economic domination, which Czechoslovakia has waged with surprising success in the past, seems now to be ended. The question is how far that domination will go.

From the German standpoint it seems that Czechoslovakia should be kept as much an agricultural country as possible. With all Hitler's talk of Germany's right to have lands that will keep her in food, in taking Austria and the regions of Czechoslovakia, he has increased German industrial, but not agricultural production. Probably, therefore, Berlin will "favor" farming and "discourage" new enterprises, at least any which might export its products outside of Germany. But England, hoping perhaps to retrieve a fraction of the influence which Chamberlain lost at Munich, undoubtedly wants to lend money for the purpose of building up Czech industries.

And so the tug-of-war will be carried on. The Czechs themselves seem to be down but not beaten. Already new industries are reported getting under way. Economic reconstruction is now of prime importance for the life and independence of the country.

Political reconstruction is still the unknown factor in Czechoslovakia today. People are not thinking of the constitution which must be rewritten. They are always thinking and speaking of the immediate political changes which from day to day have been swinging the country further and further to the right. When Munich made a failure of the government foreign policy and made a success of the Nazi doctrine and all it stands for, it doomed to all practical intent the pro-French, pro-democratic orientation.

Those elements which had always been in favor of closer relations with Germany were given control. But the majority elements could not suddenly change their color and carry out a policy they had always resisted. The Agrarians always favored closer relations with the Reich, no doubt because of the German market for agricultural products. Now their influence is in the ascendancy, all the more so because the Agrarians had fewer members among the 850,000 Czechs sacrificed to Germany, than the several workers' parties.

IT IS QUITE impossible to tell where the country is going, or how fast it will get there. Talk with an Agrarian and he will be relatively optimistic. Germany is a good market. The peasant is not directly concerned whether or not Czechoslovakia will be able to build up her industries. On the other hand a Social Democrat, will paint the blackest picture. He will probably tell you "Czechoslovakia now is going rapidly to the right; look what's happened in Slovakia already."

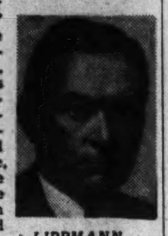
There the government has been handed over to the Slovak Catholic Party, which in the last elections was in a minority. That party was trying to take advantage of the misfortunes besetting the state until Prague entrusted it with the responsibility of negotiating the new frontiers with Hungary. It was an astute move, because otherwise the party would have opposed any decision from Prague.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Modern Malady

A FEW DAYS before the celebrated broadcast by Mr. Orson Welles a professor, who shall be nameless here, made a speech on the need for "streamlining" education. The computing machine, interest tables and other "finger tip" methods of solving once-hard problems have, said he, "done away with the need for much of the old 'rithmetic.'"



LIPPMANN.

THIS IS A MOST illuminating remark. As an indicator of what is most deeply and dangerously wrong with the modern world, the professor's statement could hardly, I think, be more exact.

"In a world of . . . automatic calculators," he explained, "the use made of numbers has changed." Eleven gallons of gasoline at 16.8 cents a gallon: We know where the attendant finds the answer, and we usually know it will be correct." Thus streamlined education means that the customer looks at the dial to see what the automatic calculator registers, and is compelled to rely upon that, never having wasted his precious time learning how to multiply 11x16.8. Consider what this principle of education means. It means a population which not only uses machines as a convenience but has been made so entirely dependent upon them that the ordinary man would not know how to find out whether the automatic calculator was accurate or whether it was honest. He could not even go to an expert and ask him to test the machine. For if two experts disagreed he would not know enough of the elements of arithmetic to have any ground for deciding which expert he ought to believe.

NOW IT IS, I believe, in this ever-widening separation from the elementary facts, the elementary truths, and the elementary necessities of human existence, that the profound confusion of modern men originate. All over the world, but most particularly in the countries where civilization is supposed to be most advanced, there are collected in great cities huge masses of people who have lost their roots in the earth beneath them and their knowledge of the fixed stars in the heavens above them. They are the crowds that drift with all the winds that blow, and are caught up at last in the great hurricanes.

They are the people who eat but no longer know how their food is grown, who work and no longer see what they help to produce, who hear all the latest news and all the latest opinions but have no philosophy by which they can distinguish the true from the false, the credible from the incredible, the good from the bad. Is it so surprising that as civilization has become more streamlined, democracy has become more unworkable.

For these masses without roots, these crowds without convictions, are the spiritual proletariat of the modern age, and the eruption of their volcanic and hysterical energy is the revolution that is shaking the world. They are the chaos in which the new Caesars are born.

NO ONE NEED delude himself into thinking that there is a quick and easy remedy at hand, or that one will be found until enough men have mustered up the courage to see the malady without flinching. But we can perhaps discern, though dimly as yet, the direction in which we must go.

We can do this by recovering and remembering the enduring truths about man and his relations with other men, and about the government of men, which in the modern age we have been too sophisticated, too restless, too remote from reality and too uneducated to comprehend.

Thus it is always true that if the forces of the law are not indisputably stronger than all other force, the law will perish. It is always true that a society is dissolving in which the privileges of the few are greater than their services, in which the rights of the many are greater than their duties. It is always true that men must earn their living in the sweat of their brows, and that there is no streamlined substitute for this perennial necessity. It is always true that the object of policy within a state must be to protect individuals and natural communities in the property on which and by which they earn their living, and thus to attach them to the state not by commands and doles and slogans but by their immediate and self-respecting interest. It is always true that the accumulation of property is an evil whether it be in the hands of a plutocracy or of a socialist or fascist state. For it is always true that the arrival of masses without property will in the end destroy a civilization.

It is always true that a society of free men is a society of men with secure and sufficient property. It is always true that individuals cannot be free if their community is not independent. It is always true that independence has to be maintained by the willingness to fight and die for it. And finally it is true that men will not have the will to live or the courage to die if they have ceased to believe that they are in communion with things that transcend entirely their personal affairs.

ARE THESE TRUISMS? Or are these truths, enduring truths, that modern men have forgotten, have rejected, and have violated to their own confusion and despair?

It is not the fashion to believe that there are truths, like these, which are indeed fundamental and universal. For the modern man has persuaded himself that nothing is really true, and that all truths are just the convenient opinions of a class or of a nation at a particular moment. But this disbelief in the existence of a central tradition of human wisdom is the philosophy of the spiritual proletariat. This feeling, which pervades the great urban centers, that all things are relative and impermanent and of no real importance, is merely the reflection of their own separation from the elementary experiences of humanity. And the bitter, frustrated and aimless skepticism of the modern man is itself the consequence of the modern disease of which he is the victim.

Wilhelm's Interests

"Doorn.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm, now 79, was host to a meeting of archeologists here today and read a paper on the 'Origin and Use of the Baldachin or Ecclesiastical Canopy.' He recently declared he was not interested in anything less than 2,000 years old."—News Item.)

Ecclesiastical canopies.
Their origin and use,
Are major issues to me now;
I find there's small excuse
For fretting over modern things;
The issues of today
Are trifles and of no account
Or consequence, I say.

II.

The baldachin of ancient times—
My heart warms up to that;
Beside it topics of the times
Are very, very flat;
The customs back in Babylon
To me mean so much more
Than anything that's happened
Since I lost the well-known war.

III.

What happened in the ancient days—
I find intriguing now.
Beyond all present problems
And the planet's latest row;
Two thousand years back I must go
Or more if I would find
An item of importance fit
To occupy my mind.

IV.

I read of acts in Germany,
I hear of Hitler's views;
Those scraps that break out day by day
I follow in the news,
But I am nine and seventy,
And all the things that I
Once thought of as important seem
Mere hassenpfeffer-pie.

V.

Monotheism I'll discuss,
And chat of ancient Greece;
I am not interested in
The budgets, war or peace;
Der Fuehrer's plans for Germany—
His victories by bluff
Don't fascinate me, not one bit,
It's all such modern stuff!

VI.

I'll talk of archeologists,
And cheer their doings. Whee!
What they dig up in Nineveh
Is red-hot stuff to me.
I do not care for Goebbels or
For Goering's latest plan;
The guy who fascinates me is
The Neolithic man.

VII.

From world affairs I turn my head;
Quite frankly what I see
Would drive most anybody nuts—
The way it's driven me.
The ancient times now hold my mind—
All else now leaves me blue;
If you'd been through what I have you
Would go that far back, too.

Lehman Race Outshadowed

By Mark Sullivan

Wagner Vs. O'Brian

THE REPUBLICANS in New York place their major emphasis on electing their candidate for Governor, Mr. Dewey, as against the Democrats' Mr. Lehman. It is the natural thing. It happens, where there are contests for both Governor and Senator, that each party puts its major emphasis on electing the so-called head of the ticket, the candidate for Governor, on the theory that the head carries the rest of the ticket.

SULLIVAN

But in the present New York campaign there are circumstances which suggest the Republicans might do well to shift their major emphasis from the governorship to the senior senatorship, from electing Dewey over Lehman to electing Republican John Lord O'Brian over Democratic Senator Wagner. Wagner would be a better point of attack than Lehman.

In the first place, so far as the Republicans reflect resistance to radicalism, defeat of Gov. Lehman is not imperatively necessary. Mr. Lehman is no radical. He is no New Dealer, no 100 per cent Roosevelt man—in spite of whatever appearances may be arranged, and whatever silences Mr. Lehman may practice for the purposes of the campaign.

WHEN MR. ROOSEVELT'S Court measure was in the Senate, Gov. Lehman made a strong declaration against it—although as a Governor he was not called upon to take a stand. He was deliberately dramatic. He wrote a public letter to Senator Wagner calling on him to oppose the Court measure. Had Mr. Lehman been content merely to take a position in an ordinary way, he could have given out an ordinary statement to the press. Or he could have written a congratulatory letter to the other Democratic Senator from New York, Mr. Copeland, who already opposed the Court measure. For what Gov. Lehman did, Mr. Roosevelt was resentful and still is, even though he, like Mr. Lehman, may preserve appearances during this campaign.

Mr. Lehman's position within the Democratic Party is somewhere near the middle of the road. Mr. Lehman is as far away from the extreme radical end of the Democratic Party as Mr. Dewey is from the extreme conservative end of the Republican Party. Contest between Mr. Lehman and Mr. Dewey is contest between two men who, as respects the current national humanitarian issues, are in not greatly differing positions. Election of Mr. Dewey may be desirable from the standpoint of the Republicans as a party, and from the point of view internal within New York. But defeat of Lehman is not overwhelmingly imperative from the national point of view of resisting radicalism.

ON THE OTHER HAND, defeat of Democratic Senator Wagner is decidedly desirable from the standpoint of checking radicalism. Mr. Wagner is the author of the Wagner labor act. This act is the parent of the National Labor Relations Board. This board condones the sit-down strike as practiced by the Committee for Industrial Organization, C. I. O.

That the labor board discriminates in favor of C. I. O. is charged by the older labor organization, the American Federation of Labor. A member of the Labor Board, Mr. Donald Wakefield Smith, who came to the end of his term and was reappointed by President Roosevelt, will come before the next Senate for confirmation. A. F. L. opposes him. C. I. O. supports him. A. F. L. has existed 60 years, and never gave rise to fear of communism. C. I. O. has existed two years, and has given rise, justly or not, to fear of communism. It seems to me a fact that four related conditions—Senator Wagner's labor act, the attitude of the Labor Board, the sit-down strike and C. I. O.—compose a mechanism which can be used to carry America into a Communist form of society.

IT WOULD NOT be fair to blame Senator Wagner if he did not foresee the chain of conditions that has flowed from his labor act. But the chain is now here and is a foremost issue. If Senator Wagner has disapproved it I have not seen his disavowal. If he is willing to accept the modifications of his labor act which A. F. L. proposes, I have not observed his saying so.

The opponent whom the Republicans nominated against Senator Wagner, Mr. John Lord O'Brian, is equipped to be as able a Senator as ever sat in the body. In social point of view he was a liberal long before Mr. Roosevelt and the New Dealers committed larceny of the term "liberal" for use as a cloak over an eccentric combination of extreme radicalism with extreme reaction. Mr. O'Brian promoted some features of the New Deal before the New Deal existed. As a first-rank lawyer with a social outlook, Mr. O'Brian in the Senate would give especial service in separating the sound and workable parts of recent legislation from the parts that must be sloughed off.

Lights Go Out

The Destruction Of Old Values

IMPORTANT AS they undoubtedly are, the changes that recently occurred in the political map of Europe are very much less important than the changes in the moral climate that accompanied and have followed the redrawing of boundary lines.

Before Munich, the frontiers of freedom in Europe were already very narrow. The black belt of totalitarianism stretched from the Baltic to the Adriatic. Democracy was limited to the western and northern periphery of the continent and the political island that was Czechoslovakia. But outside of Germany and Italy, the lights of liberty and tolerance, the standards and values of the past, continued to flicker, however feebly.

There was always the possibility that, were the great democratic powers to show some vigor, the quasi-dictatorships that dotted the continent might be replaced by more liberal regimes. But that is now a possibility of the past. The outlook is for less rather than more freedom, if not as a result of internal compulsion as a consequence of external pressure.

IN THE HOUSE of Commons the other day, Premier Chamberlain was complacent about Germany's economic expansion in the southeast of Europe. It involved, he suggested, no sinister political motives. It has its limits, because while the major international market of those countries happens to be Germany, they can, "as a rule, only obtain payment from Germany either in the form of goods, barter arrangement, or by blocked marks." On the other hand Britain continues to be a free and hence a more desirable market.

If Germany's domination of central and southeastern Europe were only a question of trade expansion, others besides Mr. Chamberlain might take a complacent and even hopeful view of it. Unforunately, it involves far more than that. It involves also the tacit or open acceptance of German hegemony which means at least the partial application in those countries of the philosophy of the Third Reich.

IT IS HARDLY surprising that the Munich accord has been followed by a growth of anti-Semitism even in countries, such as Czechoslovakia, which were free of it. It is also not surprising that every nation directly or indirectly under the thumb of the Third Reich has found it necessary to take measures to restrict freedom of speech and the press, at least so far as discussions of Germany are concerned.

This is proving to be the case even in that ancient citadel of freedom, Switzerland. Squeezed between the German and Italian variants of totalitarianism, the Swiss are beginning to temper the wind to the shorn lamb. Others are doing the same. And made heady by their success the Nazis are demanding that even the great powers do likewise. Hitler's speech at Saarbruecken was a case in point.

The Frankfurter Zeitung has followed up the Fuehrer's attack on Eden, Churchill and Duff Cooper by declaring that:

"As long as Churchill and Lloyd George are able to deliver provocative radio speeches across the ocean, even if their own government disavows them, we cannot suppose that England's public opinion is really ready for understanding. . . . All further progress must, therefore, be preceded by a final clarification within England and France."

In other words, the price of appeasement with Germany must be the destruction of freedom at home. Who knows but that it may be paid? Mr. Chamberlain, too, finds the speeches of Churchill and Lloyd George not to his liking. "It is not one of the characteristics of totalitarian states, at any rate," said the British premier, "that they are accustomed to foul their own nests." In this particular, obviously, Mr. Chamberlain would have Britain follow the German and Italian examples.

THE DESTRUCTION of old standards and values is not limited to the political sphere; it has spread like a plague to the sphere of human relations. There is something horrible in the spectacle of Germany and Poland rounding up thousands of innocent individuals for deportation because, in the one case, they were of Polish, in the other of German nationality and keep them penned up for days, like cattle prepared for slaughter. It is even more horrible that the world watches such proceedings with numb indifference. We have grown callous to wholesale suffering.

Nor is this degrading spectacle of men being treated like beasts limited to the Old World. The action of the Mexican government in deporting 200 refugees, who had previously been granted visas to enter the country, shows that the virus of inhumanity has penetrated this hemisphere. Some of these unfortunates came out of concentration camps. They will certainly return there. For this action the supposedly liberal government of Mexico will stand discredited before the civilized world.

BY CONTRAST with what is taking place in the world today the worst that happened a generation ago seems tame and mild. The regime of the Kaiser, the rule of the Czar, they were liberal in comparison with the kind of governments that obtain now. The Dark Ages have come back.

Argentine Firm Upheld By Md. Appeals Court

Annapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—A State court of appeals opinion today reached halfway around the world to uphold a Buenos Aires grain firm in London transactions which cost a Baltimore firm $3,348.

Crawford, Keen & Co., Buenos Aires, obtained a judgment for that amount against P. Obrecht & Sons, Baltimore, for failure to take delivery on 500 tons of feed flour.

The original award of the Baltimore court was upheld by the appellate court.

Pedestrian Control

Control of pedestrians as a means of reducing traffic fatalities has been discussed in Washington for a number of years. It is rather discouraging to realize that only now have the District Commissioners appointed a special committee to draft the necessary regulations to inaugurate that safety plan.

Fortunately, however, there is no attempt to offset this delay by the hasty adoption of pedestrian control measures. To rush through a set of regulations without adequate study and preparation would be worse than further delay.

Every step outlined by the Commissioners in preparation for this experiment is essential to insure the most satisfactory results. Pedestrian control systems operating in other cities will be studied. Regulations will then be carefully drafted by traffic and legal experts. And the reaction of the public to the proposal will be ascertained. With these precautions taken, the possibility of a blunder will be reduced to a minimum.

The effort to ascertain the will of the public is especially desirable. There would not be much chance for the success of pedestrian control regulations which did not have widespread public support. Before civic groups are asked to state their conclusions, however, thorough discussion of the issue is desirable. People naturally resent regulation of their movements on foot. On the other hand, every citizen ought to face the fact that more than 70 per cent of those killed in traffic accidents are pedestrians. And in a large percentage of the cases the authorities have concluded that these victims have been responsible for their own slaughter.

If pedestrian control can be made effective in stopping this useless waste of life, it would be a small price to pay.

Japan Reveals Her Hand

Thus far there has been no formal reply from Tokyo to the American note of October 6 demanding that the Open Door in China be kept open and that Japan cease infringing upon American rights and interests in that country. It is not unlikely, when that reply is made, that it will consist, as in the past, of warm protestations of innocence and vehement denials of wrongdoing.

The course Japan actually plans to follow in China, has in the meantime been clearly outlined in the declaration of policy issued yesterday. The Tokyo government has set forth in scarcely veiled terms its intention of extending Japanese hegemony over all eastern Asia. The new order which Japan seeks to establish in Asia, says the statement, "will have for its foundation a tripartite relationship of mutual aid and co-ordination between Japan, Manchukuo and China in the political, economic, cultural and other fields. The object is to secure international justice, to perfect a joint defense against communism, to create a new culture and to realize close economic cohesion throughout east Asia."

Translated into practical terms, this means that China, if she is to be permitted to enjoy even the nominal independence vouchsafed to Manchukuo, must place her foreign policy, her educational system and her economic life at Japan's disposal even as is the case in Manchukuo. That is what Japan means by "co-operation."

To secure that "co-operation" from the Chinese will prove no easy matter despite the optimistic note struck in the Japanese statement. For 16 months China has fought against the effort to put a "made in Tokyo" yoke around her neck. Chiang Kai-shek and his government have indicated that they have not the slightest intention to stop. As long as there are Chinese armies in the field to fight the invaders the war will go on. This the Japanese now recognize. Indeed, Finance Minister Ikeda has seen fit to warn his nation once more that still greater sacrifices are ahead, that the budget will mount and that the total of national bonds to be issued "to meet the budgetary shortage will reach a considerable figure."

It is, perhaps, for the very reason that the task of subjugating China is proving far more formidable than was anticipated that Japan has now seen fit to lift the earlier ban on dealing with the Kuomintang government. Like China herself, the national government is to be allowed to exist as an entity provided it agrees to "join in the establishment of a new order," in other words provided it agrees to become the willing puppet of Tokyo.

New Housing Program?

President Roosevelt's discussion of a new housing program for families in the low income group who have no prospect of benefiting from slum clearance projects raises more questions than it answers. There is no doubt as to the need for better housing of a type that can be rented for $5 to $10 per room per month. But whether or not it is practical for private industry to supply this need, without subsidization, is quite a different matter.

One encouraging aspect of the discussion is the President's recognition of the fact that the entire problem of substandard housing can not be solved by granting Federal subsidies. Use of Government funds to provide decent, safe and sanitary living quarters for all families now lacking such accommodations would impose a staggering burden on the Federal Treasury. Certainly if the upper strata of the low income group are to be rehoused, it will have to be done by private industry or public agencies working without cost to taxpayers.

President Roosevelt speaks of dwellings that will cost in the neighborhood of $3,500. These would be constructed by private enterprise for families of a higher income group than those served by the United States Housing Authority. Some of the projects financed and subsidized by the latter agency will cost more than $6,400 per dwelling unit. A considerable part of that expense is accounted for by the necessity of wiping out slums. But even when that extra expense is written off, the cost of subsidized, nonprofit dwellings for low-income families is still substantially greater than the cost proposed by the President for private-built homes for a somewhat higher income group.

That fact naturally leads to the suggestion that if any one in the Administration knows how further to reduce building costs the information should be first submitted to the USHA.

Incidentally, it should be noted that the rentals mentioned by the President are approximately the same as those charged by the local Alley Dwelling Authority for dwellings built without subsidy in slum areas. Perhaps the ADA holds a partial solution of the problem with which the President is struggling. Of course, that agency has the advantage of low interest rates since its funds are borrowed from the public by the Federal Treasury. Moreover, the ADA operates without profit. Certainly some profit would be essential to lure private enterprise into this field of low-cost housing.

No doubt a lower income group could also be reached through the machinery now operated by the FHA. Ample mortgage money is reported to be available in nearly all parts of the country at relatively low interest rates. With these funds, private industry has an opportunity to build homes for income groups that could not previously be reached. It is reasonable to expect constructive development of this system so that lower rentals will be possible. By that means the President's objective may in time be at least partly achieved.

Such a gradual evolution of the FHA system would be a very different matter, however, from the inauguration of a new program separate from either the FHA or the USHA. Housing is necessarily divided between slum clearance, a public function, and the construction of homes as a commercial venture, which is a function of private industry. Within these respective fields the need is for co-ordination of policy. A third housing program might confuse and seriously jeopardize the vital work of existing agencies.

A Realistic Approach

The shift in the French cabinet which has brought Paul Reynaud into the finance ministry is, of course, too recent to warrant any surmises as to the consequences of the change. It is, however, encouraging to have this important post filled by a man who has a reputation for courage as well as for moderate conservatism.

Long the leading proponent of franc devaluation, M. Reynaud is now convinced that the problem confronting France is no longer monetary, but economic and financial. In other words, the alarms that have kept the French currency in a state of instability for so long stem from domestic disorders resulting in loss of confidence, flight of capital and refusal of investors to support the financial plans of the government.

It is an old story—this popular lack of confidence in the ability of successive French governments to put through essential reforms. At least M. Reynaud has made a propitious start by dispelling to a certain extent fears of further monetary manipulation and increasing hopes that the tripartite monetary agreement may be salvaged.

With less than two weeks before expiry of the decree powers conferred a month ago upon the present government, the new finance minister faces the formidable task of trying to outline a program of domestic reform that will be drastic enough to meet the emergency and at the same time not so far-reaching as to encounter the kind of opposition which has defeated earlier efforts to find a solution for France's international economic disorders.

Foreign Trade Problems

As Secretary Hull pointed out in his address before the National Foreign Trade Convention, the trade agreements program is based upon sound and constructive principles designed to strengthen economic ties among nations and by that token to further the cause of world peace. The one outstanding weakness of Mr. Hull's speech lies in its omissions, not in its affirmations of belief in the policies that this country has been following since he assumed his present office.

There can be no denying that an extensive and increasing area of the earth's surface is now outside the orbit of those countries with which we can effect trade pacts on the basis of most-favored-nation treatment. That, of course, is no reason why we should lose hope or relax efforts to reach accords with nations sharing our views and ready to acquiesce in our policies. But we are under no necessity of choosing, as Secretary Hull assumes, between the principles upon which our commercial policy is founded and adherence to a system of "ever-increasing economic isolation."

The real question before us today is how we are to conduct business with those countries that do not share our views but strive to attain increasing self-sufficiency with all that the system implies in the way of regimentation, lowering of living standards and loss of individual liberties.

The fact that Americans who believe in democratic ideals are thoroughly hostile to such a system does not mean that commercial intercourse with authoritarian states will be cut off. But it does involve serious problems of adaptation which we cannot afford to ignore. Assistant Secretary of State Messersmith emphasized that fact very strongly in his address before the Foreign Trade Council.

"We are living," he said, "in a world in which a country such as ours, firmly dedicated to the maintenance of certain principles in its practice among its own people and in the practice of its foreign relations, is obliged to face problems in the conduct of its relations with other states which up to a few years ago it would have considered altogether fantastic. Just as we have to meet these new problems in our major relationships with states, so the individual and the business organizations will find the same questions to be met in the relationships they have heretofore maintained beyond our frontiers."

If we are to pursue a realistic policy in accordance with Mr. Messersmith's advice, we cannot confine discussion to general principles or pretend that we live in a world sharply divided into those countries with which we can do business and those beyond the trading pale. Moreover, the struggle for world trade is not waged exclusively between authoritarian states on the one side and liberal nations, prepared to accord equal treatment to all, on the other.

As speakers before the Foreign Trade Convention pointed out, the bitterest competition between the conflicting trade systems has been waged for the favors of those not committed to either system. Countries like Germany, for instance, have held out strong inducements to nations with surplus raw materials to deliver goods to them in exchange for their own exports. The result has been to deprive our export industries of trade in some cases and often to deprive the "tied" nations of opportunities to dispose of their products in the most profitable markets.

When authoritarian states relying upon exclusive bilateral pacts resort to such practices, we have to face a real problem of economic preparedness against aggression. That necessity was brought out very clearly by the president of the Foreign Trade Council, Eugene P. Thomas. His remarks do not contravene, but admirably supplement, the generalizations of Secretary Hull. For, after stating that it is our first duty to "assert our economic leadership to assure the complete adherence and support of all liberal trading nations," Mr. Thomas concluded by saying that we must be ready to treat with nations pursuing nationalistic trade policies, "with a view to improving the mechanics of trade with them and limiting trade conflicts so far as possible."

This is a genuinely realistic policy involving no surrender in principle of Secretary Hull's objectives. The principle of reciprocity and most-favored-nation treatment can be upheld without arousing a spirit of antagonism among nations adhering to a different commercial policy.

Wants A "Firm Stand"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We have seen Germany's irritation caused by "American meddling in European affairs," and it proves just how much weight the statements of the President carry in Germany. Before the Munich pact the President wrote two notes to the Nazi dictator asking for a peaceful settlement of the matter. These notes had a tremendous influence at that time. Today we see that the words of Roosevelt are being heeded and resented in Germany. If only the United States would take a definite stand on further aggression by the Nazi-Fascist countries, it would do more toward curbing such moves than all of the diplomatic forces of France and England.

Although the United States is not entirely ready as yet to be able to back up anything that it might say to the European powers by actual armed force, it is still a major power to be feared by the countries of Europe.

A firm stand on the European situation by the United States would definitely pave the way for a lasting peace in this world. There can be no doubt that Germany, at this time, fears us. But if Hitler can get away with anything in Europe and expect silence and neutrality on the part of the United States he will do it.

The United States must show Europe that it fears no power in the world although it wants no war. After all, the threat of fascism in the United States is not a very pleasant prospect. And, certainly, if this country continues to allow England to bungle as arbitrator in Europe and permit the spread and growth of fascism, that is what will inevitably happen to us. Let's speak now and save bullets afterward.

Kin Of Franklin

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have at my side a clipping from The Post March 31, 1938, headed "Two Women, Nearest Living Kin of Benjamin Franklin."

They evidently forgot that my sister, Mrs. William D. Baldwin, and I are their first cousins. Our mothers were sisters—granddaughters of Sally (Franklin) Bache; her son, Richard Bache, jr., had several daughters and sons. Sophia married Richard Irwin. Matilda, the mother of the two ladies, was married to Gen. William Emory. My mother, Henrietta Constantia Bache, married Charles Abert, second son of the late Col. John James Abert, chairman of the Topographical Engineers.

I do not understand how my cousins overlooked us.

Reactions To The Radio Panic

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Does no one in the United States read? Why the furor over the very excellent portrayal of H. G. Wells' "War of the Worlds," by Orson Welles and his "Mercury Theater" on October 30? Or was it all a publicity stunt?

I can't imagine an intelligent person who has not read Wells' story and thrilled to the excitement in that highly imaginative piece of fiction. Even people who never buy a book because they already have one should be able to read the "Radio Time Table;" and if they can't read and are listening to a radio program, can't they hear when an announcer says this is a "play"? As an example of gross ignorance and pure, childish stupidity, Sunday night's exhibition beats everything in the paper for weeks. The people who were "angry" were the most ridiculous of all—one is always angry when one is made to look foolish.

More power to Orson Welles and Columbia Broadcasting Company; may they continue to do things to shame Americans into the necessity of learning, at least, to read.

DOROTHY M. WHITE.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps nothing in these days tends better to show the mental attitude of a large number of our people than their crazy reaction to Sunday night's sensational radio theater broadcast. There have been numerous evidences of hysteria throughout the Nation of late, but this one tops them all. It is unequaled. No wonder we are sometimes the laughing stock of the world and held up to ridicule by other powers.

The cause of Sunday night's hysteria is not difficult to find. The all-night life, the senseless barbaric swing music, questionable songs, drinking parties, wild, drunken driving and other poise-wrecking activities have brought forth so many disgraceful and tragic results that in a great number mental stability has been almost destroyed. The name, "jitterbug," can properly be applied to many, but thank goodness all Americans are not jumpy. Some day, let us hope, we will get back to real American home life and sane living. The apparent preference for the ignoble, the irresponsible, careless and degrading, will not last forever, and I hope I may live to see the United States upon the upgrade again—educationally, morally and mentally. I. L. G.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: No American newspaperman would willfully bring his country into disrepute or hold its people up to ridicule, and yet these are the net effects of the detailed stories of the hysteria produced among a few thousand persons out of all America's millions as a result of the absurdly realistic broadcast of Wells' "War of the Worlds."

These stories of "mass hysteria," indicating a horrible case of jitters on the part of our population, have already been placed before the chancelleries of many nations. It is all the more deplorable that they convey a totally false impression. Except for the scattered cases of ignorant or excitable people who telephoned police and newspapers in many cities, there was nothing approximating mass hysteria. I walked along F street at the hour of this broadcast. In many stores radios were going, yet I observed nothing whatsoever of the absurd supposed "terror of the populace." There was none.

But the main point is that stories of scattered evidences of fear that "the Martians are coming" will create abroad a contempt for American excitability, which it may require strong measures—otherwise unnecessary—to eradicate.

A. McK. GRIGGS.
Washington, Oct. 31.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the Sunday night broadcast of a fantastic war play, the panic which apparently aired itself throughout the entire country goes to show how inattentively the public listens to the radio. After the panic which the broadcast aroused, a voice finally stated: "It was announced four times during the performance that the play was a creation of the imagination of H. G. Wells." ISABEL VICKERS.

Toujours de l'Audace

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the slogans of the Communists is "Audacity and still more audacity." They are certainly living up to their slogan in their vilification of the Dies committee. Whatever one may think of the committee's methods of procedure, the bald facts remain that in the Michigan sit-down auto strikes, one group seized and held the properties of another group, in direct defiance of a court order, and under threats of irreparably damaging millions of dollars worth of fine machinery. When the sheriff sought to enforce the court order, he found his force insufficient. He called upon Gov. Murphy for aid, and it was denied. Now, no one will deny that the foregoing is a fair statement of what actually happened.

The apologists for Gov. Murphy seek to excuse his surrender to forces of lawlessness and violence by pointing out that by continuing negotiations he avoided possible bloodshed.

The point is that there should never be any compromise with lawlessness. It is a mistake to take the position that the mere preservation of human life is of such paramount importance as to dwarf all other considerations. Whenever the sovereignty of the Government itself is challenged by any group which seeks to enforce its views by force and in open defiance of law and order, then Government set up by the people of their own free choice is still supreme. President Cleveland took that position during his Administration, and he has been applauded for it ever since.

Our newspapers told us last week that the President of the United States had "warned" Japan in stern tones that American rights must be respected, and it was predicted that the next Congress would be called upon to vote billions for a great rearmament program. It takes more than the mere mechanical devices that money can buy to provide a well-armed nation. It takes men, loyal men, men who put the welfare of their country ahead of their own immediate advantage.

It is idle for this country to "warn" Japan or any other nation about anything, because if we became involved in war, we would be in more danger from within than from without. And all because we have permitted a doctrine to spread that any excess against law, order and general decency is justifiable if done in the name of "labor." Well, we all labor. The doctor who leaves his bed at night to tend his patient, and the nurse who cools the fevered brow through the long night watches, both labor. The small merchant who tries to keep his little business going, meet his pay rolls, and pay his taxes, labors.

Those of us who are unorganized are getting rather tired of having our country's welfare jeopardized and our own affairs kept in constant turmoil by lawless radicals. More power to the Dies committee. It is doing an important and useful work.

COMMON SENSE.

Satiric Note

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My heart nearly breaks these mornings when I open my Post and read of these millions of unemployed carpenters, electricians, plumbers, plasterers, paperhangers, stone masons, bricklayers, painters, auto mechanics, etc., who are all out of jobs because of these wicked married women. The Post Impressionist

Radio-Therapy

ALTHOUGH I was within 40 miles of the landing of the Martians in New Jersey on the night of October 30 I was happily oblivious of the event. The children wanted to hear Charlie McCarthy, and they stuck with his program to the mocking end. I doubt that they were entirely conscious that he is a block of wood, animated by an exterior intelligence. To that extent they fell into the same credulity as those who, after hearing part of the more highly powered program, packed their most precious possessions and started to leave their homes.

None of us will ever know just what we would have done if we had heard the program. Would Daddy have been bright enough to realize what was going on? Would Betsy have believed him, or would Phebe, if he had told them it was all make-believe? Could parental wisdom hope to rival the radio; a parental wisdom too often ignorant of what products to recommend as aids to supernal beauty, glowing health, brilliant teeth, radiant hair, mental growth, night's rest, and what not? Besides, with Betsy a sophomore in high school, who could have contradicted her if she chose to declare the radio broadcast genuine and the end of our lives imminent and horrible?

Yet the next morning—though after what an evening and night of disagreement—the truth of the matter would have appeared. The amusement of the neighbors, the excited chattering and reminiscences over the telephone, the cold light of newspaper print reporting the hoax, and the manifest fact that there was school to be confronted as usual, would have brought their own peculiar comfort. Instead of finding it difficult, as they did, to believe that so many persons had been frightened out of their wits, they would have accustomed themselves gradually to the fact that the world was still safe; at least from last night's Martians.

As it is, those who heard the broadcast and those who did not alike look back upon it as something like a dream—a nightmare in which the whole country shared. And the subconscious effects of it are probably also like those of a dream. No doubt in the course of time some eminent psychoanalyst will get around to that feature of it and bring forth strictures on the whole affair that may reach print, or may not, depending upon how unsettling they may be, in turn, to the tranquillity of our 130,000,000 imaginations.

One aspect of the matter occurs to me that in its way is as disastrous as the original broadcast in unsettling the placid faith of the citizenry. Disastrous, that, is to broadcasters of many varieties, although perhaps not so unfortunate for listeners. It arises from the analogy with dreams. For somewhere or other I have seen the thought expressed that there is a therapeutic value in nightmares and bad dreams. They help to preserve our sanity, although momentarily appearing to threaten it. Like tales of horror they raise us to a point of dread, and then let us sink back comfortably onto the elderdown of our illusions by turning out not to be true. By exaggerating our anxieties and then wiping them out as unreal, they make it possible for us consciously and sanely to do the same with our waking fears.

Applied to the radio and the sort of thing that comes over it, the hoax of October 30 may turn out to have the same kind of wholesome effect. When former Senator Crisis next addresses an impassioned 45 minutes of oratory to his great unseen audience, many of his hearers, with passing thanks to Orson Welles, may conceivably reach for another bonbon and tell themselves comfortably that this also is possibly not true. When His Excellency the Mikado of Glare, or His High Mightiness the Suzerain of Moronia, blares boldly to five continents his ultimatum as to what will happen if he doesn't have his way, even the premiers and chancellors of the world may pause and ask themselves whether this, too, is not a piece of too realistic fiction.

Perhaps even little Phebe, in listening to the persuasive accents of the Voice of Youth, telling of the marvelous effects of eating Desiccated Healthies cooked in Salto's Salinated Brine, may question whether she will not have as bright eyes if she eats what her mother puts before her. Perhaps.

"Sheer Cruelty"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I wish to protest the trick [illegible] the Columbia Broadcasting System perpetrated Sunday night. I refer to the Mercury Theater of the Air program.

My aged mother was made seriously ill by it and my three children were terrified so that it was impossible to calm them for a long time afterwards. It was sheer cruelty on the partof the instigator of the program. It is incredible that there should be in authoritative positions in radio persons so devoid of understanding of human emotional reactions that they would sanction such a broadcast.

Moreover, announcements made as if emanating from various Government officials had every evidence of being official pronouncements.

Who is to pay for all of the needless expense incurred because of this hoax?

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Bottled Pep

IN THESE DAYS when condition often makes the difference between victory and defeat in the final quarter of a big football game I sometimes recall a rebuff by Fielding H. Yost, that stout abstainer and prohibitionist who has walked these many years up to his eyes in incoherent old grads and never gnawed a dram. One afternoon Mr. Yost stood on the football field at Princeton watching a rather indifferent Michigan team go through the figures of the morrow's work against the Tiger and remarked that they lacked the old pepper. Rather brightly I suggested that some fighters when they went stale, including James J. Corbett—surely the most intelligent of them all—broke training with a crash, preferably on champagne, and when the swelling had abated came back better than ever.

"Now, if, instead of that water bucket, you were to send a half-dozen champagne coolers on the field along in the third quarter," I proposed, "you would see a surprising revival of spirits, or that which you call the old pepper."

MR. YOST TURNED a cold glare on the author of this heretical idea and walked away from an evil presence muttering, "Champagne wine! Champagne wine! I have never had a drunkard on a team of mine and never will."

Well, it was just an idea, tossed off as casually as that, but from knowledge, nevertheless, that before prohibition some football trainers brought their men along on ale and that in the ring some gladiators were known to take a small knock at a bottle of brandy between rounds when their knees began to flutter, and came back raging.

And even during prohibition one of the most painful social errors of the very elaborate social side of football nearly destroyed a fine old friendship between the business manager and the press agent of a famous team when the business manager phoned the social headquarters late in the evening and asked how things were going. It was common practice to buy several of those burlap hams of rye from some reliable bootlegger, set it out on the tables in several connecting rooms of the social headquarters in a big hotel and revive college memories far into the night.

ABOUT 10 O'CLOCK this night the business manager phoned and asked if the merrymaking was proceeding without undue bloodshed, and the publicity manager gayly replied: "Oh, yes, sir; yes, sir, indeed, sir; indeed, to be sure, yes, and the wine was wunnerful."

"What wine?"

"Why, the champagne wine," said the publicity man. "Everybody had some as long as it lasted, and it was cer'nly mighty fine, sir."

"That wine," the business manager said bitterly, "was for the team."

So, from piecing together bits of random information, I long ago arrived at the belief that Mr. Yost's fierce contempt for a mere mention of an idea then believed to be unique was not entirely just. He may have had no drunkards on any team of his, but other coaches had not been above recruiting as a ringer to help them through in grave emergencies the giant who lives in a bottle.

THERE MAY BE others who can match the experience of some who played for Washington and Lee against Virginia Polytechnic Institute about 1915 or 1916, a game which dragged through two listless quarters on a stifling autumn day and came brilliantly to life in the second half when Washington and Lee left the locker room stepping high and handsome and singing as they went. A sodden, lifeless football team began throwing passes which floated like bubbles and danced on the fingers of receivers who seemed to delight in juggling the ball ere plucking it down.

There were shocking violations of all the standard formulas, play so unorthodox that the enemy, through their own training in football routine, could not believe what they saw, and Washington and Lee won by a couple of touchdowns from a water-cooled squad whose coach had lacked vision or provision, or both.

MY INFORMANT, who saw Fordham lose to Pitt last week, said Fordham apparently was just played out in the latter part of the game.

"So were we and so was V. P. I. that day," he added, "but between halves certain persons unknown distributed several bottles of an unknown liquid which bubbled and whispered mischievously as our brave lads held the bottle necks to their innocent lips. I know we won, but I forgot the exact score. As a matter of fact, I was blind."

It's An Ill Wind, Etc.

One of the unexpected results of hostilities in China is less slicing by golfers. Rubber restrictions having led all golf clubs to ration their sales of balls to two per golfer per day, the unskillful performer has been obliged to drop the effort to add another yard or two to his drive, and to concentrate instead on keeping his ball somewhere near the fairway. In the end this may lead to an improvement in the general standard of the game, though the immediate price in patience and self-control appears rather a high one. In the meantime, there appears to be an opening for that type of caddy said to be chiefly in demand in Scotland. 'So you're good at finding balls? Then find one, and we'll start the game the noo.'

Sometimes a crisis has happy results. A man and girl I know, playmates in their youth, eventually got engaged and, though they seemed to be very fond of each other, the man could not make up his mind to take the final plunge.

Now they are to be married at once. After being engaged to the girl for 11 years it has taken almost a war to bring him up to scratch.

Bi-Decennial Of Czech Independence

Prague.

TWENTY YEARS of Czechoslovak independence have passed. And now the struggle begins anew. Yesterday it was a struggle for freedom. But today it is a struggle of adaptation and for survival in the new alien world now forced on Czechoslovakia.

On October 14, 1918, Benes announced the formation of a provisional government. Four days later in Washington, Masaryk issued the declaration of independence. On October 28, 1918, in Prague, the country achieved its freedom.

This year October was to be a month of jubilee. Instead it opened with extreme disillusionment followed by days in which the national mood fluctuated violently between deep pessimism and forced optimism. The Prague of a month ago, steeling itself to meet threats of war, has changed completely. Gone are the criss-crossed tapes on window-panes to keep them from shattering in a bombardment, gone are the blue street lights invisible from the air. The city has regained its normal appearance, but its spirit has changed.

THE BETRAYAL by western democracies had a much deeper significance to Czechoslovakia than material losses. It struck at the roots of the national life. Since it sacrificed the country it made a failure of the whole state policy. It made a failure of 20 years' work; it even shook the very democratic doctrines on which the country was founded. The Czechs asked themselves: "Why the teachings of Masaryk, why the policy of Benes, if these led only to capitulation and disaster? Why didn't we, years ago, accept a 25-year nonaggression treaty with Germany instead of standing by the democracies of the west?"

Their resentment grew. Bookstores had to clear their windows of the writings of Masaryk and Benes, the founders and greatest leaders of Czechoslovakia. Newspapers began a bitter campaign against the former President. Anti-Semitism began to grow where formerly there was none. How much this was a bitter reaction, and how much it might have been instigated by German propaganda or pressure is hard to say. You cannot make a failure of a country's ideals and policy without jeopardizing its sense of values. Had there been a defeat, then there might have been an immediate resistance, but with a failure came, first, disillusionment and apathy. Later, the government itself started moving against the dangerous trend that made an easy target of Jews, Socialists and Free Masons.

NOW THE FIGHT is over; now it remains to readjust the country in order to survive as independently as possible. At Munich and Berlin the "Big Four" took away from Czechoslovakia any say as to her frontiers. They played havoc with her economics, broke her constitution and paralyzed her political policy. It seemed at first as if nothing was left. "Nothing," said a Czech, "except the refugees."

People here in Prague stared wide-eyed at newspaper maps, and crowded around bookshop windows to see where the new lines ran, to see what towns were lost, to learn what homes and relatives or friends are now in Germany. Step by step the borders moved in on all sides at the will of other powers.

It seemed as if the partition would never stop—five zones to Germany, two districts to Poland, other areas to Hungary. For a while there were rumors that Slovakia and Ruthenia might desert to find a more powerful protector than Prague. The Hungarians started pressing for a common frontier with Poland. Not until then were the brakes applied. Germany wanted to keep a corridor open to the east. The creeping frontiers came to a temporary standstill at the bidding of Berlin.

Day by day the Czechs gradually took stock of their material losses. "This," says a Czech pointing to a Tatra car, a delicate glass tray or a cotton drape, "this was made in Czechoslovakia." Then he adds sadly, "But now it is German." "These cucumbers were grown in Czechoslovakia, now they are German." Everywhere the same refrain, usually said bitterly under a coating of assumed amusement.

To date, according to the government's figures, the Czechs have lost 2,317 factories—including 64 per cent of their glass manufacture, 40 per cent of their textiles, 73 per cent of the toys, and many other industries. Already the newspapers are warning against wasting coal, as a month ago they were warning against wasting food in case of war. For today Czechoslovakia has lost 80 per cent of its brown coal and 55 per cent of its lignite, and now it will be dependent on imports from Germany.

THE FIGHT AGAINST German economic domination, which Czechoslovakia has waged with surprising success in the past, seems now to be ended. The question is how far that domination will go.

From the German standpoint it seems that Czechoslovakia should be kept as much an agricultural country as possible. With all Hitler's talk of Germany's right to have lands that will keep her in food, in taking Austria and the regions of Czechoslovakia, he has increased German industrial, but not agricultural production. Probably, therefore, Berlin will "favor" farming and "discourage" new enterprises, at least any which might export its products outside of Germany. But England, hoping perhaps to retrieve a fraction of the influence which Chamberlain lost at Munich, undoubtedly wants to lend money for the purpose of building up Czech industries.

And so the tug-of-war will be carried on. The Czechs themselves seem to be down but not beaten. Already new industries are reported getting under way. Economic reconstruction is now of prime importance for the life and independence of the country.

Political reconstruction is still the unknown factor in Czechoslovakia today. People are not thinking of the constitution which must be rewritten. They are always thinking and speaking of the immediate political changes which from day to day have been swinging the country further and further to the right. When Munich made a failure of the government foreign policy and made a success of the Nazi doctrine and all it stands for, it doomed to all practical intent the pro-French, pro-democratic orientation.

Those elements which had always been in favor of closer relations with Germany were given control. But the majority elements could not suddenly change their color and carry out a policy they had always resisted. The Agrarians always favored closer relations with the Reich, no doubt because of the German market for agricultural products. Now their influence is in the ascendancy, all the more so because the Agrarians had fewer members among the 850,000 Czechs sacrificed to Germany, than the several workers' parties.

IT IS QUITE impossible to tell where the country is going, or how fast it will get there. Talk with an Agrarian and he will be relatively optimistic. Germany is a good market. The peasant is not directly concerned whether or not Czechoslovakia will be able to build up her industries. On the other hand a Social Democrat will paint the blackest picture. He will probably tell you "Czechoslovakia now is going rapidly to the right; look what's happened in Slovakia already."

There the government has been handed over to the Slovak Catholic Party, which in the last elections was in a minority. That party was trying to take advantage of the misfortunes besetting the state until Prague entrusted it with the responsibility of negotiating the new frontiers with Hungary. It was an astute move, because otherwise the party would have opposed any decision from Prague.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Modern Malady

A FEW DAYS before the celebrated broadcast by Mr. Orson Welles a professor, who shall be nameless here, made a speech on the need for "streamlining" education. The computing machine, interest tables and other "finger tip" methods of solving once-hard problems have, said he, "done away with the need for much of the old 'rithmetic.'"

LIPPMANN.

THIS IS A MOST illuminating remark. As an indicator of what is most deeply and dangerously wrong with the modern world, the professor's statement could hardly, I think, be more exact.

"In a world of . . . automatic calculators," he explained, "the use made of numbers has changed." Eleven gallons of gasoline at 16.8 cents a gallon: We know where the attendant finds the answer, and we usually know it will be correct." Thus streamlined education means that the customer looks at the dial to see what the automatic calculator registers, and is compelled to rely upon that, never having wasted his precious time learning how to multiply 11x16.8. Consider what this principle of education means. It means a population which not only uses machines as a convenience but has been made so entirely dependent upon them that the ordinary man would not know how to find out whether the automatic calculator was accurate or whether it was honest. He could not even go to an expert and ask him to test the machine. For if two experts disagreed he would not know enough of the elements of arithmetic to have any ground for deciding which expert he ought to believe.

NOW IT IS, I believe, in this ever-widening separation from the elementary facts, the elementary truths, and the elementary necessities of human existence, that the profound confusion of modern men originate. All over the world, but most particularly in the countries where civilization is supposed to be most advanced, there are collected in great cities huge masses of people who have lost their roots in the earth beneath them and their knowledge of the fixed stars in the heavens above them. They are the crowds that drift with all the winds that blow, and are caught up at last in the great hurricanes.

They are the people who eat but no longer know how their food is grown, who work and no longer see what they help to produce, who hear all the latest news and all the latest opinions but have no philosophy by which they can distinguish the true from the false, the credible from the incredible, the good from the bad. Is it so surprising that as civilization has become more streamlined, democracy has become more unworkable.

For these masses without roots, these crowds without convictions, are the spiritual proletariat of the modern age, and the eruption of their volcanic and hysterical energy is the revolution that is shaking the world. They are the chaos in which the new Caesars are born.

NO ONE NEED delude himself into thinking that there is a quick and easy remedy at hand, or that one will be found until enough men have mustered up the courage to see the malady without flinching. But we can perhaps discern, though dimly as yet, the direction in which we must go.

We can do this by recovering and remembering the enduring truths about man and his relations with other men, and about the government of men, which in the modern age we have been too sophisticated, too restless, too remote from reality and too uneducated to comprehend.

Thus it is always true that if the forces of the law are not indisputably stronger than all other force, the law will perish. It is always true that a society is dissolving in which the privileges of the few are greater than their services, in which the rights of the many are greater than their duties. It is always true that men must earn their living in the sweat of their brows, and that there is no streamlined substitute for this perennial necessity. It is always true that the object of policy within a state must be to protect individuals and natural communities in the property on which and by which they earn their living, and thus to attach them to the state not by commands and doles and slogans but by their immediate and self-respecting interest. It is always true that the accumulation of property is an evil whether it be in the hands of a plutocracy or of a socialist or fascist state. For it is always true that the arrival of masses without property will in the end destroy a civilization.

It is always true that a society of free men is a society of men with secure and sufficient property. It is always true that individuals cannot be free if their community is not independent. It is always true that independence has to be maintained by the willingness to fight and die for it. And finally it is true that men will not have the will to live or the courage to die if they have ceased to believe that they are in communion with things that transcend entirely their personal affairs.

ARE THESE TRUISMS? Or are these truths, enduring truths, that modern men have forgotten, have rejected, and have violated to their own confusion and despair?

It is not the fashion to believe that there are truths, like these, which are indeed fundamental and universal. For the modern man has persuaded himself that nothing is really true, and that all truths are just the convenient opinions of a class or of a nation at a particular moment. But this disbelief in the existence of a central tradition of human wisdom is the philosophy of the spiritual proletariat. This feeling, which pervades the great urban centers, that all things are relative and impermanent and of no real importance, is merely the reflection of their own separation from the elementary experiences of humanity. And the bitter, frustrated and aimless skepticism of the modern man is itself the consequence of the modern disease of which he is the victim.

The Once Over

Wilhelm's Interests

"Doorn.—Former Kaiser Wilhelm, now 79, was host to a meeting of archeologists here today and read a paper on the 'Origin and Use of the Baldachin or Ecclesiastical Canopy.' He recently declared he was not interested in anything less than 2,000 years old."—News Item.)

Ecclesiastical canopies,
Their origin and use,
Are major issues to me now;
I find there's small excuse
For fretting over modern things;
The issues of today
Are trifles and of no account
Or consequence. I say.

II.

The baldachin of ancient times—
My heart warms up to that;
Beside it topics of the times
Are very, very flat;
The customs back in Babylon
To me mean so much more
Than anything that's happened
Since I lost the well-known war.

III.

What happened in the ancient days—
I find intriguing now.
Beyond all present problems
And the planet's latest row;
Two thousand years back I must go
Or more if I would find
An item of importance fit
To occupy my mind.

IV.

I read of acts in Germany,
I hear of Hitler's views;
Those scraps that break out day by day
I follow in the news.
But I am nine and seventy,
And all the things that I
Once thought of as important seem
Mere hassenpfeffer-pie.

V.

Monotheism I'll discuss,
And chat of ancient Greece;
I am not interested in
The budgets, war or peace;
Der Fuehrer's plans for Germany—
His victories by bluff
Don't fascinate me, not one bit,
It's all such modern stuff!

VI.

I'll talk of archeologists,
And cheer their doings. Whee!
What they dig up in Nineveh
Is red-hot stuff to me.
I do not care for Goebbels or
For Goering's latest plan;
The Neolithic man.

VII.

From world affairs I turn my head;
Quite frankly what I see
Would drive most anybody nuts—
The way it's driven me.
The ancient times now hold my mind—
All else now leaves me blue;
If you'd been through what I have you
Would go that far back, too.

Lehman Race Outshadowed

By Mark Sullivan

Wagner Vs. O'Brian

THE REPUBLICANS in New York place their major emphasis on electing their candidate for Governor, Mr. Dewey, as against the Democrats' Mr. Lehman. It is the natural thing. It happens, where there are contests for both Governor and Senator, that each party puts its major emphasis on electing the so-called head of the ticket, the candidate for Governor, on the theory that the head carries the rest of the ticket.

SULLIVAN

But in the present New York campaign there are circumstances which suggest the Republicans might do well to shift their major emphasis from the governorship to the senior senatorship, from electing Dewey over Lehman to electing Republican John Lord O'Brian over Democratic Senator Wagner. Wagner would be a better point of attack than Lehman.

In the first place, so far as the Republicans reflect resistance to radicalism, defeat of Gov. Lehman is not imperatively necessary. Mr. Lehman is no radical. He is no New Dealer, no 100 per cent Roosevelt man—in spite of whatever appearances may be arranged, and whatever silences Mr. Lehman may practice for the purposes of the campaign.

WHEN MR. ROOSEVELT'S Court measure was in the Senate, Gov. Lehman made a strong declaration against it—although as a Governor he was not called upon to take a stand. He was deliberately dramatic. He wrote a public letter to Senator Wagner calling on him to oppose the Court measure. Had Mr. Lehman been content merely to take a position in an ordinary way, he could have given out an ordinary statement to the press. Or he could have written a congratulatory letter to the other Democratic Senator from New York, Mr. Copeland, who already opposed the Court measure. For what Gov. Lehman did, Mr. Roosevelt was resentful and still is, even though he, like Mr. Lehman, may preserve appearances during this campaign.

Mr. Lehman's position within the Democratic Party is somewhere near the middle of the road. Mr. Lehman is as far away from the extreme radical end of the Democratic Party as Mr. Dewey is from the extreme conservative end of the Republican Party. Contest between Mr. Lehman and Mr. Dewey is contest between two men who, as respects the current national humanitarian issues, are in not greatly differing positions. Election of Mr. Dewey may be desirable from the standpoint of the Republicans as a party, and from the point of view internal within New York. But defeat of Lehman is not overwhelmingly imperative from the national point of view of resisting radicalism.

ON THE OTHER HAND, defeat of Democratic Senator Wagner is decidedly desirable from the standpoint of checking radicalism. Mr. Wagner is the author of the Wagner labor act. This act is the parent of the National Labor Relations Board. This board condones the sit-down strike as practiced by the Committee for Industrial Organization, C. I. O.

That the labor board discriminates in favor of C. I. O. is charged by the older labor organization, the American Federation of Labor. A member of the Labor Board, Mr. Donald Wakefield Smith, who came to the end of his term and was reappointed by President Roosevelt, will come before the next Senate for confirmation. A. F. L. opposes him. C. I. O. supports him. A. F. L. has existed 60 years, and never gave rise to fear of communism. C. I. O. has existed two years, and has given rise, justly or not, to fear of communism. It seems to me a fact that four related conditions—Senator Wagner's labor act, the attitude of the Labor Board, the sit-down strike and C. I. O.—compose a mechanism which can be used to carry America into a Communist form of society.

IT WOULD NOT be fair to blame Senator Wagner if he did not foresee the chain of conditions that has flowed from his labor act. But the chain is now here and is a foremost issue. If Senator Wagner has disapproved it I have not seen his disavowal. If he is willing to accept the modifications of his labor act which A. F. L. proposes, I have not observed his saying so.

The opponent whom the Republicans nominated against Senator Wagner, Mr. John Lord O'Brian, is equipped to be as able a Senator as ever sat in the body. In social point of view he was a liberal long before Mr. Roosevelt and the New Dealers committed larceny of the term "liberal" for use as a cloak over an eccentric combination of extreme radicalism with extreme reaction. Mr. O'Brian promoted some features of the New Deal before the New Deal existed. As a first-rank lawyer with a social outlook, Mr. O'Brian in the Senate would give especial service in separating the sound and workable parts of recent legislation from the parts that must be sloughed off.

Lights Go Out

By Barnet Nover

The Destruction Of Old Values

IMPORTANT AS they undoubtedly are, the changes that recently occurred in the political map of Europe are very much less important than the changes in the moral climate that accompanied and have followed the redrawing of boundary lines.

Before Munich, the frontiers of freedom in Europe were already very narrow. The black belt of totalitarianism stretched from the Baltic to the Adriatic. Democracy was limited to the western and northern periphery of the continent and the political island that was Czechoslovakia. But outside of Germany and Italy, the lights of liberty and tolerance, the standards and values of the past, continued to flicker, however feebly.

There was always the possibility that, were the great democratic powers to show some vigor, the quasi-dictatorships that dotted the continent might be replaced by more liberal regimes. But that is now a possibility of the past. The outlook is for less rather than more freedom, if not as a result of internal compulsion as a consequence of external pressure.

IN THE HOUSE of Commons the other day, Premier Chamberlain was complacent about Germany's economic expansion in the southeast of Europe. It involved, he suggested, no sinister political motives. It has its limits, because while the major international market of those countries happens to be Germany, they can, "as a rule, only obtain payment from Germany either in the form of goods, barter arrangement, or by blocked marks." On the other hand Britain continues to be a free and hence a more desirable market.

If Germany's domination of central and southeastern Europe were only a question of trade expansion, others besides Mr. Chamberlain might take a complacent and even hopeful view of it. Unforunately, it involves also the tacit or open acceptance of German hegemony which means at least the partial application in those countries of the philosophy of the Third Reich.

IT IS HARDLY surprising that the Munich accord has been followed by a growth of anti-Semitism even in countries, such as Czechoslovakia, which were free of it. It is also not surprising that every nation directly or indirectly under the thumb of the Third Reich has found it necessary to take measures to restrict freedom of speech and the press, at least so far as discussions of Germany are concerned.

This is proving to be the case even in that ancient citadel of freedom, Switzerland. Squeezed between the German and Italian variants of totalitarianism, the Swiss are beginning to temper the wind to the shorn lamb. Others are doing the same. And made heady by their success the Nazis are demanding that even the great powers do likewise. Hitler's speech at Saarbruecken was a case in point.

The Frankfurter Zeitung has followed up the Fuehrer's attack on Eden, Churchill and Duff Cooper by declaring that:

"As long as Churchill and Lloyd George are able to deliver provocative radio speeches across the ocean, even if their own government disavows them, we cannot suppose that England's public opinion is really ready for understanding. . . . All further progress must, therefore, be preceded by a final clarification within England and France."

In other words, the price of appeasement with Germany must be the destruction of freedom at home. Who knows but that it may be paid? Mr. Chamberlain, too, finds the speeches of Churchill and Lloyd George not to his liking. "It is not one of the characteristics of totalitarian states, at any rate," said the British premier, "that they are accustomed to foul their own nests." In this particular, obviously, Mr. Chamberlain would have Britain follow the German and Italian examples.

THE DESTRUCTION of old standards and values is not limited to the political sphere; it has spread like a plague to the sphere of human relations. There is something horrible in the spectacle of Germany and Poland rounding up thousands of innocent individuals for deportation because, in the one case, they were of Polish, in the other of German nationality and keep them penned up for days, like cattle prepared for slaughter. It is even more horrible that the world watches such proceedings with numb indifference. We have grown callous to wholesale suffering.

Nor is this degrading spectacle of men being treated like beasts limited to the Old World. The action of the Mexican government in deporting 200 refugees, who had previously been granted visas to enter the country, shows that the virus of inhumanity has penetrated this hemisphere. Some of these unfortunates came out of concentration camps. They will certainly return there. For this action the supposedly liberal government of Mexico will stand discredited before the civilized world.

BY CONTRAST with what is taking place in the world today the worst that happened a generation ago seems tame and mild. The regime of the Kaiser, the rule of the Czar, they were liberal in comparison with the kind of governments that obtain now. The Dark Ages have come back.

Argentine Firm Upheld By Md. Appeals Court

Annapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—A State court of appeals opinion today reached halfway around the world to uphold a Buenos Aires grain firm in London transactions which cost a Baltimore firm $3,348.

Crawford, Keen & Co., Buenos Aires, obtained a judgment for that amount against P. Obrecht & Sons, Baltimore, for failure to take delivery on 500 tons of feed flour.

The original award of the Baltimore court was upheld by the appellate court.

Tired of 'Tinsel Type,' Eligible Young Bachelor Asks Where to Find Girls With Brains and Poise

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have several university degrees, a good job where my superiors promise me big things, am said to be fairly attractive to women, some of whom keep telephoning me, sending cards, etc., and am in my latter twenties. In other words, I am an average American male, with no glaring defects of mind, appearance or personality. My peculiar perplexity has to do with the apparent difficulty of meeting girls with brains and poise. Many there undoubtedly are in Washington as in other localities, but I don't meet them, in spite of the fact that I am no hermit.

All the girls I do meet are attractive looking and good dancers, and that is about all. The smartly dressed girl who can talk interestingly seems to be either nonexistent or inaccessible. I have decided that such gatherings as literary societies and writers' clubs are precisely where they are not. It has been my experience that such groups attract not those who have something to give, but those who have nothing and want something. It's amusing to study the turnout at these so-called culture conventions.

I suppose it is hardly to be expected that the mere tinsel type of girl, who dashes hither and yon in pleasure, exercising little discrimination in her choice of companions and diversions, would have time to develop the distinctive personality and stimulating mind that I hope to find. I have concluded that brains and poise are the results of careful cultivation, but where do the possessors of these admirable qualities keep themselves? This may sound strange, coming from a man, but I am decidedly curious to get your reaction on the subject. Very truly yours. CURIOUS.

Like Attracts Like

DEAR CURIOUS: There is nothing so extraordinary about your failure to find your pot of gold at the rainbow's end. Whoever set a high standard of human quality by which to determine his preferred companions of the opposite sex is necessarily limiting the list of candidates—sometimes, it would seem, almost to the vanishing point. Physically attractive, sartorially elegant, women of cultivated mind and stimulating personality, who possess poise, charm or social presence (call it what you will) and fascinating conversational gifts are no harder to find than are men of the same ilk.

There is no doubt, however, that they do exist in limited quantity, yet in sufficient numbers to highlight the generally monotonous human scene with a star-dust sort of sparkle. The readiest, perhaps the only, way to meet them is to become one of them, in the sense of becoming like them. It's the old story of water inexorably finding its own level. Take yourself, for instance. You go to literary society and writers' club meetings with the fond hope of meeting there some rare and radiant feminine personality who will hail you as a kindred spirit and become the guiding star of your disorganized existence.

And what do you find? Run-of-mine persons who, as you believe, "have nothing to give," and who are hoping (even as you are hoping) vicariously to achieve personal and social distinction by affiliating themselves—as the result of chance encounter—with personalities of authentic, autonomous distinction. You come face to face with your feminine counterpart in myriad form and retire in baffled dismay, failing to realize that your disappointment was self-engendered. The person who would mingle in exhilarating company must cultivate the ability to rise and shine in his own right, and he will draw his own kind to him as the ocean draws the stream.

If you are dissatisfied with present associations, the only remedy for the situation is to take stock of yourself and map out a program of self-development that leads inevitably to a more interesting company. This probably will include a wide variety of cultural interests pursued more for their own sake than for the purpose of making so-called interesting contacts; more fastidious attention to wardrobe and grooming, and the revolutionary determination to be guided by your intelligence, rather than your senses, tentatively selecting feminine companions.

There is a distinct flavor of collegiate immaturity about the man who chooses his women companions primarily on the basis of pictorial effectiveness. I daresay that has been your stumbling block all along—the major reason why you have failed to find the satisfying mental companionship you profess to desire. Unless a girl looks like a model pictured in Vogue, you probably pass her up as a creature beyond the pale. What you fail to take into account is that the average girl of your age, in your walk of life, is almost necessarily forced to choose between sartorial extravagance and cultural investment, when it comes to spending her limited funds. If you could learn to look beyond the costume to the girl herself, you might find the ideal companion in very short order.

Opulence of Silver Fox

Few furs known to man have the appeal to the average woman of silver fox as was proved at a fashion luncheon held recently at a local hotel. Seldom do silvers possess the beauty of the pedigreed fox which is shown to rich advantage above. This full length coat is worked with the skins graduating from a collarless yoke to scallops of the natural fox. Although this coat is regal enough for first nights or a season of grand opera, its clean sweep of silhouette makes it adaptable for wear over tea time or dinner dance frocks

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York, Nov. 2, 1938.

THESE BE the times that try the ladies' souls and wardrobes, for the benefit ball season is under way. Friday night saw the first of these social ordeals explode, the same being the annual Belvet Ball and Debutante Cotillion for the benefit of one of those worthy charities, but especially for the benefit of the velvet business. This genteel shindig is a monument to the promotional prowess of that small blonde ball of fire, June Hamilton Rhodes, but that, naturally, never cracks the sacred society pages.

I have to go to these things in line of duty, and find that the average adult dose of the affair is approximately an hour. In that space I can gape at the gowns of the ladies on exhibition, can salute my sisters of the press, and can enjoy a brief gab with Tad Saucier, the Waldorf's able and affable press agent. I then run down the venerable Hall, my sulking spouse, who is usually found ogling a hat check girl instead of a dizzy deb, and we adjourn to a newsreel theater. I fear we are definitely of the people, and not attuned to the glacial spectacle of 85 (count 'em) debutantes headed by the season's topper, Miss Brenda Diana Duff Frazier, and the sight of their mammas—who blend fretted looks with unconscious attempts to look like Miss Vera Zorina. The aged Hall only goes at all, he says, in hope that some filly will fall down doing the polka-ma-zurka.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Our home-town notes this week are featured by the news that Mark Twain's old home down on 14 West Tenth street, on the northern rim of Greenwich Village, has been remodeled into a 10-family building, all three-room apartments. Nice neighborhood, if you're coming here to settle and grow up with Rockefeller Center. Even more exciting is the word that four 15-foot trees are actually being planted on Thirteenth street, just off Fifth avenue. Giant reforestation of Manhattan Island is under way! . . .

Meet Over-40 Job Problem By Defeating Age, Says Expert

Miss Dumas, Hair Technician, Gives Hints
Reports Men Are Seeking Beauty Parlors
Tells of Offensive Against Baldness

THE "OVER 40" unemployment problem is now being fought out on the beauty front. Men are rapidly joining up with women in this offensive, pursuing hair tinting and firmer facial contours with a zeal that holds promise of routing the industry's economic depression.

Bearer of these tidings is Miss Anada Dumas, hair technician, who is in Washington for a few days at a local store. While her own work is concerned primarily with women's hair problems, Miss Dumas sees such an increasing interest among men in hair growing and hair tinting—yes even with skin and complexion—that she predicts important developments as a result of it.

"Men, like women, are finding out that the best way to get and hold jobs is to look under 40," said Miss Dumas. "Keeping a youthful appearance has become to them an economic necessity Men are patronizing beauty shops for their own sex in New York and I expect to see such shops spread generally, especially if present developments in growing prove as successful as promised."

Hair Cultivation

Men, or for that matter, women, in search of hair growth, are subjected to a scalp analysis through a sort of X-ray machine which reveals whether or not any roots are still alive, according to Miss Dumas. If roots exist, treatment is given through an electrical process designed to draw blood up into the temples and top of the head and feed the veins in those areas which tend to become smaller with increasing years.

"An increasingly larger number of men are tinting and dyeing their hair," said Miss Dumas, "and they are very wise to do so. It is the only way they can defeat the unjust practice in industry of discriminating against employes who are past 40. However, men are not stopping at the care of their hair, but are patronizing beauty shops for facials, skin cleansing and the firming of sagging muscles. Men in public life, such as actors, musicians and lecturers, naturally have taken the lead in this, but I expect to see men generally become as interested as women in the outward pursuit of youth.

Defeating Age

"And why not? It is the only answer to the job problem for the mature person. Men are just finding out something that women found out long ago—that they cannot afford to be their age."

A man's offensive against age, Miss Dumas believes, should be directed first at his hair; second, at his sagging facial muscles; third, at his waistline, and fourth, at his posture. A woman, she thinks, should aim first at the hair; second, at the posture; third, at facial muscles, and fourth, at waistline.

"I think gray hair and baldness are the most aging attributes anyone can possess," she said. "Men need to watch their facial muscles and complexions more than women, for the latter have long concentrated on these things. Women, however, are weak on posture and when they begin to let their shoulders sag and their stomachs protrude, they add years to their looks."

Miss Dumas, own posture represents a triumph over what she regards as a handicap of shortness and also shows how a psychic effect may be achieved. As a child, she was very sensitive about her heighth and as she grew older kept pulling herself up and holding her head high in an effort to be as tall as possible. She also dresses with that end in view. Today most persons on meeting her are greatly surprised to learn that she is but 5 feet 2 inches in height.

Make New Fall Chair Covers

DO YOU have to look at that dowdy chair another winter? Indeed no—not while it's so easy to make a slip cover for it, smartly trimmed, neatly fitted.

Inspiring really what you can do with the new slip cover trimmings. Use them as a decorative outline for the seams, to perk up flounce or skirt, to accent the color scheme of your room.

It is simple to sew on bindings over plain seams. The fringe you can attach with a neat running stitch.

Or accent seams with cord. Handsome is plum cord on a gaily flowered cretonne with touches of plum. Whip the cord over the seams, on the right side.

Another good seam accent is welting or covered cord. Insert the welting in the seams, stitch.

As for the fit—no problem at all when you make your slip cover the easy pin-on way.

Lay your material snugly over the upholstery. Anchor with pins every 3 inches where seams will be.

Cut material 1½ inches outside pins. Begin with inside back and seat. Next cut the apron, arm fronts, sides and back.

In a jiffy you baste the pieces together, try on, stitch and trim. Flounce or skirt comes last.

Easy to make stunning slip covers this way. Our 40-page booklet "Making Slip Covers Successfully," gives step-by-step instructions and diagrams. For all kinds of chairs and sofas. Smart styles trimmings.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "Making Slip Covers Successfully," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

The Last Fly of Summer

"Wait, George, hold your paper still a minute . . . There! . . . No, I missed him! . . . Oh, it was a fly . . . What? . . . Did I tear your paper? I'm sorry, but if I don't get him now—Wait! There he is again! Now, don't move! . . . There, now! . . . Oh, I'm sorry! I didn't mean to hit so hard, but he was sitting right on top of your head . . . well, anyway, I got him—no, there he goes again!

"What? . . . Well, even if he does freeze, he might have time to—— Wait! There he is on the window sill! Now, don't move. I'm going to get him this time . . . There! . . . Oh, I'm so sorry! . . . Well, anyway, your tobacco can oughtn't to have been so near the edge . . . Is it all spilled? . . . Well, but even in a few days he—say, it might be a she and in that case he—I mean she—would leave 6,748,777 descendants . . . yes, that's what all the articles say—Wait! Wait a minute! There he is! Now sit perfectly still . . . There! . . . What's the matter? . . . Your corn . . . Well, I'm sorry, but he was sitting right on your little toe. Anyway, I know I got him—no, there he is buzzing around again!

"What . . . But I tell you, I can't forget him. He's driving me crazy. You know how they are now. I simply couldn't sleep tonight if I didn't—say, there he is! I'm going to get him now if it's the last thing——There! There! . . . O-oh! O-oh! My beautiful vase! . . . How terrible! It's the one the Burlaps gave us! . . . And it just belonged on that mantel. It simply breaks my heart . . . Well, anyway, I got him. I know I got him—— Say! Wait! Doesn't that look like him up there on the wall?"

'Never a Goose So Gay'

I used to wonder in looking at wives,
Who were sloppy and shrewish and much like the hen,
How on earth they achieved matrimonial lives,
And by what devices they held their men.

But now it seems I increasingly see
Men who are sappy and puffy and bent,
And always the thought occurs to me,
Who CAN be the women they represent?

Depression Department

Nothing is so disconcerting to a good woman as to discover that her rival in love or business is really a noble soul and unassailable on the ethical front; nothing is so blighting to a bad one as to realize that her chief enemy also has been around.

Nothing is so dashing to an office vamp as to find out that the wife of her preferred prey is neither a spendthrift who keeps her husband's nose to the grindstone or a dowd who hasn't kept up with him.

Nothing is so disillusioning to a sheltered woman as to realize that the women in the business world with whom her husband associates are not—well just a trifle hard . . . or maybe just a little bit cheap . . . well anyway, lacking in the gentler womanly virtues that develop with dishwashing.

Nothing is so generally deflating to all women as to see a member of their sex who is brainy and successful also possess plenty of "It."

Your Figure

Don't Attempt Streamlining If Too Tall

Causes Angular Look
Mme. Lehmann Is Wise She Likes to Swim

By Ida Jean Kain.

YOU CAN'T be what you are not, and if you are tall, with a large frame, you can't be ultra-streamlined and it would be unwise to try. A drastic reduction in weight would certainly make you look angular, and it might seriously affect your health.

It takes a singer—whose career depends upon vitality—to realize the full danger of too rigorous a diet and how important it is to exercise discretion in slimming. For this reason you can't find a better example to follow than that of Mme. Lotte Lehmann, the distinguished Metropolitan Opera soprano.

With Mme. Lehmann, the voice comes first and it is cause enough for shunning the foolish diets that would rob her of that magnificent vitality. But for the large woman who does not have to consider her voice, there is still another argument against lowering the vitality. A superb carriage means more to this Junoesque type than to any other, and it is impossible to hold yourself regally erect—as Mme. Lehmann does—when you are worn out from too strict a diet.

Plan Is Simple

This singer has worked out a very simple and sensible plan by which she keeps her weight under control. Every so often, whether she needs it or not, she goes on a salt-free diet for a few days. All starches and sweets are omitted from the menus, and meats and vegetables are prepared without a grain of salt. "After a day or so, one becomes accustomed to going without salt and it is not hard. Also," with a rueful smile, "it is much easier to control the appetite on such a diet."

There is no objection to your adoption of the balanced reducing menus, but you require more than the allowance of 1,200 calories. You may be able to reduce satisfactorily on as many as 1,600 calories per day. Go off the diet as soon as you are down to the rather generous weight your frame allows—about 110 pounds for the basic 5 feet of height, and 5½ pounds for each additional inch of height.

Exercise Needed

Whether dieting or not, you need daily exercise and should, if possible, engage in an activity you like. Mme. Lehmann likes to swim every day and thinks swimming the best exercise for the large woman. In addition, she does stretching exercises for a trim waist. You may not be able to swim as often as you should, but you can walk every day and, backed up with stretching, walking is excellent.

Mme. Lehmann's program is not spectacular . . . it's the kind you could adopt to advantage.

'Cave-Dwellers' Flock To Mrs. Flood's Gay Fete

Her Detective-Story-Writing Nephew Honored
Mr. Koehler's New Novel Just Published
Maud Parker and Mr. Hogan Attend

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

The partying whirl reached a new high for the season yesterday afternoon when both oldsters and youngsters, as well as the in-betweens, turned out at the tea hour for at least one of the many events on the social calendar.

HOPE R. MILLER.

While deb and post-debt sets were enjoying Miss Lydia Loring's tea and a sizable number of officials and diplomats were on hand for Mr. and Mrs. Dwight F. Davis' house-warming, a number of cave dwellers flocked to Mrs. Henry D. Flood's apartment for one of the gayest cocktail parties of the week.

The guest of honor was Mrs. Flood's nephew, Robert Portner Koehler, whose mystery novel, "The Case of the Dead Cadet," was recently published. But since the party was planned as a very informal get-together, you had a chance to meet almost everyone else there before you finally came across the person for whom the event was given.

Receiving her guests at the door of the drawing room, Mrs. Flood wore a smart black crepe frock, fashioned with a full skirt and a wide pencil blue girdle to match the epaulet-effect shoulder pieces.

Her daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood, presided over the cocktail table and was a very fetching picture in a hunter's green crepe dress, made on simple lines and set off with a gold chain necklace. A small tea table was set up in the drawing room, and nearby, in an honored place and in full view, was a copy of Mr. Koehler's book. By its side was his first detective novel, "Puppets of Chance," which was highly successful.

Several Authors Attend Party

"Where's the author?" was the question continually rippling through the crowd. When I first spotted him, he was chatting with another writer, Mrs. Edmund W. Pavenstedt, whose work appears under the name of Maud Parker. The next time I glimpsed him, he was deep in conversation with Pendleton Hogan, whose newest book, "Mortal, Be Proud," also was on display yesterday afternoon.

A few minutes later I learned that Mr. Koehler recently completed a third novel and expects to finish a fourth before the winter is over. Both of these, like the first two, are in the detective tradition, but some day he hopes to write a book in which there will be "no sleuths, no clews and no harrowing climaxes."

Although his most recent book was written in Washington, the scene is not laid here; and, while he frequently has been urged to write a story against a Capital background, he believes the task would be too difficult for him. "There are so many different Washingtonians it is hard to make anyone seem authentic as the background for a story," he observed. "But I may try it some day."

It would seem he has plenty of time. With his name already on the spine of two books and with two more on the way, he is much younger than the average author.

Many 'Cave Dwellers' Noted Among Guests

Among the guests who talked with him over tea-cups and cocktails, and probably will be reading his book before the week is over, were Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Charles B. Drake, and daughter, Miss Barrine Drake; Mrs. Daniel C. Stapleton and her daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton; Commander and Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Capt. and Mrs. Smith Hempstone, Dr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, Capt. and Mrs. Theodore S. Wilkinson, Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, and Mrs. Bayne Castle.

In a brief chat with Mr. and Mrs. Pavenstedt, I learned that the latter's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Barstow Wright Dick, who are honeymooning in Bermuda, will arrive in Washington around November 10, for a short visit before going on to Laredo, Tex., to spend the winter . . . Mr. and Mrs. Meem are looking forward to a visit soon from their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Beale McLean, jr., who will be here through the Christmas holidays . . . and speaking of that season, Mrs. Flood is completing plans for presenting to society her niece, Miss Margaret Byrd, who will make three bows this winter—the first in Richmond, the second in Baltimore, and the third in Washington, sometime during Christmas week.

Jarnefelts Sail for Italy Next January

Finnish Envoy Leaving Will Serve in Rome
Successor Is Named

The Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt yesterday were transferred to the Legation of Finland in Rome. They will be off for Italy early in January.

The Minister's successor here will be Hjalmer Procope, the personable Finn who twice has served his country as minister of foreign affairs.

From Helsingfors, Finland's capital, word came some time ago that Procope had been picked for the post, and that he was due to arrive here the latter part of January or early in February.

While the transfer of the Jarnefelts will take away one of Washington's most popular diplomatic couples, news that Mr. Procope will be sent here is of wide interest. He visited the Capital last autumn and was entertained at a large reception given by the Minister and Mme. Jarnefelt. He is only 49, but he has an extensive background of experience. In addition to serving his country as minister of foreign affairs, he also has been minister of commerce, and was his country's representative at the League of Nation's Council, as well as at the World Economic Conference and the Inter-Parliamentary Commission. In addition to holding all those positions, he also has distinguished himself as a writer on economics and trade treaties.

Otto Wadsted Returns From Stay Abroad

The Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, arrived in New York yesterday on the Paris, and came directly to Washington. He has been abroad since midsummer. Mme. Wadsted will extend her stay in Europe, coming on to join her husband here next month.

Also arriving on the Paris yesterday was Mme. Lucet, wife of Charles Luset, Third Secretary of the French Embassy, who will come to Washington today.

Still others on the ship were Jo Davidson, sculptor; Elisabeth Schumann, singer, and Lillian Emerson, actress, who appeared in the play, "Golden Boy," in London.

Mrs. Sumner Welles Luncheon Hostess

Mrs. Sumner Welles, wife of the Under Secretary of State, entertained yesterday at luncheon.

Ranking guests were Senora de los Rios, wife of the Spanish Ambassador; Mrs. Stanley Reed, wife of Associate Justice Reed of the Supreme Court, and Senora Isabel Reyes de Lopez, wife of the Minister of Colombia.

Army Girl to Be Feted at Tea Today

Harris & Ewing.

Miss Julie Camp, whose parents, Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Camp, U. S. A., and Mrs. Camp, will give a tea in her honor at the Army War College this afternoon. Though she herself will not be a debutante, Miss Camp, who was graduated in June from Smith College, will be a member of the younger set this winter

Jane Eustis Is Honored

At a tea given yesterday afternoon by Miss Lydia Loring, a close friend of the family, Miss Jane Eustis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Chotard Eustis, made her bow to society in the first of a series of parties to be given for her this winter.

In the drawing room of Miss Loring's home on N street, the debutante, her mother and the hostess received their guests. Banked with chrysanthemums in autumn shades, the room was further filled by the bouquets sent her by friends.

Miss Eustis wore sapphire blue crepe, fashioned with a flowing skirt and a bodice of sequins of the same shade. The high neckline in back curved to a heart shape in the front. Her corsage was fuchsia orchids.

Mrs. Eustis and Miss Loring were both gowned in black with pearl accessories and wore corsages of gardenias and star jasmine.

Assisting the debutante were Miss Betty Meyers and Miss Elise Hill, both debutantes of this season, and Miss Aileen Harris, who made her bow last year. Miss Hill wore black moire with a black velvet trim; Miss Meyers chose a brown frock with a brown sequin jacket and Miss Harris was in rose with brown accessories.

Miss Eustis will also be presented in New Orleans at mardi gras time.

Mary Alice White's Debut Now Dec. 3 Instead of Nov. 19

The date of Miss Mary Alice White's debut tea has been changed from Saturday, November 19, to Saturday, December 3. The party will take place at the home of Miss White's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley White, at 1420 Sixteenth street, and the debutante will arrive the day before from Vassar College.

On December 22 Miss White will be feted again at a ball at the Sulgrave Club. She also will take part in the round of debutante festivities during the Thanksgiving season, and is expected to return from Vassar November 23, to be here that week-end. She will return to her studies the following Monday and be back again in time for her debut.

Mrs. E. S. Coolidge To Return Today

Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge will return to her apartment at Hotel 2400 today after a brief visit to New York. She went there to bid bon voyage to Frank Bridge, noted English composer, and Mrs. Bridge, who sailed for their home in England after spending last week-end as Mrs. Coolidge's guests here.

Mr. Bridge's latest composition was played by the Gordon Quartet at the concert in the Library of Congress auditorium on Sunday evening.

Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim have arrived here for the season and have taken the Walter Schoellkopf house at 2700 Macomb street.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunbar Rosenthal will leave today by motor for Columbus, Ohio, to visit their daughter, Miss Betty Rosenthal, a student at Ohio State University.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott Little, who spent last winter in Washington, have returned to their apartment at the Shoreham for the season. They also have a home in New York.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Eisman, of St. Louis, are at the Hay-Adams House.

Mrs. Mark Lansburgh, Mrs. Arthur Neumann, Mrs. Edward Sonneborn, Mrs. William Illich and Mrs. Garfield Kass, of Washington, are attending the Midatlantic States Conference of the National Council of Jewish Women at Norfolk, Va.

Lieut. Comdr. H. B. Brumbaugh, U. S. N., of Detroit, and Mrs. Brumbaugh, are at the Martinique for an indefinite stay.

Mme. de With Widely Feted

Mme. van Haersma de With, who went to New York Tuesday with her husband, who sailed that day for Europe, will return to Washington today. Her social calendar, which has been crowded ever since she arrived a few days ago, will be full until Sunday afternoon when she will go to New York. She will sail from there Tuesday to join the Minister at his new post in Berlin.

This afternoon Mme. van Haersma de With will be feted at a cocktail party to be given by George Duca, second secretary of the Rumanian Legation. This evening she will be guest of honor at a dinner at which Mr. and Mrs. Lamar Belin will entertain.

Tomorrow, she will lunch with Mrs. Truxtun Beale and tomorrow afternoon she will be honored at a tea given by Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney will entertain her at luncheon Saturday, and that evening she will attend the dinner at the French Embassy given for the French Minister to Canada, Count de Dampierre. Mme. van Haersma de With's long list of social engagements will be concluded with two parties before she leaves on Sunday. She will attend the luncheon given by Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn for the latter's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Armour, of Chicago. The final item on Mme. van Haersma de With's calendar here will be the cocktail party given for her Sunday afternoon by Frau Herbert Scholz, wife of the First Secretary of the German Embassy.

Carlotta Hawley, Bride-to-Be, Honored at Tea

Dr. Carlotta Hawley was the guest of honor at a tea given yesterday afternoon at the Arts Club by her mother, Mrs. Charles Augustus Hawley. The event was one in a series of prenuptial parties being tendered Dr. Hawley, whose marriage to Dr. Harry William Mitten, jr., will take place on November 11.

Between 50 and 60 guests were greeted by the bride-to-be, who was gowned in blue velvet and wore a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Hawley was dressed in silver lame. Assisting was Mrs. Tomas Cajigas in black velvet.

Both the bride-to-be and the prospective bridegroom studied at Maryland University. They later took postgraduate work in orthodontics at Harvard.

Donald Nashes Take Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Scott Nash, who were married last Friday, will live at 1816 Bryant street after a wedding trip through the South.

The bride is the former Miss Sylvia Kendall Meyer, daughter of Mrs. Louis Charles Meyer and the late Mr. Meyer, of Washington and Virginia. Mr. Nash is the son of Wilbur F. Nash, of this city, and the late Mrs. Nash.

The ceremony took place at the home of Mrs. A. W. Cathcart, of Arlington, the Rev. Ulysses G. B. Pierce officiating. Only relatives and close friends were present.

The bride, who dispensed with attendants, wore a blue semi-tailored dress, with darker blue accessories and a corsage of gardenias.

A small reception followed the ceremony.

The bride was graduated from Smith College in 1937 and spent her junior year studying at the Sorbonne.

Dwight Davises Open Home in Brilliant Fete

Housewarming Success
Notables Numerous
Residence Redecorated

The residence that was a social center when it belonged to Mrs. Maxim Karolik, the former Martha Codman, was never the scene of a more distinguished gathering than the one that assembled yesterday afternoon when the present owners, former Secretary of War Dwight F. Davis and Mrs. Davis, entertained at tea.

Planned as a house-warming event, the party drew official, diplomatic and residential notables, and all guests spent a good part of their time surveying the spacious, richly furnished rooms that have been redecorated to a queen's taste.

The house, located at 2145 Decatur place, has long been considered one of Washington's show places, but now that the Davises have moved in, it has taken on new interest. The drawing rooms, library and dining room on the second floor were crowded yesterday with celebrities who climbed the broad, green-carpeted stairway to shake hands with the host and hostess and to sample their hospitality.

Hostess' Portrait Attracts Attention

Mrs. Davis' portrait at the head of the stairway attracted much favorable attention, and many guests paused to examine it closely before they went on into the drawing room.

Wearing a floor-length gray frock with a purple jacket, Mrs. Davis received in the drawing room. There, as in the other rooms, huge bouquets of roses against either pale green walls or draperies formed an effective background. Cocktails were served in the library, but the long dining room table at which tea and coffee were served drew more of the guests.

Diplomatic Corps Well Represented

The Diplomatic Corps was well represented. Lady Lindsay, whose social appearances have been few thus far this season, was there; also Senora de Espil; the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin; the Swiss Minister and Mme. Marc Peter, the Minister of Finland and Mme. Eero Jarnefelt, the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, who has just returned from abroad, and Frau Dieckhoff, wife of the German Ambassador.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who lives just around the corner, was among the early arrivals. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed, former Senator Hiram Bingham and Mrs. Bingham and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace also were there. Still others on hand were Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Miller, Mme. Van Kaathoven, Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, George T. Summerlin, Mrs. David Barry, Mrs. Thomas Bell Sweeney, Pendleton Turner, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton, Miss Marion Trumbull, Misses Anne and Mary Randolph, Mrs. Edward Finkenstaedt, Mrs. James Clement Dunn. Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle and many more.

Mrs. Pearsons Rust Off to Hot Springs To See Lady Lewis

Mrs. Pearsons Rust has left for Hot Springs, Va., where she will visit Lady Lewis. She will then go to Southern Pines, N. C., to be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. George Pulver of Washington, who will spend the winter there.

Edward Gardner left last evening for Hot Springs and will also visit the Pulvers before returning to Washington.

Mrs. Stevens Gives Luncheon Today

Mrs. Frederic E. Farrington and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley will be guests of honor at an informal luncheon to be given by Mrs. Cabot Stevens today at the Cosmos Club.

Among others invited are the sponsors for the entertainment to be given on Monday evening in the Presbyterian Church lecture room for Mrs. Stevens' Missionary Circle work.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MR. AND MRS. Gerald Lambert, who own so many boats that Mrs. Lambert can't tell you the exact number, are getting settled in their new house here with the help of the steward of their famous yacht Vanitie, to whom they sent an S O S. They have leased the large and handsome residence of Mrs. Sidney Cloman on Kalorama road for the winter.

DUDLEY HARMON.

The Lambert fortune comes from the product which slogans such as "three times a bridesmaid but never a bride" and "even your best friend won't tell you" helped to make famous. Mr. Lambert came here recently to act as special adviser to the Federal Housing Administration. Both he and Mrs. Lambert are being warmly welcomed by Capital society.

The Vanitie was built to compete in the international races for the America Cup.

Mrs. Cloman set off by motor yesterday with Mrs. George Marye for California, where she will spend the winter. Mrs. Marye will return to her huge apartment at 1785 Massachusetts avenue here in about six weeks. The two who are close friends, spent most of last winter together in California.

Mrs. Helen Allen, attractive niece of Mrs. Cloman, has changed her mind about staying in Washington this winter and has gone to New York to live. She hopes to get a job modeling. Almost 6 feet tall, she is so good looking and holds herself so well that she probably will.

Practically everybody in Washington society seems well on the way this year to becoming a "joiner." Never has there been such a rush to belong to something, with invitations out for an Ice Club, several square dancing groups, and the Friday Supper Club. Now we hear that several young men about town are starting a fencing club, and the Ski Club has just sent out its first bulletin of the year.

The current Indian summer weather makes ski talk seem a little premature, but already some people are making plans for holidays in the snows later on. Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan were talking about St. Jovite, Canada, the other day, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter White also might go there. Mrs. White, incidentally, was recently measured for some skis to be made for her in Norway, and had to go to a doctor's office to have it done, as the measurements were supposed to be in centimeters!

Ski fiends will hold their first meeting next Tuesday at the Palisades Field House. Plans will be made for the winter and some ski movies will be shown. Later there will be two "dry course" meetings to allow members to limber up. One member has been riding a bycycle two or three hours a day to get in condition.

As skiing is not included in the advantages of the Capital, members rise at dawn every Sunday and go by train to the Poconos. Last season it was so warm that the ski train did not run for weeks. But the ski bulletin hopefully forecasts a long, cold winter this year.

MRS. GEORGE GRANT MASON has returned to her mustard colored house in Georgetown after a trip to Europe. She visited her mother, Mrs. Ormond Lawson-Johnston in London, and joined her husband for a while in Brussels, where he attended an aeronautical conference.

ABOUT THE TOWN: Somebody must have told the Cuban Ambassador about the prevalence of crashing parties in Washington, for several days after he issued invitations to a large reception for Col. Batista come additional cards to be presented at the door . . . Senora de Lecuona, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Spanish Embassy, is mad about American advertisements for patent medicines. She finds them so fascinating that she sends for all she reads about.

Recently Wed

Mrs. Raymond Smith, formerly Miss Virginia Lee Coffman, whose marriage took place recently at the Mount Vernon Methodist Church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Lee Coffman, of this city. Mr. Weatherly is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Curtis Weatherley, of Sumter, S. C.

Novelist Here

Adela Rogers St. John, the novelist, is here from her home, at Great Neck, Long Island, and is at the Carlton. She is accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Belle Green Rogers.

Nichols-Roberts Rites Saturday

Mrs. J. Osgood Nichols will arrive today from her home in Short Hills, N. J., to attend the wedding on Saturday of Mrs. Patterson Roberts and Mrs. Nichols' son, Osgood Nichols. She will stay with Mrs. Charles M. Marsh, of Chevy Chase.

The ceremony will take place at 4:30 at All Souls' Unitarian Church and will be followed by a reception for relatives and intimate friends at the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. John Carter Vincent in Georgetown.

Mrs. Roberts will have as her only attendant her sister, Mrs. Austin Sullivan, of Bethesda. William Meredith Nichols, of Short Hills, will serve as best man for his brother.

The bride-to-be is the daughter of Maj. Gen. Robert U. Patterson, formerly surgeon general of the Army, and the late Mrs. Patterson.

Cummingses Go To New York To Attend Plays

The Attorney General and Mrs. Homer S. Cummings will leave for New York today and will be at the Waldorf-Astoria until Saturday when they will go on to Stamford, Conn. While in New York they will attend the performances of "Hamlet" and "Oscar Wilde."

In Stamford they will attend the wedding Saturday of Miss Barbara Lockwood, daughter of Judge Charles D. Lockwood, and Garrett Bunker.

Judge Lockwood is the former partner of the Attorney General. Following the wedding, the Attorney General will return to Washington while Mrs. Cummings will stay on in Stamford several days as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Hackett.

New Secretary Here For Hungarian Legation

Dr. Dominic de Szent-Ivanyi has arrived in Washington to act as secretary of the Hungarian Legation on a temporary assignment and is staying at the Shoreham. He previously served at the Foreign Office in Budapest.

Baron Paul Schell, secretary of the legation, has been ordered to return to Hungary, but does not expect to leave for several months.

Pedestrian Fine-on-Spot Plan Praised

Mrs. Thorpe Speaks Back From Europe Walkers Controlled Pay When Arrested

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Citing the European plan of fines on the spot for pedestrians apprehended crossing the street against traffic lights, Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the Women's Safety Committee of the D. C. Motor Club of the American Automobile Association, yesterday advocated similar regulations here.

Mrs. Thorpe, who spent most of the summer in Europe making traffic observations in various countries, reported on her informal survey yesterday at the opening meeting of the committee in the Sulgrave Club. Other speakers were Hugh Smith, principal of Jefferson Junior High School, who gave the committee credit for exerting influence which finally secured an appropriation for the new Jefferson Building, located outside the hazardous vicinity of the railroad tracks; Capt. H. S. Bishop, assistant engineer commissioner, who described plans for the building, and Mrs. Elizabeth K. Peeples, director of the Community Center department.

There are no speed limits in Europe, Mrs. Thorpe told members of the committee, but drivers are held responsible for operating their cars safely. The pedestrian is just as liable to arrest for the infraction of a traffic rule as is the motorist. The traffic officer who sees him, imposes the small fine then and there, and all court procedure is eliminated.

Germany, with the plans for a car in every family, is beginning to look ahead to solve the forthcoming parking problem. It has sought the plans of England's underground garages.

In England, she said, she felt perfectly at ease as a pedestrian because of the courtesy of the drivers. The police are equally considerate, she added.

Mrs. Peoples spoke briefly before the committee on problem of releasing into the streets hundreds of young people who will be deprived of recreational facilities if the appropriation for such work is inadequate to maintain the present program.

Luncheon followed the meeting of the committee and a showing of a safety moving picture.

Among those who attended were Mrs. David McCoach, wife of the new Engineer Commissioner for the District, and Mrs. Genevieve Forbes Herrick, who, with Miss Katherine F. Lenroot, of the Children's Bureau, were announced as new members. Among others were Mrs. Ralph Close, wife of the Minitser of the Union of South Africa; Lady Leslie, Mrs. Ernest Brown, Mrs. Mary Steele, Russell E. Singer, general manager of the A. A. A.; Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the District of Columbia Motor Club; Miss Florence Buschman, editor of American Motorist, and members of the committee, including Mrs. Laurence Benet, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. George Barnett, Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. Blair Banister, Mrs. Lloyd Biddle, Mrs. John Ecker, Mrs. Mark Bristol, Mrs. Lawrence Hill Green, Mrs. Seth Richardson, Miss Janet Richards, Capt. Rhoda Milliken, Mrs. Morris Sheppard, Mrs. Mary E. Stewart and Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley.

Judge Bentley Speaks Before Zonta Club

Judge Fay Bentley yesterday addressed the Zonta Club at its regular luncheon, on "The Business of the Juvenile Court." She quoted statistics showing that money saved the taxpayers through court orders was more than double the amount appropriated for its maintenance. Two-thirds of the cases are for non-support, and in many of these the families would be on relief if it were not for the law requiring the father to provide for his minor children, she said.

She will be present at the musicale and tea being given Saturday by the Columbia Women of George Washington at Wardman Park Hotel. Admiring her costume are Miss Marjorie Miller, soprano, one of the artists for the musicale; Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, chairman of the benefit, and Miss Elena Crivella, pianist, who also will be on the program

Pi Beta Phi Sees Exhibit Tuesday

A program on the settlement school at Gatlingburg, Tenn., maintained by Pi Beta Phi Sorority, will be presented Tuesday night under the direction of Mrs. Louise Arnold Meenefee at a meeting of the Washington Alumnae Association. Miss Marion McCoy will be hostess at her home, 4410 Sixteenth street.

In addition to a discussion of the work being carried on at the school, there will be a display illustrating its academic program, its progress in athletics and examples of weaving and products of the Arrowcraft Shop.

The junior group formed within the Alumnae Association, which has 600 members in the Capital, will join with the senior alumnae in the meeting. Mrs. James Greear is president of the alumnae, with Miss Marie Jorolemon chairman of the junior division. Alumnae between the ages of 18 and 35 are eligible to belong to this group and may remain in it for ten years from the date they join.

The Alumnae Association meets on the second Tuesday of each month and also has afternoon meetings, the next to be with Mrs. Ralph Henderson, 6313 Oakridge avenue, at 2 p. m., November 18. There will be bridge, followed by tea.

Montgomery Club Bridge Tomorrow Aids Welfare Work

The Montgomery Club of Chevy Chase will have a benefit bridge for its welfare work tomorrow—so big a bridge four hostesses will open their homes for it. Mrs. Warren H. Parker is president of the club and Mrs. J. Elmer Monroe, chairman of the bridge.

Proceeds will go to the Montgomery County Social Service League, the Chevy Chase Student Aid, assistance to individual families and the Red Cross.

Hostesses will be Mrs. Donald McLeod, assisted by Mrs. Harry B. Pitts, Mrs. William Agee and Mrs. George Post; Mrs. W. P. Benson, assisted by Mrs. Monroe Parker, Mrs. Depue Falck and Mrs. Don Enrietto; Mrs. August Moran, assisted by Mrs. Hartford Allen, Mrs. Harry Wensel, Mrs. Clifford McCormick and Mrs. Rudolph Kudlich, and Mrs. Edgar F. Fowler, assisted by Mrs. William M. Throckmorton, Mrs. Roy Walls and Mrs. Carl I. Aslakson.

Plan Card Party

The annual card party of the District of Columbia Society, Daughters of the American Colonists, will be held at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, Saturday, at 2 p. m., under the chairmanship of Mrs. Roy C. Bowker. Mrs. David D. Caldwell, regent of the District Society, will preside at a short business meeting following the cards.

'Y. W.' Doll Fair Set Nov. 18-22

A doll fair under the sponsorship of the World Fellowship Committee of the Y. W. C. A. will be held there November 18 to 22. There will be many collections of dolls interesting to both grown-ups and children. The display will be open from 10 a. m. to 8 p. m. and on Sunday.

There will be dolls depicting the costumes of various countries of the world, historical dolls and portrait dolls.

One of the special features of the fair will be Miss Bradford's doll house, not shown for many years. This is Miss Bradford's hobby and the house with its furnishings has been in the making for 50 years. There are 14 rooms furnished in reproduction Chippendale, beautiful and authentic pieces, baths, and an attic. Miss Bradford will be on hand to describe the collection.

Members of the World Fellowship Committee working for the promotion of this project are Mrs. William S. Culbertson, chairman; Mrs. Albert W. Atwood, Mrs. G. W. Stone, Mrs. H. W. Frantz, Miss Helen Lyon, Mrs. Ernest Smith, Mrs. Irving Ketchum, Mrs. D. E. Karnell, Mrs. A. B. Summers, Mrs. McFall Kerbey, Mrs. S. L. Henderson, Mrs. W. F. Willoughby, Mrs. L. A. Schaff, Miss Ruth McGowan, Mrs. Arthur Call, Mrs. Charles Drayton, Mrs. W. H. Allison, Mrs. Henry Morris and Mrs. B. H. Warner.

Frances Lee Teaches Girls, Not Subjects

Ends 2-Day Stay Here Lets Children Choose Trains in Democracy

Placing emphasis on teaching the child in contrast to teaching a subject, Miss Frances Lee, education consultant for the National Girl Scouts, is making field trips in the interest of the new national program.

"We are asking leaders to be aware of the needs of the individual girls," said Miss Lee, who left last night for Hagerstown after two days in Washington. "We are working with an instrument we call a program. As before, it includes games, sports, nature study and home-making—but the emphasis is different. It offers material from which the girls may choose that in which they are interested. It is being used to educate them in the democratic process—choosing what they want to do and carrying it out with considerate regard for people different from themselves. They are learning not just to berate those whose tastes and skills are different, but to include them in what they plan and make use of their ability."

In previous seasons, emphasis has been placed on awards and at large gatherings they were presented for attainment in different fields. Under the present plan there will be less of this and more attention given to developing activities and interests meeting the particular needs of a given group. It will require more thought and planning on the part of leaders, but will result in a gratifying response from the girls. It is also a service to the country, says Miss Lee, who considers such training practical education in the fundamental principles of democracy.

Before taking the position of education consultant a year ago, Miss Lee for 25 years conducted the Lee School in Boston. She was also a former trustee of Radcliffe College and secretary of the National Headmistresses Association. Her grandfather was William Augustus Stearns, president of Amherst.

Soroptimists Hear Anna Pearl Cooper

Miss Anna Pearl Cooper, of George Washington University, yesterday addressed the Soroptimist Club at its weekly luncheon. She has just returned from her sabbatical year in England and described her impressions of London.

Mrs. Miller Hickerson, promotion manager of Goodwill Industries, also described the work done there.

Mrs. Agnes Newman, the president, announced that installation of a new Soroptimist club at Gettysburg would take place Saturday, and many local members expect to attend.

FIFTY MEMBERS of the Daughters of Isabella last night gathered in the Chinese room of the Mayflower Hotel for their annual dinner.

Mrs. James F. Hartnett, regent of the District of Columbia Circle, presided, and Miss Rebecca Shanley, past regent, was the speaker. Others at the head table included Mrs. Peter Schroeder, regent of the Indianhead Circle; Miss Elizabeth Dolan, State regent of the District, Maryland and Virginia; Gertrude Waters, who provided the music; Mrs. Stephen Stafford, vice regent; Miss Rose Ann French, treasurer; Mrs. Frederica Whelton, secretary, and Mrs. Sarah Deeds, chancellor.

TOMORROW AFTERNOON at the Arts Club, Mrs. Jay Winston Johns, president of the Capital division of the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association, will present to the club boxwood from her estate, Ashlawn, at Charlottesville, Va. Ashlawn for a time was the home of President James Monroe, as was the historic place which now houses the Arts Club.

The plan to bring the box from the Charlottesville estate to the Arts Club garden was the outgrowth of a conversation between Mrs. Johns and Miss Frances Benjamin Johnston, noted photographer who resides at the club. It will be placed near the clubhouse under the supervision of Charles H. Stoddard. The president, Frank B. Steele, will formally accept it in tomorrow's ceremonies at 4 o'clock.

THE WOMAN'S BOARD of George Washington University Hospital yesterday turned over the last half of the $1,600 raised in the spring at the garden party for which the president, Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, and Mr. Grosvenor opened their home, Wild Acres, near Bethesda.

Dr. Walter Bloedorn, superintendent of the hospital, spoke at yesterday's meeting of the board at the Mayflower. He told of the purchase of a portable X-ray machine, and surgical beds with the first portion of the money. The hospital is one of eight in the city participating in the Community Chest, he said.

Mrs. Bloedorn yesterday was named by the executive committee as third vice president to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Vincent du Vigneaud, who resigned. Mrs. William H. Aspinwall was appointed to the executive committee, succeeding Mrs. Earl B. McKinley.

Co-chairmen of the sunshine committee are Mrs. Arthur Grahame and Mrs. John Hanks. Hospital visitors named for November are Mrs. Robie M. Evans, a new member, and Mrs. W. J. Handy.

MRS. W. M. KIPLINGER, chairman of the summer day camps for the Washington Girl Scouts, will entertain for members of the staff of volunteer workers tomorrow afternoon from 2:30 to 5:30, at her home on River road, Bethesda. They include Mrs. James Donaldson, Mrs. W. C. Dowden, Mrs. E. M. Webster, Mrs. L. R. Leinbach, Mrs. Wallace Perry and Mrs. V. R. Sawyer.

Bedtime Story

The Clever Bee

Desire, have you but the will,
Persistence will in time fulfill.
—Busy Bee.

Farmer Brown's boy had just explained to Sue why she shouldn't pick more than a stem or two of the fringed gentians, the reason being that the roots do not live after frost and so it is necessary that there be plenty of seeds. There can be no seeds if all the flowers are picked. A few minutes later Sue called excitedly, "Come here, Tommy! Here are some different blue flowers. They are dark blue. Either they haven't opened yet or they have closed. What are they?"

Tommy chuckled. "They are open as much as they ever will be," said he.

"But they aren't open at all," protested Sue.

"Do you mean that they have closed and will not open again?" Sue asked.

Tommy shook his head. "No," said he. "They are funny flowers, for they are in full bloom right now. They never open any more. These are gentians too, another kind. Some call them closed gentians and some call them bottle gentians. I suppose it is because the flowers are shaped something like a bottle. You may pick those if you want to."

"All of them?" asked Sue.

"If you like them better picked than growing. I like them growing myself. The only thing is don't destroy the whole plant. You see, these belong to the other kind of plants I mentioned, the kind with the roots that live all winter and send up another plant in the spring. So even if they don't have seeds there will still be gentians. Of course, they won't increase any. To spread and make more plants they need to make seeds just as do most plants," replied Tommy.

Sue broke off a single stem to put with the single stem of fringed gentians she had picked. Just then she noticed a bee buzzing about one of those closed blossoms.

"Look at that bumblebee! It can't get into that flower to rob it of its sweetness," she cried.

"Don't be too sure of that. Just you watch it," said Tommy.

The bee buzzed from one flower to another. It seemed to be examining the blossoms. Some were older than others. No time was wasted on those. Presently the bee stopped on one. Its long tongue was thrust through the tiny opening at the tip left by the overlapping petals. The whole head followed. It took a lot of hard pushing but that bumblebee forced a way in until only the tip of the body and the two hind legs could be seen.

Tommy called attention to those two hind feet holding fast to the outer edge. "How is that for a clever bee?" said he. "She isn't taking any chances of being trapped and made a prisoner. She has anchored herself with those two hind feet so that she can back out when she is ready. There she comes now."

Sure enough out backed the bee, brushed into her baskets the pollen she had brought out with her, and began to look for another blossom to force her way into.

"She is a regular old robber, isn't she?" said Sue.

"Looks so, but I wouldn't call her just that. She pays for what she takes," replied Tommy.

"How?" Sue wanted to know.

"There is still some pollen clinging to her head and this she will take into the next flower she visits and some is sure to be left there to fertilize it so that it will make seeds," explained Tommy.

"I didn't know that hunting for flowers could be such fun. I guess it is important to know about flowers so as not to make mistakes in picking them. I didn't know that before," said Sue.

"If more people don't learn that very thing soon there won't be any of certain kinds left. Flowers growing along the roadsides ought never to be picked. Folks who pick them just rob other folks. They steal the beauty from the roadsides and so rob others of enjoyment," replied Tommy.

"I hadn't thought of that, but I will the next time I'm tempted to pick flowers along the roadside," said Sue, thoughtfully.

How about you?

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

NOTE to the dozens of telephone inquirers: No, an Executive Order won't be issued permitting a full week-end holiday after the eleventh, Armistice Day. This is from the White House. And at the Civil Service Commission one spokesman thought employes should be jubilated to get off the eleventh. "They've been asking us, too, about the chances of getting off on the twelfth, which would seem like they want to bite off too much cake."

Then we dipped into the future: to see all the laboratories and all the scientists, now housed in Agriculture's big building here, deported to Beltsville. The first move is the transfer of the greenhouses, Fourteenth street and Constitution avenue, to the Beltsville center. All the other scientists are going, too; it's in the cards to make the two buildings here serve administrative ends only.

A documentary film describing the WPA's activities in the recent New England storm goes on the screen at the Archives auditorium at 3 p. m. today for a preview audience . . . The last sigh from the last Halloween is emitted by an Agriculture girl, who went to her automobile to find the front wheels gone . . . Scientists, educators, college deans and university professors have conferred with Aubrey Williams, urging the publication by WPA of a regular journal of WPA research for widespread popular and professional circulation. We learn that the WPA authorities are giving the proposition their prayerful consideration, but the Federal Diary, pessimisitically, points out that this is the "no" season in the WPA just now.

OVER IN the Munitions Building there are two definite schools of thought on how much first aid a man may need when he is in need of first aid.

The issue, specifically, is over the number of welfare rooms in the building. Members of Adjutant General's Lodge, No. 2, A. F. G. E., have gone on record, affirming that there are two or three so-called welfare rooms, but these—it is contended—afford nothing more remedial than iodine and some aspirin tablets, ineffective doses when a man comes in with a broken leg.

So the group has written to Secretary Woodring says: "The need for administering first aid in case of accident and for the relief of minor sickness has been of much concern . . ." So they ask a welfare room with "proper equipment, medical supplies and nursing facilities with a qualified nurse on duty, similar to the units now operating in Building C and in the State Building."

Further, the group has called for an investigation into the setup and activities of all Government welfare associations to see if uniformity of operation isn't lacking. The A. F. G. E. District Department would make the investigation.

What? Another welfare room, said a War Department spokesman yesterday. Three welfare rooms already are in operation, and now another is wanted. And every available bit of space is used already; people are just milling about in search of space. Another welfare room? What's the matter with the Army Dispensary in the Munitions Building? If anyone were seriously enough banged up, help could come from this quarter. And what about the Navy Dispensary next door?

What about the question of space; what about the Army and Navy dispensaries; what about the three welfare rooms already in operation; what about . . .

So that is the other school of thought, gentlemen of A. G. O. Lodge. And we willingly leave you to answar all the "what about its."

Veterans' Agency Fetes Dr. Tilton on 18 Years of Service

Dr. Joel Tilton, 1520 Twenty-ninth street northwest, was given a gold watch Tuesday at a testimonial dinner in the Shoreham Hotel arranged by his associates in the Veterans' Administration.

The banquet marked the completion of Dr. Tilton's eighteenth year with the out-patient division of the Veterans' Administration, and his transfer from the staff of Mount Alto Hospital, where he has been stationed for the past five years, to the insurance division of the Washington regional office.

Presentation of the watch was made by Dr. Haughton W. Baxley, director of the out-patient service. Others who praised Dr. Tilton's work in the department were Capt. Watson Miller, national rehabilitation officer for the American Legion; Dr. Walter Kline, Dr. Sam Byington, Francis McCarthy, Joseph Idler, J. T. Fitzgerald and Ralph Murtaugh.

Denver Divorcee Wed To Copper Magnate

Baltimore, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Mildred Adams Hosmer, Denver, was married today to Harold Kingsmill, vice president of the Cerro de Pasco Copper Corporation of Peru.

The ceremony was at the home of Alvin P. Adams, uncle of the bride. Mrs. Hosmer was divorced ten years ago from Elwood Hosmer, son of a Canadian railway executive.

G.F.vonOstermann Honored by G.P.O.

Associates at the Government Printing Office on Tuesday paid tribute to George F. von Ostermann, department foreign language editor, who retired at 65 after 45 years of Government service.

The retiring veteran's contributions were praised by Public Printer A. E. Giegengack, Col. E. M. Nevils, production manager, and J. Harry Phillips, chief of the proofroom and chairman of the G. P. O. Style Board. Fellow workers presented von Ostermann with a watch and chain.

Von Ostermann recently compiled a Manual of Foreign Languages, a guide to typography and orthography

In the Worsted-Tex British Lounge V-8* model the elements of streamline design are as follows: The coat is longer; the placement of buttons lower; the lapels broader and more sweeping; the collar is lower; the shoulders a trifle wider; the waistline is further down; the sleeves and trousers tapered. But it is not extreme in appearance. It is a gentleman's suit of clothes that fits and flatters all 8* builds of men with comfort and a fine fit.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

CAMPAIGN CAVIAR: On the campaign billboards in Pennsylvania there's a picture of President Roosevelt in which he resembles William Penn . . . Political wizards at the Capital keep confusing Robert Taft, who's running for the Senate in Ohio, with his brother Charles . . . A Republican discovered Tommy Corcoran for the Democrats, but Democratic Gov. Lehman gave Tom Dewey to the Republicans; so it's a standoff.

On one point, at least, Tommy Corcoran agrees with Bruce Barton of the GOP.: that the salaries of Congressmen should be raised to $20,000 or $25,000. But Tommy's reason is that if Congressmen got that much, they might not object to top-notch $25,000 executives for Government bureaus, commissions and agencies.

• • • •

AMERICAN TOUCH: The gentleman who handles important ceremonials for the State Department, looks after important foreign dignitaries, and who will have charge of ceremonials involving King George and Queen Elizabeth when they visit this country—I mean George Summerlin, Chief of Protocol—rolls his own cigarets, with brown paper.

"—false courage for the boss"

TIP TO NLRB: Mexico's labor laws forbid a boss to enter his own shop or factory while intoxicated . . . (Maybe a Mexican boss nowadays needs a little snifter before he can muster enough courage to go down to the plant.) . . . Might keep this in mind when the Wagner act comes up for amendment.

• • • •

Oddly enough, I ran across nothing in the Mexican law prohibiting a workman from going to work a little squiffed . . . Probably that law was drafted by a proletarian with a perverse sense of humor, still smarting from the time when his boss told him:

"Pasquale, if you're drunk again next Monday morning you might as well go sleep it off on a pile of cactus!"

• • • •

But there's seldom any fully rounded fairness in such regulations . . . Out in the dormitories in Yellowstone Park where the park employes sleep there's a stringent regulation against any male employe entering the girls' dormitory.

But there's nary a word about the girls not invading the men's dormitories. How about that, Mr. Ickes?

"—bulwarks of the Republic"

Actually the Roosevelt Haters fill a long-felt want in our social fabric. England has always had its white-mustached retired colonels and admirals who sat, in their glossy leather club chairs and groused about the innovations of such dratted radicals as Gladstone and Chamberlain.

America is coming of age; we can rejoice in their counterparts, drinking a mild Scotch and soda and complaining of a late afternoon, beneath oil paintings of their forebears who bear a mild resemblance to the early Roosevelts.

Incidentally, put your money on the Texas-Indiana axis to furnish the contrapuntal noise in the Democratic 1940 symphony . . . Garner and McNutt is the ticket now written in the sand by the right wing of Mr. Roosevelt's party. This is the glorious goal to which scores of small parties in the Vice President's office and the colossal cocktail party for Gov. McNutt at the Mayflower last year have poured libations.

POTOMAC PARADE: Little dark men and big blond Nordics with cameras, on hand at the Washington Navy Yard's big open house . . . Representative Dies wrestling with the Communists like a Siegfried, while the leaves in Rock Creek Park grow redder . . . Capital hostesses setting traps for autumn's influx of foreign diplomats, hoping to land one for the festive dinner table . . . High officials purposefully keeping their desks clear and saving the Nation at top speed so they can get away for the Notre Dame-Navy game this week-end.

27-Foot Statue Of Gen. Ward On View Today

Patriot in Revolution Descendant to Officiate Gift From Harvard

A great-great-great-granddaughter today will unveil a 27-foot monument to Maj. Gen. Artemas Ward, first commander of the American forces in the Revolutionary War, to stand in the circle at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenues northwest.

The statue will be presented by Harvard as a gift to the United States. Presentation will be made by Henry Lee Shattuck, of Boston, senior fellow of Harvard. Secretary of War Woodring will deliver the acceptance speech.

Built with funds left to Harvard by the late Artemas Ward, of New York, a descendant of the patriot, Congress approved the project in 1928. Work on the statue, started in 1932, was completed last summer by Leonard Crunelle of Chicago.

The unveiling will be made by Mrs. Lewis Wesley Ficke, of Summit, N. J. The chief oration will be delivered by Charles Warren of Washington, Harvard '89, overseer of Harvard. Presiding will be Frederic A. Delano, Harvard '85, chairman of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission. Troop F, Third Cavalry, from Fort Myer, will serve as guard of honor. Music will be furnished by the United States Army Band.

Gen. Ward, who preceded Washington, was head of the American troops, was graduated from Harvard in 1748. A native of Massachusetts, he fought in three wars, and was a judge and legislator.

Chest Workers Today to Hear Gen. Pershing

Governmental Unit General Head in 1931 Speakers Bureau Rally

Gen. Pershing will sound the "call to arms" for the governmental unit of the Community Chest drive, which opens Monday, at a meeting of volunteer workers at 3:30 p. m. today in the Labor-Interstate Commerce auditorium. Pershing headed the unit when it was first formed in 1931.

Alvin W. Hall, chairman of the unit, and Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the campaign, will give the workers final instructions for reaching the goal of $798,000 set for the unit.

Speakers Bureau members will rally tonight at the Annapolis Hotel for their final precampaign meeting. Mrs. W. A. Roberts, of the Council of Social Agencies, will speak.

Tomorrow night at Sixth Street Synagogue, Morris Cafritz, Chest vice chairman, will deliver a message to the congregation, following a sermon by Rabbi Solomon Metz.

Dorothy Thompson, noted journalist and Post columnist, will launch the funds drive Monday night at Constitution Hall.

Painter Suggests Labor Be United From the Bottom

A peace movement within the ranks of organized labor that will force amalgamation of the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization was advanced yesterday by Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent for the painters union, A. F. of L. affiliate.

The plan calls for settlement of the dispute between the warring groups by State-wide committees throughout the Nation selected by wage earners themselves, "without regard for personalities which may be involved in continuation of this most unfortunate division."

Holcombe did not mention John L. Lewis or William Green but hit at failure of "the dynamic personalities which have been so prominently and personally involved in this Nation-wide division to settle this dispute amicably."

Overnight Parking Ban Sought Here

Asked by McCoach Held Accident Curb More Garages Is Aim Meter Work to Begin

Overnight parking of automobiles on the streets should be eliminated, Engineer Commissioner David McCoach, jr., declared yesterday.

In connection with the present drive to eliminate all possible traffic hazards and to relieve traffic congestions, Commissioner McCoach brought forth yesterday a tentative plan to "modernize" parking here.

"I favor a ban on overnight parking," the Commissioner said, "but realize it could not be done in a day, or even a week."

It is his plan to encourage construction of garages to house the automobiles. He said a movement to construct garages in residential sections would have a similar effect in the downtown area.

He discounted the belief many owners here could not afford to rent garages.

"It would appear that anyone who can afford a car certainly can afford a garage," he said.

Curb on Accidents Seen

Accidents which occur in the densely parked areas after midnight might possibly be avoided if the automobiles were off the street, thus assuring clear vision at intersections, McCoach said. The number of cars stolen each year would be reduced, too, he declared.

The downtown parking problem could be partially solved by building garages under office buildings, he said.

McCoach added, however, he had not conferred with Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen on this subject and that any action would have to result from the Board of Commissioners.

For many years District officials have favored building parking facilities under all new buildings, and preliminary plans for the new municipal center included these plans, it was understood.

While McCoach discussed this problem, word was received that workmen will begin the job of digging holes for the 310 parking meters within 10 days.

Three Phases to be Discussed

Meantime, three phases of the traffic problem believed primarily responsible for continued growth of Washington's highway casualty toll will be considered Monday at a special meeting of the Commissioners' advisory safety committee.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chairman of the group, announced that definite recommendations will be drafted effecting pedestrian control laws, regid enforcement of speed regulations and abatement of horn blowing.

The committee is expected to renew its appeal to the Commissioners for some method of pedestrian control. Proposals have been made to study pedestrian laws in other large cities with a view to adapting the most successful methods for use in the District.

Advocating strict enforcement of speed laws as a means of curbing recklessness and protecting life, the committee, it is understood, will propose boosting the 22-mile-an-hour speed law to 25 miles as an "absolute" limit.

Motorist Exonerated

At the same time, a coroner's jury again blamed pedestrian carelessness for another traffic death. Mrs. Rebecca Gusinsky, 60, of 4406 Georgia avenue northwest, was the city's seventy-second fatality. She was killed Saturday near her home.

The jury was told she walked into the side of a passing automobile and the verdict exonerated Ernest A. Phillips, 47, of 511 Roxboro place northwest.

Three persons were recovering in hospitals yesterday from serious injuries received in traffic mishaps.

Rudolph C. Johnson, 34, of 4334 Reno road northwest, suffered a compound fracture of the leg and a possible brain concussion when struck by a car in the 4100 block of Connecticut avenue northwest.

While crossing Sheriff road northeast, Eugene Thomas, 47, colored, of 4728 Sheriff road, was struck by a passing car and received a fractured skull.

In a three-car collision near Rhode Island avenue and Otis street northeast, Matthew Fair, colored, 38, suffered a fractured foot. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Joe Justus, 45, of Wheaton, Md., was critically injured when his car smashed into an electric light pole on Georgia avenue extended. He was taken to Washington Sanitarium.

Pledges Twitter as American U. Choices End

The three-week sorority rushing season ended at American University yesterday, with these four becoming Alpha Chi Omega pledges. They are Edith Mitchell (left), of Connellsville, Pa.; Dorothy McCoy, of Sisterville, W. Va.; Barbara Klein, of Boston, and Marjorie Letz, Crown Point, Ind. Thirty-six girls were pledged to five sororities

The twittering at sundown last night in the neighborhood of American University didn't indicate the return of the starlings for the winter. However, it did mark the close of a three-week sorority rushing period.

The 36 girls pledged to the institution's five sororities weren't exactly to be blamed for the chattering, because they had just gone through the ordeal of a 45-hour "silent period."

Of course, the girls hadn't really been silent—that would have been too much. But they did refrain from talking to sorority members during that time, which was bad enough.

Before the "silent period" ended, the girls submitted to the dean of women a list of the sororities in their order of preference. The sororities previously submitted lists of the girls they wanted—and it was the thankless task of the dean's office to fit the lists together.

At the close of the "silent period" yesterday, the girls and the sororities were both told which belonged to which. General bedlam ensued; but at a late hour last night, all was reported quiet on the campus front.

The list of pledges follows:

Phi Mu Pledges: Patricia Cayo, Kathryn Chetham, Lois Evans, June Jeffries and Jean Varian.

Sigma Phi Delta Pledges: Margaret Bleth, Gere Dell Sale, Betty Lou Sullivan, Alice Swick, Lois Taylor and Vivian Yeager.

Alpha Chi Omega Pledges: Barbara Klein, Marjorie Letz, Dorothy McCoy and Edith Mitchell.

Delta Gamma Pledges: Betty Adams, Ruth Harris, Barbara Smith, Mildred Todd, Margery Warner, Margaret Harned and Janet Wheeler.

Football Star Felled by Woman He Tried to Save After Holdup Man's Gun Twice Fails to Fire

A husky Eastern High School football star last night fought off a colored bandit who snapped a pistol twice in his stomach, and was rescued by a mysterious stranger after he had been felled by a milk bottle wielded by a young woman he was trying to help.

Dominic Pinto, 18, of 1113 I street northeast, passing an ice cream store at 918 H street northeast last night, saw a colored man inside talking with Mrs. Emma J. Haseldon, clerk. The man was leaning on the counter and apparently held a gun in his hand. Dominic suggested to Jerome Goldenburg, 15, of 828 Tenth street northeast, and Jack Sacks, 17, of 647 K street northeast, his companions, that they investigate.

Inside the store the boys saw the colored man place his right hand hurriedly in a pocket. His left, stretched across the counter, held several coins, and Mrs. Haseldon was just dropping in more. Dominic, who carries a newspaper route in the neighborhood, asked change for a dollar and was told there was none. He turned away, whispering to his companions to guard the door and call police.

Then he moved to the attack. Swinging on the colored man, Dominic, who is a guard on the Eastern team and no lightweight himself, soon had his hands full. The bandit snatched a pistol from his pocket and snapped it twice in Dominic's stomach. Mrs. Haseldon, seeing the battle going against her rescuer, emerged from behind the counter with a milk bottle, swung at the bandit and felled Dominic.

Just then a man, attracted by calls for help from the boys at the front door, dashed into the store and subdued the colored man. When police came, he refused to give his name, explaining he had just been released from 16 hours restraint. He wanted, he said, no truck with policemen.

Taken to Ninth Precinct Station, the would-be bandit was booked as William Walker, 19, of 103 L street northwest. On his person Detective Sergt. Robert Barrett and Private H. Rinke found $4.95 and a .22-caliber pistol containing two shells. They were so placed that had the trigger been pulled a third time, one slug would have torn into Dominic's body.

Dominic, meanwhile, went to Casualty Hospital, where the gash from the milk bottle was stitched.

Policeman H. Rinke, of the Ninth Precinct, congratulates Dominic Pinto, Eastern High School football player, for his efforts to capture a bandit who robbed Mrs. Emma J. Haseldon (center), clerk in a northeast ice cream store.

Budget Items For Schools to Go to Citizens

Board Adopts Plan For 'Co-operation' To Take Immigrants Will Teach Driving

A new procedure in preparing the District school budget was adopted yesterday by the Board of Education, to providing "more systematic co-operation between citizens' organizations and the board in preparing the major budget items."

The board adopted the new procedure speedily but was deadlocked more than an hour before adopting a recommendation to admit immigrant students to Wilson Teachers College.

Supt. Frank W. Ballou, reporting on the new procedure, to be used in preparing the 1941 school budget, said the plan provides more deliberation on budget problems and gives a chance for "thoroughgoing evaluation of the evidence in support of various budget items before their inclusion in the budget."

Items Go to Citizens

The change provides:

That the superintendent prepare reports on various school needs at intervals during the school year, rather than undertaking preparation of the budget toward the end of the school year.

Presentation of these reports to the board and the finance committee of the board, affording an opportunity for study of most important needs.

That the superintendent's report on acquisition of land and construction of buildings be presented to the board, referred to citizens' associations, and returned to the board, thus giving members of the community a chance to consider the items.

That the finance committee, upon completion of study of any budget item, report upon it to the board, indicating final approval or desire to defer favorable action.

Students Must Pay

Approval of Wilson Teachers College as a school for immigrant students was voted with the proviso that their admission would come under the tuition laws rgeulating entrance of nonresident students.

This action came after the board considered a petition to the Department of Labor to admit two Chinese students.

The question of whether the drastic economy program adopted at the last session of the board, restricting use of school buildings for meetings by different organizations after school hours, cropped up again. Board members authorized Dr. Ballou to keep the program in effect, reporting any recommendation for a deviation from the policy to the board.

The board also adopted a recommendation that special safety campaigns be pursued in the schools and that a motor vehicle drivers' school be established, sponsored by the board or other public agency and operated by WPA personnel.

If You Wish to Designate Your 'Chest' Gift

The Community Chest is one federated annual appeal for funds. YOUR gift is money vitally needed - - - not only to meet immediate human needs but for rehabilitation; not only to care for the sick but to safeguard the well; not only to prevent delinquency but to build character. Again in Greater Washington a campaign organization representing all creeds, all communities, all types of people have united to ask your help. But before you make your gift some advance information is important. Here it is - - -

   e. Prince Georges County—31 Organizations through the SOCIAL SERVICE LEAGUE.

TOTAL CAMPAIGN GOAL
$2,127,000.00

NOTE: Money designated to the Hospitalization Fund will be used to purchase clinic and open ward service for the needy, sick from the following hospitals:

a. Children's Hospital.
b. Columbia Hospital for Women.
c. Emergency Hospital.
d. Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.
e. Garfield Memorial Hospital.
f. Georgetown University Hospital.
g. George Washington University Hospital.
h. Providence Hospital.

Designation Instructions:

At the left is a list of social agencies which will raise their funds for 1939 in this Chest campaign.

At the top are 56 member agencies of the Chest.

Below are five Suburban Areas, each including several local organizations, all 64 of which are united in the Suburban Conference. These are not at present members of the Chest.

At the bottom are the 8 hospitals from which the Chest buys service for needy sick people.

Beside each name is the goal sought for 1939 for that participant—a goal determined after intensive study of the work and requested budgets of the organizations and the current financial circumstances of the community.

The people of Greater Washington are asked to give this total of $2,127,000 because it is needed, not by institutions, but by PEOPLE.

Before you make out YOUR pledge card, consult this list. It provides your opportunity:

1. To leave distribution of your gift to the Budget Committee of the Chest or

2. To determine and designate the specific services you want to support and how much you want to give to each.

If you DO NOT desire to designate, do not write on the back of the pledge card.

If you DO desire to designate:

1. Write on the space provided on the back of the pledge card the names and numbers of the organizations you select and the amount of your money each is to receive;

2. Write opposite the word "undesignated" the amount you wish to leave to the discretion of the Budget Committee to distribute;

3. Then fill in your pledge on the front of the pledge card.

No designation or gift may be made through the Community Chest to any organization which is not listed on this page.

By agreement with the Suburban Conference, contributions to its individual member organizations are made by designation to the Conference.

A few simple rules have been agreed upon to govern designations:

1. You may designate as many organizations as you wish.

2. You may designate up to 50 per cent of your total gift to any single agency.

3. All of your gift may be designated to the Hospitalization Fund (because this fund buys service from several institutions. See statement on how the Community Chest pays for needy sick).

4. Suburban residents:

a. Who both live and work outside the District may designate all of their gifts to the Suburban Conference. (Both business and home addresses must be written on the pledge card to make 100 per cent designation to the Conference valid.)

b. Who either live or work in the District may designate up to 50 per cent of their gifts to the Conference.

Each organization will receive, up to the total amount listed as its goal, the total amount of its designations, as reported by the Campaign Auditor, less its proportionate share of campaign and collection expense and of the reserve fund set up to cover pledges that cannot be paid because of death or unforseen emergencies.

The principle of fair play means that as each contributor is free to designate his gift as he wishes, he willingly accords the same privilege to others. Thus all contributors are able to avail themselves of the economy and efficiency of the Community Chest in putting their money where they want it to go.

Conference of Suburban Social Welfare Organizations

Again this year the Conference of Suburban Social Welfare Organizations will ask for funds for social agencies which make up its membership by joining in the Community Chest campaign.

The steps leading to this arrangement are wise ones:

1. The Conference (number 60 in the list on this page) was organized because the agencies in the four Counties and Alexandria found it expensive and competitive to raise their money separately;

2. So they arranged with the Chest to put on a joint campaign.

3. The member agencies of the Chest were glad to cooperate because they know that the need for social welfare programs takes no account of state or county or city boundaries; that the health problems of all Greater Washingon are related and inter-dependent; that so are poverty, crime, homelessness, orphanhood, and the many other social problems which scar a community;

4. So by mutual agreement a plan has been made to work together both to raise money and to face the job of constructive social action.

There will be a Suburban Unit in the campaign. It will raise all the money possible from suburban residents who do not normally give through the Governmental and Group Solicitation Units. But the amount it raises will not determine what the Suburban Conference organizations receive; that has been worked out in advance by a plan which the Chest and Conference have agreed is fair to all concerned.

The joint campaign and the plan of designation make it possible for EVERY PERSON in all this Greater Washington territory to GIVE GENEROUSLY, IN ONE PLEDGE, to carry on the vitally important social welfare programs now active in Washington and in the neighboring communities, and to give his money to be used substantially where and as he wishes.

How the Community Chest Pays for Hospital Care for the Needy Sick:

The Community Chest was organized as a federation of social agencies, primarily for the purpose of raising funds to provide as far as possible for the social welfare needs of people who cannot themselves pay for the services they need. Experience with earlier methods of raising funds shows that a Community Chest raises and collects the necessary funds at the lowest cost and with the least expense of time and effort on the part of agency board members, volunteer workers, and contributors. Any social agency which meets the standards and regulations established by the by-laws may, upon approval of the Board of Trustees, become an institutional member of the Chest for one year.

The Chest appropriates money directly to its institutional members on the basis of detailed study of their budgets by the volunteer Budget Committee of representative citizens, and then make monthly payments against those budgets. Hospitals, however, are not members of the Chest and it does not make any appropriation to them. It does set up a Hospitalization Fund and from this Fund it pays, at special rates, for the facilities made available to individual needy sick and injured people in open wards and in clinics. Not one cent of Chest money is used for medical and surgical services.

Those who need financial aid to get hospital care and are not eligible to the tax-supported hospitals are sent through the Health Security Administration (formerly the Central Admitting Bureau for Hospitals) to the private hospitals of their choice. The Health Security Administration is the Community Chest agency which finds out how much help these sick people must have to pay for necessary hospital care and then assigns to them money from the gifts of generous contributors to enable them to enter the only institutions in which they can receive the services essential to their health.

*X WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 3, 1938 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Hoyas Vs. Bucknell

On Friday night at Griffith Stadium, Jack Hagerty will send his Georgetown football team onto the field to do battle with Bucknell.

POVICH.

To Hagerty it will not be just another game on his schedule. To Hagerty the game will be an opportunity to expiate a football sin of 13 years' standing.

Back in 1925 Jack Hagerty was the quarterback of a Georgetown football team which, like his present production, entertained visions of an unbeaten season. Hagerty was the big shot backfield star of the first of Lou Little's Georgetown teams which were to leave a brilliant chapter in Georgetown football history.

That 1925 team, with Hagerty and Tony Plansky carrying the ball, and such as George Murtaugh, Heinie Jawish, "Moose" Mosko, Frank McGrath, Carl Waite and Claude Grigsby operating in the line, had won four straight games, had beaten Detroit, 24-0. It was to go on to lick Centre, 41-0, and Fordham, 27-0.

But on a November afternoon it met up with Bucknell on a muddy field at Griffith Stadium and then it was that Georgetown was to have its record besmirched for the only time during the season. Jack Hagerty accepts the blame for that defeat. He said so the other day.

Muffed a Punt

"That's one ball game, I'll never forget," Hagerty was saying. "I'll never forget it, first, because we were licked and our unbeaten record ruined, and secondly, because I helped to lose that ball game.

"In four years at Georgetown, as the quarterback of the freshman and varsity teams, I had never dropped a punt as a safety man. But that day against Bucknell, I muffed one. Bucknell recovered the ball and soon afterward kicked the field goal that beat us, 3 to 2.

"But we had a chance to pull that game out of the fire in the last quarter. We blocked a Bucknell punt and it rolled into the end zone. Four or five of our fellows scrambled for the ball and it looked like a touchdown for us. But a Bucknell man finally recovered it for a safety. As far as I'm concerned, there'll never be a tougher defeat than that one."

See Bowl Bid

But despite Hagerty's feeling about the Bucknell game of 1925, it is apparent that a Bucknell victory in 1938 would be at least equally as bitter a dose. Because this Georgetown team is the supreme delight of the Georgetown boy who came back to his alma mater as head coach. For five years, Jack Hagerty has been striving to produce just such a team as he will send on the field Friday. Defeat on that date would be a staggering jolt to the Hoyas. Already there is talk of an unbeaten season and a bowl bid.

To exuberant Georgetown followers, elated by the impressive 13-0 victory over Temple last week, the Bucknell game is the last serious obstacle to an unbeaten season which would be the first in the modern history of Georgetown football. Once past Bucknell, Georgetown would be an overwhelming favorite to lick West Virginia and Maryland and thus complete an unblemished campaign.

Hagerty has seen his sophomores, who predominate on his squad, justify his fondest hopes. In the Hoyas' early games, he started no less than eight of his first year men, saw them sweep to impressive victories. Against Temple last week, he chose to rely chiefly on his veteran talent and was rewarded with victory in the game that loomed as the most difficult on his schedule.

Likes to Gamble

Hagerty was gambling with his sophomore talent at the start of the season. He likes to gamble. For example, there was the Saturday afternoon at New York when Georgetown, after trailing, 13-7, pushed over another touchdown. Lou McFadden had kicked the first point after touchdown for the Hoyas and it was presumed that he would attempt the second. But no. Hagerty called this time on Augie Lio, a sophomore guard. It was Lio who booted the winning point across.

This Georgetown team, unlike Hagerty's former Georgetown clubs, is big. And there is a symmetry of size about it. Few are the traditional runty, Georgetown linemen and pony backs. On the field they present an impressive picture of both height and poundage. It may not be the best team in Georgetown's history, but we maintain that it is the most likely-looking.

No less spectacular than Georgetown's scoring plays has been the spectacular performance of Georgetown's lines. At Philadelphia the other evening, with the score tied at 0-0, Temple launched an offensive from the Georgetown 5-yard line. At the finish of the next four plays, Georgetown took the ball on its own 6. During those four plays, Jack Hagerty learned to like his 1938 ball club.

Attention 'Griff' Here's Whitehead

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—Manager Jimmie Dykes of Chicago's White Sox, here for a conference with Owner J. Louis Comiskey, said today he would trade Pitcher Johnny Whitehead "if I can get anything at all for him."

Whitehead's failure to fulfill the promise he showed as in his first year with the Sox has been a source of exasperation for Dykes. In his freshman year, 1935, Whitehead won his first eight straight games, but fell far behind that pace in succeeding seasons. Last year he worked in 32 games and was credited with 10 victories against 11 defeats.

Board Rules Quarles Won On Decision

Reverses Referee Says Bowen Erred Bout Given 5 Rounds Bans Technical K. O.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Referee Ray Bowen's action in stopping the Quarles-Hally bout at the Arena last Tuesday night and awarding Quarles a technical knockout victory in the sixth round was repudiated yesterday by a unanimous vote of the District Boxing Commission.

The commission revoked the decision and ordered the records altered to show Quarles the winner in a five-round bout, erasing the technical knockout phrase, to which Hally and his manager, Frank Bachman, strenuously objected. Bachman pointed out that his fighter has been stopped only once, by Henry Armstrong, and that the unfavorable publicity which would follow stories of Quarles defeating him by a T. K. O. would affect his chances of securing bouts.

The commission's official statement follows:

November 2, 1938.

The District of Columbia Boxing Commission today, by unanimous vote, overruled the action of Referee Ray Bowen in stopping last night's contest between Norment Quarles, of Hendersonville, N. C., and Wally Hally, of Los Angeles, Calif. The referee had declared Quarles the winner on a technical knockout in round six.

Although the bout was one-sided in favor of Quarles, he having won all five rounds by a point score of 50-35, the commission is of the opinion that the referee's action was not justified by the condition of contestant Hally and should have continued.

Up to and including the fifth round Hally's chances of winning appeared remote. However, this was a ten-round contest, and in view of the further fact that Hally was not in distress and not injured to the extent that would justify the action of the referee, there always remains the possibility that a contestant who has not already won the first rounds might win later in the contest.

The commission ruled that the bout be recorded as a five-round decision scored by Quarles over Hally.

ERNEST W. BROWN,
Chairman.

Commissioner Claude W. Owen and Fred Bucholz concurred in this opinion. Bowen was not present at the hearing, having telephoned Heinie Miller, secretary, that he was not feeling well. He appeared at the commission offices later in the day, however, and after hearing of the decision insisted that he still believed he had rendered the proper verdict.

Hally did not appear to be injured or in bad physical condition when the bout was halted, although he had absorbed a severe beating up to that point. He seemed to have weathered Quarles' best punches, and looked better in the sixth round than he did in any previous round. Quarles was guilty of holding Hally's right hand—his best punching hand, although Hally was accused of holding and clinching throughout the fight to avoid going down.

Hally was stunned more by Bowen's act than any of Quarles' punches, although the blond Southerner popped him with a half-dozen crackling lefts to the chin.

Bachman was quoted by Bowen as saying he (Bowen) could stop the fight if he didn't like Hally's style, but denied making such a remark. Bowen went to Hally's corner at the end of the fifth round and told him to show more fight or the bout would be halted.

Seabiscuit's Share of the Match Race Spoils—A Carrot

Riddle Bars Return Match With 'Biscuit

Ships to Narragansett Seabiscuit in Stake Seeks Riggs Win Is $10,000 Event

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Nov. 2.—War Admiral, beaten by three lengths in a match race with Seabiscuit, doesn't want to fight it out on a two-horse basis again at Pimlico.

His trainer, George Conway, used the terse phrase "No chance" today in turning down a suggestion for the second match contest from Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, vice president of the Maryland Jockey Club, who staged yesterday's thriller.

The Admiral will make his next start in the Rhode Island Handicap on November 12 at Narragansett, Samuel D. Riddle, owner of the horse, wrote the association today.

Tom Smith, trainer of Seabiscuit, readily agreed to the proposed contest on November 15, the final day of the Pimlico meeting. He made only one condition—that the purse be large enough to put Seabiscuit above the world's earning record of $376,744 set by Sun Beau.

Both in Feature Race

The Baltimore News Post said Riddle had not expressed enthusiasm about a second match race. The paper asked him:

"Will you meet Seabiscuit in a match race at Narragansett?"

"There is no necessity for that," he replied. "We are both entered in a race there and if Mr. Howard wants to race me let him start Seabiscuit in that race."

Next Saturday the 'Biscuit will make his next bid for a big chunk of the $36,264 he needs to equal Sun Beau's record.

He will go to the post in the $10,000 added Riggs Memorial Handicap, at Pimlico, which he won last year.

Seabiscuit is expected to carry top weight of 132 pounds in the Riggs, 11 pounds more than assigned Edward Friendly's Jacola, who beat the 'Biscuit at Laurel two weeks ago. Esposa, another victor over the son of Hard Tack, was due to carry the same load as Jacola.

Jimmy Foxx Voted Most Valuable Player In American League

Wins 305 Points Out of 336 Bill Dickey Is Runner-up Hank Greenberg Gets Third Place

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—James Emory Foxx, Boston Red Sox slugger, today was the first man in the history of baseball to be named "most valuable" three times in his career.

Foxx, who made a gallant comeback after being considered on the downward trail a year ago, and bothered all this year by a sinus infection, was overwhelmingly voted best in the American League by the baseball writers of America.

Of a possible 336 points, Jolting Jimmy polled 305 and was named on every ballot. Of the 24 ballots cast, 19 named him in the No. 1 spot and of the other five, two selected him as second choice and one each ranked him third, fourth and fifth.

As a member of the Philadelphia Athletics of a few years ago, Foxx won the award in 1932 and 1933, when he batted .364 and .356, respectively.

This year he led the American League in batting with a mark of .349, and was away out in front in runs batted in with a near-record, 174. He hit safely for 398 total bases, was second in home runs with 50, second in runs scored with 139 and third in total hits, 197.

Foxx was 31 years old October 22. He stands 5 feet 11 and weighs 185 pounds, bats and throws right-handed. In leading his league in batting, "Double-X" came from a meager .285 in 1937, his lowest average since he came to the American League in 1925, to his fine .349.

Second to Foxx in the poll was Bill Dickey, world champion Yankee catcher, who received three first-place votes, 11 seconds, two each in the third, fourth and fifth spots, one sixth and two sevenths for a 196 total. Only one committeeman failed to name him.

Hank Greenberg, Detroit bomber who led both leagues in home runs and came within two of Babe Ruth's all-time major league mark with 58 round-trippers, was third with 162 votes. He was not named in first place by any of the writers but only one of the committee failed to name him at all.

Two other members of the Ruppert Rifles were named to places in the poll. Charles, the Red, Ruffing, 21-game winner for the McCarthy Macers and the league's leading pitcher, was rated fourth. "Jolting Joe" DiMaggio wound up in sixth place.

In the fifth spot came another pitcher, Louie (Buck) Newsom of the seventh-place St. Louis Browns. Newsom was the only pitcher other than Ruffing to win 20 games.

Following is the complete list of players receiving one or more votes in the balloting, and the number of points scored by each:

Jimmie Foxx, Boston, 305; Bill Dickey, New York, 196; Hank Greenberg, Detroit, 162; Charley Ruffing, New York, 146; Buck Newsom, St. Louis, 111; Joe DiMaggio, New York, 106; Joe Cronin, Boston, 92; Earl Averill, Cleveland, 34; Cecil Travis, Washington, 33; Charley Gehringer, Detroit, 27; Jeff Heath, Cleveland, 24; Joe

Joe Savoldi Tops Mat Card Here

Former Irish Ace Still Is Popular To Meet Indian Won From Londos

Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame dynamic former All-American football hero, who has been doing all right by himself in the mat game since returning from his European wrestling wars, invades Turner's Arena tonight to try and boot the Navajo Indian, Chief Little Wolf, for a defeat in their headline bout.

"A new and greater Savoldi!" That is what Savoldi's press agents are blowing their trumpets about, and thus far Joe has lived up to all advance ballyhoo as to his wrestling prowess and skill.

One time conqueror of Jim Londos when Londos was champion of the world, and with a recent draw with the Greek to his credit, Savoldi will be up against the Injun tonight. Little Wolf, almost as broad as he is long, never has been known to have a bad match chalked up against him. He is no gentle wrestler, preferring the rough and wild style of grappling.

The match promises to develop into a battle between Little Wolf's "death lock" and Savoldi's "dropkick." Joe still likes to boot 'em just as he did during the days when he drop-kicked for the Irish.

But Savoldi and the squatty Little Wolf won't be the only attractions. The Golden Terror, 305-pound masked wrestler, returns, perhaps to incite another riot. The Terror, whose identity has been carefully guarded, meets Tom Mahoney, a big, fast Irishman from California. They clash in a semiwindup. The Terror "lambasted" a couple of ringsiders recently at the arena.

A new Indian wrestler, Jules Strongbow, a Cherokee standing 6 feet 11, weighing 280 pounds, goes on display for the first time here, meeting Casey Berger, former Scranton coal miner. Strongbow is said to be quite a strong fellow. He was a strong man in the circus before Toots Mondt signed him up.

Dr. Len Hall, claimant of the international title, meets Jack McArthur, another Irishman, and Slammin' Hank Metheny, former lightheavyweight prize fighter, makes his bow against Sammy Menacher.

First bout at 8:30.

Nevada's Football Team Disbanded After Rumpus

Reno, Nev., Nov. 2 (AP).—University of Nevada's discordant and not too successful football season was at an end today, the squad disbanded by order of the board of regents.

The regents' action came after team members petitioned the board to oust Coach Doug Dashiell, Assistant Coach Keller and Director of Athletics J. E. Martin.

Dashiell resigned after the petition was presented, but the regents refused to accept the resignation or remove the other men, terminating the season instead.

Nevada won two games, tied one and lost three.

Ahearn Will Offer New Talent Show

A "new talent" show—that will be the offering for next Monday night's boxing card at Turner's Arena.

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn announced yesterday that he was determined to dig up a new sensation to replace Archibald, Abrams and Mamakos.

Next Monday's show will consist of two eight-rounders and three sixes. A number of new faces will be seen.

"It seems as though fans want action and would rather see some young, green kid with plenty of moxie get in there and throw fists," Ahearn stated. "Well, I'm going to give them that next week."

Mrs. Roosevelt Accepts Olympic Chairmanship

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today accepted the honorary chairmanship of the 1940 American Olympic Women's Track and Field Committee, the American Olympic Association announced.

With President Roosevelt honorary chairman of the association, it marks the first time both members of the executive family have been officials of an American Olympic squad.

The games will be held in Finland.

Pair to Sign Today For Garden Battle; Joe's 5th Defense

Heavyweight Crown Is at Stake First All-Colored Event Since 1913 Jacobs Angles for Other Title Bouts

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 2.—Joe Louis, czar of all the heavyweights, who arrived in town murmuring "fighting is my business" will return to his trade in Madison Square Garden on Friday night, January 27. His opponent will be John Henry Lewis, the Negro who has been light-heavyweight champion of the world since 1935.

Mike Jacobs arranged for the Bomber's fifth defense of his title in conference with John Roxborough, one of Louis' two managers, and Gus Greenlee, of Pittsburgh, who guides the Phoenix, Ariz., light-heavyweight king. Quizzed on the financial details Jacobs snapped, "they'll be released in a few days."

Uncle Mike revealed no plans save the bare announcement of the fight. Lewis, who beat Al Gainer, of New Haven, Conn., in 15 slow rounds at New Haven last Friday night, will arrive in town in the morning to meet Louis, already on hand for the postponed Ceferino Garcia-Henry Armstrong duel. There will be a formal signing at the Hippodrome in the morning, with the customary fanfare.

Fight Is Unusual

The fight is an unusual one. It is the first all-Negro heavyweight title battle since Jack Johnson, then champion, outpointed Battling Jim Johnson in Paris in 1913.

Jacobs' office made it plain the fight in no way would interfere with negotiations for a bout between Louis and Max Baer on the Coast in April.

"The San Francisco Exposition people have until December 20 to agree to Mike's terms for putting on a bout there," said a spokesman for Jacobs. "If they do, the fight will go on in April, providing Louis wins this one."

The heavyweight champion has done no ring work since he hammered Max Schmeling into the hospital in one round last June. Before he licked the German, he had knocked out Nathan Mann and Harry Thomas and outpointed Tommy Farr in defense of the title he won from Jim Braddock at Chicago, June 22, 1937.

The immediate reaction to the bout in New York was astonishment. The boys on cauliflower row bellowed, "It won't draw flies." On second thought they changed their minds, reminding listeners that Jacobs makes very few poor matches from a business standpoint.

May Not Draw

If the Lewis-Gainer bout is any criterion, a fight between two Negroes for a title will not draw; there were less than 4,000 in an arena seating 11,000 when they met in New Haven.

Lewis, until today, was in the "black books" of the New York State Athletic Commission, which had deprived him of his title in this State for failing to defend the crown against Tiger Jack Fox, Seattle Negro. Lewis in turn had started suit against the commission for discrimination.

"We have nothing against John Henry Lewis fighting as a heavyweight," Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the commission, said tonight when told of the bout. "Our quarrel with him was over his light-heavyweight title defense. He will need a license to fight in this State, of course, and the whole bout must be okayed by the commission before it is legal."

The bout means another detour for Tony Galento, who wanted either Louis or Lewis this winter or spring. He was matched with John Henry last summer but Tony's illness stopped that one and there was talk of another between the two this winter in the Atlantic City Auditorium.

Joe Walsmith Wins His Match—But 'Twas in Vain

A golf sequel to Roy Riegels' "wrong way run" occurred in the Rock Creek turkey tournament yesterday over the uptown public links layout when Joe Walsmith defeated Buddy Usilton, 5 and 4, and they weren't even supposed to play.

It seems the pairings on the board were written so close together it was difficult to identify an opponent. Just taking a hasty glance at the chart, Walsmith and Usilton decided they were first round combatants and decided to get it over with in a hurry.

Very much on his game, Walsmith trounced Usilton, who was very much off his game. Walsmith proudly stepped to the scoreboard and called off "Walsmith, 5 and 4." Ray Henry saw the mistake and assigned them to their proper opponents. The victor was a very disappointed man while Usilton, granted a reprieve, vowed to walk away with the fight.

Local Marksman 2d in Pistol Shoot

Savannah, Ga., Nov. 2.—Walter Walsh, Washington's lone entrant in the South Atlantic pistol championships being held here, came within four points of the Georgia State title as he placed second to Harry Reeves, of Detroit. His two second places in today's individual events gave him a 2-point lead over the national champion, Al Hemming, of Detroit, and put him in runner-up position for the coveted South Atlantic title and money pot in tomorrow's finals.

His score over the national course with the .38-caliber handgun was 286. Tomorrow's finals will include the test with the .22 and .45 caliber guns over the same course. Walsh has now been in the money and medals in all five of the individual events and teamed with Smitty Brown, of Tampa, for a second place in the doubles match fired yesterday.

Salmon, Idaho, Will See First Grid Contest

Salmon, Idaho, Nov. 2 (AP).—This is an isolated town where a pigskin is what holds a pig together and where turf is what cattle survive on.

The natives are going to get a shock Armistice Day when Salmon High School's newly-organized football team meets Darby, Mont., in the first official game ever played in Lemhi County.

Not one member of the Salmon squad has seen another team in action and the Salmon coach estimates that four-fifths of the county's residents never have seen a football game.

Bucknell Passers Prepare to End Georgetown Streak

On Hunting

Many nimrods think theirs is the epitome of sport and that the word "sportsman" fits their kind far better than it does any other outdoorsmen. Possibly they are right in their contentions, but we have many occasions to wonder whether even those who meticulously try to live up to the tenets of their creed do not fail in meeting the full responsibility their sport entails.

ACKERMAN.

Merely buying a license and taking game within the bag limits in an orthodox manner is but one side of the pastime. How about those who raise and care for your birds and animals, not only through the drought and heat of the summer, but through the months of ice and snow as well—the farmers? Have hunters given them the consideration they deserve? Evidently not, or else more than a fifth of all our land would not be posted.

It seems as though many sportsmen who take pride in being more than fair in the normal course of their contact with others, fail to treat their farmer host with the courtesy that is only his due, when they get afield for a day or two during the open season.

They often shoot over his land without asking permission, but when they do, and receive it, how many think to stop at the farmhouse after the day is done with their thanks, and a fat bunny or two or a brace of brids as a token of their appreciation.

Instead, numberless so-called sportsmen will shoot within the very shadow of the buildings in which is housed the farmer's livestock, leave fence rails down, and gates open in their eager pursuit of game; tramp over freshly seeded fields, and show a general disregard of the property rights of others. Is it any wonder so much of our farmer friends' land is posted? That he is so slow to see the value of the Farmer-Sportsman idea.

Neither is the only responsibility of the hunter the following of these simple precepts—it is far greater than that, for if we are ever to have better hunting it is up to him to see that other hunters follow the beaten track also, even to the reporting of any irregularities. Hard to take for most of us—such a creed, for few of us care to think of ourselves as our "brother's keeper."

We have noted flights of wild fowl for almost six weeks now, not only on the Potomac and Chesapeake, but as well on the fresh-water river marshes of south Jersey. From their numbers there is little doubt but what we still have the best season in many years.

On Occoquan Bay, where more than a few local hunters have blinds, widgeon, gadwells and black ducks are dotting the water in every direction. With them are an occasional canvasback or redhead.

The Susquehanna Flats have always been the point of greatest congregation of canvasbacks along the whole Atlantic flyway, although for the past several seasons the numbers of birds reached an all-time low. However, this year is something else, for there is in progress now the greatest flight many hunters can remember.

Old-time observers along the North Carolina coast predict the greatest migration in the past 50 years, based not only on the early flights that have already taken possession of the sounds and marshes laying behind the outer banks, but because these waters are again fresh and food grasses and roots are returning in fine shape over a wide area.

The new Pea Island Refuge, just a few miles below Oregon Inlet, if intial flights are any criterion, will see thousands of Canada geese, mallards, black ducks, pintails and redheads, as well as brant and snow geese.

We have a note from Bob Burdette to the effect that if it is possible to rent his blinds on Occoquan Bay for the season he will not be in a position to care for parties by the day. We wish him the best of luck, but we are going to miss him, just as many other hunters in this section will, if he isn't available, for the best bags of the past two seasons were from his blinds.

From Wayland Baum, Wanchese, N. C., word that he is all set for the opening on November 15 with good blinds and boxes in good locations, and plenty of decoys. Washington bluefishermen probably will remember him as a party boat captain, but like many other fishermen in this section, he turns to hunting when the season is open.

Filchock 'Skins New Ball Carrier

Filchock to Start Workout at Stadium

A deep plot to acquire additional territory for at least one Czech is being perfected these days at Griffith Stadium.

There, where the Redskins work out daily, Head Coach Flaherty is molding a new attack featuring his Czechoslovakian ball-carrier, Frank Filchok.

With Andy Farkas and Bill Hartman still nursing injuries and apparently out of the game with the Pirateson Sunday. Filchock has acquired new stature as a Redskin scoring threat. The bulk of Flaherty's running plays on Sunday will call Filchock into action.

The blonde-haired ball-carrier made a profound impression on the Redskins' coach with his display against the Brooklyn Dodgers last Sunday. Filchock teamed with Sammy Baugh's passing to launch three assaults on the Brooklyn goal, two of which culminated in field goal attempts by Riley Smith.

After Farkas suffered a sprained foot and Hartman injured a leg muscle, Filchock proved to be the workhorse of the Redskins at Brooklyn. He showed an ability to hit the line and run outside the tackles and the ends, and one occasion picked up 11 yards in a mad dash from the Brooklyn 25-yard line.

The Redskins-Pirates battle will be the first appearance of the widely heralded Whizzer White on the same field with Washington's Sammy Baugh. It is expected to produce the Pirates' largest crowd of the season.

Filchock on Sunday will be playing against the team which plucked him from the Indiana University backfield last fall and sold him to the Redskins for $1,000, despite the fact that he was the Pirates' outstanding performer at the time.

Official league statistics announced yesterday reveal that Andy Farkas, scoreless last Sunday, yielded his place as the league's leading scorer to Don Hutson, deft Green Bay end who has amassed 49 points this season. Farkas retains second place.

Farkas also yielded his ranking as the league's leading ground gainer when he failed to break away for any sizeable gains against the Dodgers. The new leader is Bill Shepherd of the Lions who gained 152 yards against the Bears to vault into the top position with a season's total of 308 yards, five more than Farkas can show.

Slingin' Sammy Baugh, who completed 13 of 26 passes on Sunday, took second place in forward passing efficiency and is threatening Ed Danowski's league lead. Baugh has completed 45 of 81 passes while Danowsky shows 50 completed heaves in 84 attempts.

Illinois Race Tracks Show Big Decrease

Chicago, Nov. 2 (AP).—A decrease of slightly more than a half million dollars in betting at Illinois race tracks this season compared with the 1937 season was reported today by the State Racing Commission.

A total of $39,280,284 was wagered at the seven tracks during the 157 days of running this season, compared with $39,844,089 in 1937.

Army and Navy Club Women's Turkey Tourney Draws 128

18-Hole Event to Be Played Tomorrow
Is Final Women's Tournament of Year
Marion Brown, Helen Dettweiler Play

Mrs. George Hussey, chairman of the Army and Navy Club's Women's Invitation Turkey tournament tomorrow announced pairings for 128 entries in the closing event of the year for the fair golfers.

The tournament at the Service Club will bring to a close one of the heaviest tournament cards in the history of the local women's golf. The prizes will be turkeys, with a generous number up for the low net and gross winners.

The field includes virtually every player of note, including the trio that have monopolized the gross prizes in every event, Helen Dettweiler, Marion Brown and Mrs. Betty Meckley.

Pairings and starting times from the first, tenth and nineteenth tees.

3-Mile 'Chase Meet Feature

At Middleburg Hunt
Races Set Nov. 12
Six Events Carded

Middleburg, Va., Nov. 2.—The Glenwood National Steeplechase, a 3-mile brush race over 20 big Liverpool jumps, will be the feature of the fall race meet of the Middleburg Hunt, which will be held Saturday, November 12, on the Glenwood Park course, near Middleburg.

This race is for 4-year-olds and upwards and carries a purse of $1,000. Mrs. George L. Ohrstrom's Glory Road captured the race last year, with Mrs. J. C. Clark's Little Cottage II coming in second. F. Ambrose Clark's Sunny Thoughts and Brookmeade's National Anthem fell in this race when both were going strong.

Six races will be held during the afternoon. Others on the program include the R. Penn Smith, jr., Challenge Plate, a 3½-mile timber race, Capt. Ewart Johnston's Seafarin Dan came in ahead of the aged Ostend in this race last year; the Dresden, 2 miles over brush, which was captured last year by Mrs. David A. Buckley's Head Hunter; the Oakham, 1½-mile hurdle race, won last year by Homesteader, of the Montpelier Stables; the Saughton Lodge, 1¾ miles over hurdles, easily captured last year by R. K. Mellon's Tool Box, and the Brookhill, 1¼ miles on turf, which is the last number on the program.

The first race will be called at 1:30 p. m.

Prophet Without Honor

New York, Nov. 2.—Sometimes recognition comes from far places and a long time after. To Jimmie Bronson it came from France for services rendered 20 years ago.

Twenty years ago Jimmie Bronson organized the physical recreation among the Allies. In his quiet, modest, unassuming way he went among the war-weary armies, buoyed their sagging spirits with games and diversions. He organized a boxing tournament and refereed the bouts himself, and when he came home he brought the boy who had won the heavyweight championship of the allied forces with him.

VIDMER.

Ever since then Jimmie has been mixed up in the pugilistic profession, sometimes as a manager, sometimes as a promoter, sometimes serving as a second or adviser. And perhaps if he had brought the boy who won the light-heavyweight title with him, instead of the heavyweight winner, his fortunes would have fared better, for the light-heavyweight was named Gene Tunney, a lad who attained gold and glory.

But Jimmie returned as the manager of Bob Martin, who turned out to be just a fair heavyweight in the professional ranks, and most of Jimmie's fighters have been like that—just fair. He might, if destiny had smiled, have been the manager of the heavyweight champion of the world, but 20 years ago even the astute little fellow in the bow tie couldn't anticipate Tunney's rise to riches and royal rank.

Jimmie has handled the affairs of a lot of fighters in 20 years. Some have been headliners, some have been complete flops. Tony Biddle financed one prospect and turned the management over to Jimmie. Jock Whitney financed the development of another and also chose Jimmie as the man to guide him. But few of Bronson's brood have been money-makers and none have turned out to be good enough to make a fortune in a single night.

The Hard Way

It is probable that Jimmie could have done better if he imitated the tactics of his business associates, who stole fighters from each other, built up potential champions on tissue paper reputations, lied and chiseled and were merciless.

But Jimmie Bronson was an odd character in an odd business; or rather it was an odd business for him to be in. Somehow, he couldn't bring himself to do the things his colleagues did, or practice their arts of deceit and deception. Jimmie was just naturally on the level, and though he made friends wherever he went, he didn't make much money.

He has been around the pugilistic precincts for 20 years and up to now no one has exhibited the slightest interest in the fact that he, of all the men mixed up in the racket, is a credit to the profession. No one has seemed to be aware of the qualities which he possesses instinctively, for in the boxing business it is a matter of every man for himself and anything goes.

And then just the other day he was summoned by the French consul general and a medal was pinned on his breast on which was inscribed the words, "Medaille d'honneur d'or education physique"—the gold medal of honor of physical education.

Behind the Lines

It was awarded by the French government after all these years in recognition of the services rendered by Jimmie Bronson during and after the war. Others had been decorated with the Croix du Guerre, the Legion D'Honneur, the Medaille Militaire for heroism under fire and military distinction. But after 20

Hoya Students Will Hold Giant Pep Rally Tonight at School

Redskins To Address Gathering

Honor Great Team But Coach Worries G. W., C. U. Entrain For Saturday Games

By Jack Munhall.

Swept up in a wave of enthusiasm which no Georgetown football team in recent years has been able to arouse, Hilltop students tonight plan a giant pep rally and bonfire celebration to welcome home Jack Hagerty's undefeated eleven and send it against Bucknell tomorrow night with a ringing vote of confidence.

As Catholic University and George Washington are en route to foreign fields to meet DePaul in Chicago and Clemson in Greenville in South Carolina, respectively, the Georgetown undergraduate body will listen to addresses by Redskin Coach Ray Flaherty and his captain, Turk Edwards. Then they will gather in the clearing behind the school, build the traditional bonfire and dance in the shimmering light to the pumping strains of "Sons of Georgetown."

But as these victory songs are wafted to the room of Coach Jack Hagerty they may sound a melancholy note, for in practice yesterday the Georgetowns were a far cry from the spirited club that outfought Temple for a great triumph.

Against freshmen, equipped with Bucknell plays, the varsity was a feeble, unimpressive lot and, while off days are more or less expected, Hagerty is worried lest the boys fail to snap back in time to repel the Thundering Herd. Bucknell, already beaten and beaten badly by Temple, has primed for this game and with full player strength available expects to dump Georgetown from the undefeated ranks.

The Bisons, boasting a line which will outweigh Georgetown's, and a crack backfield, led by Louis Tomasetti, have been working all week to throw up a defense for the Hoyas' bewildering spread formations and they believe they have been successful.

Colonials Leave For Clemson Game

The George Washington contingent, numbering 30 players and the usual retinue of coaches, trainers and newspapermen, leaves at 11:59 tonight for Greenville, S. C., where on Saturday Clemson will be met in an intersectional game.

The Colonials will be quartered in Greenville and will work out on the Furman University field tomorrow night.

Yesterday G. W. concentrated on its passing attack and employed no less than five throwers in a lengthy drill. Lud Urick, Vic Sampson, Billy Richardson, "Biff" Barden and Booth all took turns at tossing to Ends Bob Nowaskey and Sam Babich. Urick and Booth are strangers in that business, not having been called upon to pass all season.

Catholic Is Off To Chicago

Catholic University's Cardinals will entrain at 5 o'clock this evening for Chicago and Saturday's game with DePaul. The squad is due to arrive in the Windy City early tomorrow morning and is scheduled to hold a warm-up practice on Northwestern's field some time in the afternoon.

Tickets for the Armistice Day football game between Catholic University and the University of Miami at Griffith Stadium, November 11, are now on sale at Griffith Stadium and at Legion posts throughout the city.

Tech Will Rule Slight Choice Over Central Tomorrow

Teams Wind Up Preparations for Crucial Tilt Winner Probably Will Annex Inter-High Title

In preparation for their game tomorrow, which probably will decide the inter-high football series race, Central and Tech yesterday engaged in final contact workouts.

To Tech the clash is the first of three games it must win to complete its late season drive to the title which winless Eastern already has forfeited. The next test for the McKinley eleven will be against second-place Western and its final against the upsetting Indians of Anacostia. Central is safely past the Western hazard, having upset the Raiders early in the season.

Coach Rusty Thompson, of Tech, was non-committal on the probable outcome of the crucial game, though his manner was confident. "It'll be the hardest fought game of the series, you can bet on that. And we'll try our best to win."

Then he pointed out with ill-concealed pride the unusual number of dependable reserves at his command. His first-string backfield of Bach, Berry, Gilmore, and Dean, he rates only slightly superior to the second stringers, of which Swarr, Cockrille and Hall are the best.

Five ends of almost equal ability also are of great advantage to Tech and along the other line positions the same condition prevails.

In the matter of statistics, Tech would seem to have a slight edge over its ancient rival. Unscored on, Thompson's boys have rolled up 55 points in series competition. Central's defensive record was marred in the first quarter of the Western game, but since then it has held its opposition scoreless while tallying 59 points.

Trials Set for Polo Cup Defense

New York, Nov. 2 (U.P.).—The first active step in the defense of the historic International Polo Cup against the challenge of Great Britain was taken today. Robert E. Strawbridge, jr., chairman of the association, sent letters to 13 players inviting them to take part in trials for the team to be chosen to defend the cup at Meadowbrook next June.

The men invited to report on May 1 for training and trial matches include all the players in the country rated at seven goals or more on handicap and two outstanding six-goal players.

No Vote for Feller, Who Fanned 241

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Bobby Feller, the Cleveland Indians' strikeout king, wound up with 241 strikeouts on his record as a pitcher this year, but failed to receive a single vote in the baseball writers of America's balloting for the most valuable player in the league. Feller won 17 games and lost 11, pitching 20 complete games, two of them shutouts.

Navy Works For Irish

Fear Air Attack Play With Frosh Backs Are Ready

Annapolis, Nov. 2.—Navy continued drilling against the aerial bombardment expected Saturday in the Notre Dame game as Head Coach Hank Hardwick put the varsity through a lengthy scrimmage with Lieut. Cooke's plebe eleven this afternoon.

The staff has been working particularly hard on Cliff Lenz, line battering back, who may step up into a first team berth if his defensive work improves. But all of the backs, Whitehead, Wood and Cooke included, were pupils this afternoon as the team attempted to stop Notre Dame style passes.

The Irish, according to Navy scout notes, rely on long sweeping runs around the flanks, and have a powerful line to open up holes for the ball carriers. Another characteristic of the team is an ability to capitalize on punt returns, and the scouts report that their safety men are threats every time they lay hands on a ball. In this event, Whitehead, Navy's ace punter, will be instructed to kick 'em outside.

A standout in the Penn game last week, Harold Harwood, reserve center, has done nothing in practice this week to lessen his hopes of breaking into the starting line-up Saturday. Harwood was handicapped earlier in the season by a series of minor mishaps, but seems to have struck his true stride in the last two weeks.

Notre Dame is scheduled to entrain for Washington from LaPaz, Ind., tomorrow afternoon at 5:30 o'clock, and will arrive in Washington Friday morning at 8:30 o'clock. The team will visit Holy Cross College for mass and breakfast, and later go to the Wardman Park Hotel after a brief sight-seeing tour.

At 2 o'clock a workout is scheduled on the Georgetown Prep School field, which will be closed to all but members of the press. Notre Dame will not leave for Baltimore until Saturday morning at 11:30 o'clock, arriving at the stadium one hour before the opening kickoff.

Gophers Keep Busy

Minneapolis, Nov. 2 (AP).—Passing and kicking were stressed in Minnesota's workout today, as the Gophers prepared for their meeting with Iowa here Saturday.

*Pajama Waistband Adjuster

The species Man, way back to the dark age, has ever been noted for his comfort loving attitude. But Jumping Jupiter, if you're one of those Pajama Waistband Adjusters . . . you just ain't got comfort, that's all. Seriously speaking, do you loosen your pajama waistband when you go to bed and tighten it when you walk around the room? Why go to all that bother! Try these pajamas that need only one adjustment for your sleeping or waking hours. It's dollars to doughnuts that once you wear this new-fangled, but laboratory tested, idea you're going to stock up on it.

Norwegian Grain

SEE LETTER FROM ONE OF AMERICA'S GREATEST TANNERS

The greatest custom bootmakers in New York (Wylie & Peterson) designed these four distinctive Winter styles for their exclusive custom trade, and selected this plump, soft finished, oil-treated Norwegian Grain as the best leather produced for this type of shoe.

We actually paid $40 to $50 for each handmade original, and reproduced them in our Factory, with the same fine quality Norwegian Grain.

It is some satisfaction to know that there is no greater Style Authority, and the letter from this famous Tanner, with whom we have been doing business for more than forty-five years, presents the strongest evidence of Regal Quality Leadership.

A-Hunting They Did Go!

Sun Egret Wins Pimlico Feature; Dead Heat in 3d Race

At the Post

Selections at Pimlico.

Dear Al:

Now it can be told. On the eve of the War Admiral-Seabiscuit race, I received a letter signed "One Who Knows." The writer claimed to be on the inside of the set-up for the big race. He said that he had very good reason to believe that the race was fixed for War Admiral to win. Both owners want to retire their horses to the stud with big selling points, he brought out, and they have agreed that War Admiral will beat Seabiscuit and be retired. By getting War Admiral out of the way, Seabiscuit will be left an open field in the big stakes so that he will be able to pass Sun Beau's all-time money-winning record. I'm expecting another letter from "One Who Knows" telling me that Seabiscuit didn't leave his barn and that it was Italian Harry, running as a "ringer." I want to give credit where credit is due. Forecaster, in the News, also picked Seabiscuit. A New York newsreel camera man went to Laurel by mistake for the big race. I wonder what became of that exclusive rumor that Wayne Wright and not Charlie Kurtsinger was going to ride War Admiral. Idle Miss, the great filly destroyed after she broke her leg last week at Laurel, was insured for $10,000. But she was worth much more than that to Owner B. F. Christmas. Tiger Sam Finkelstein, telegraph manager, sent 180,261 words out of the track on the big race. Few of the turf experts who picked War Admiral had alibis after the race. When your pick is beaten in track record time there can be no excuses. Horsemen are delighted to learn that Charles Town will allow ten starters in each race instead of the eight-limit heretofore. Jockey Al Shelhamer, who broke a collar bone at Havre de Grace, has started galloping horses for Guy Bedwell and will ride this winter.

BILL.

First race—Ballinderry forced the pace in a route race at Laurel but tired. Previously he turned in good effort behind Big Hurry. Aster Princess has been running out of her class but gets a good figure here. Blazearound has class but no early foot.

Second race—Joanny demonstrated her ability when she whipped an imposing field of better grade platers in the other town. No Ending was well liked in New York but couldn't unjrack himself. Lenpola is in good form but is moving up.

Third race—Sea Ted was a hot choice in New York last month when he dropped a close decision. Gets the call here. Farndale gave all he had and finished second to The Hour at Laurel; not outclassed and can win it. Millrace has shown fair form.

Fourth race—Pit Bull got nothing when installed favorite over Kayak II his first start this year but with that heat under his belt he has the edge over Billionaire. The latter received a lot of betting support, but failed to threaten, with Sun Egret at Laurel. Can better that race. Savernake for the show.

Fifth race—Toddle On gave a fair account of himself behind Kayak II and previously was second to Jacola. He gets the call over this field. John One has been consistent in late races in top-notch company and may upset the dope. Grass Cutter has a good chance.

Sixth race—Savage Beauty won her last at Laurel over a good field and was second to Seabiscuit at Havre. Looks best here. Roseretter is a mare with plenty of class but prefers a longer route. Roguish Girl rose from the claiming ranks to beat handicap horses in New York.

Seventh race—Idyllic could do no better than third to Paper Drop last start but has been consistent this season and meets a cheaper field today. Dark Revue looms as the chief contender on the merits of a good fourth at Laurel and a win in New York. Wispy won last but is moving up.

Eighth race—Scatterbrain turned up a good thing at Laurel finishing second after tiring in the final stages. Can do it. Mothel was an easy winner over a cheaper field at Laurel and is the one to beat. Would Dare, dropping down, gets a good figure.

Best bet—Toddle On.

Lackawanna, Romaunt in Even Finish

Daily Double $712.20
14 Cash In Tickets
Place Tie in Handicap
8,000 Watch Events

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Pimlico, Md., Nov. 2.—Not a Seabiscuit or a War Admiral appeared on the Wednesday program, but there were thrills galore for the crowd of 8,000. For those who like their races close, a tight dead heat for first money marked the running of the third race and another deadlock for third money was recorded in the $2,500 added Baltimore Autumn Handicap, the feature. For those who prefer the monetary angle, a $712.20 daily double was paid to 14 lucky ticket holders.

A. C. Compton's hard-running Sun Egret won the day's outstanding race, driving to a two-length decision in front of a gang-rush to the wire which involved four horses. Mower, from the powerful Millsdale Stable, was judged second but the camera could not separate The Fighter and Lady Maryland.

Sun Egret paid an $8.50 mutuel and Mower was held at 39 to 1.

Dead Heat in Third

While the feature was a rip-snorting struggle of 6 furlongs in which the field was bunched like cattle entering the stretch, the tightest fit of the afternoon was that of Romaunt, an even money favorite, and Lackawanna, at 116 to 1 in the third race. The judges consulted the picture and the "dead heat" sign was displayed. Lackawanna's bridle broke as the horses came out of the paddock and the field had reached the starting point before the colt came on the track.

Under the rules, Jockey Westrope was forced to take Lackawanna over the same route to the post as the others had covered. He galloped the colt over the ground and finally took him to the 6 furlong chute. Romaunt ran a powerful race to get to the front in the stretch but nearing the wire, Lackawanna came up with a rush that earned him half a loaf.

Manila Bay put the finishing touches on the heavy daily double started by Wilfrid G. in the first race.

Ten claiming jumpers battled over the 2-mile course in the steeplechase that opened the program. Wilfred G., owned by Gordon F. Perry and ridden by Eddie Mitchell, took the test by two lengths from Court Time. Otophan was third and eight lengths further back. Swimalong set the early pace, but stopped when challenged by the ultimate winner. Wilfrid G. paid $70.10.

Manila Bay, owned by the Montpelier Stable and trained by S. L. Buch, of Washington, shocked the talent in the second race by winning by a length at a $67.70 mutuel. Fairy Dale and Simoon followed the leader to the wire. Fine Airs, heavily played favorite, was a disappointing fourth in the field of 12 3-year-olds. Manila Bay came from last place under good handling by Jockey R. Dotter.

The second stablemate of War Admiral to win at the meeting was Get Off, a son of American Flag. The Glen Riddle Farm's colt won by a length from Balloter, the latter charging up in the final 20 yards. Braxton was third in the group of a dozen juveniles going 6 furlongs. Ridden by Charlie Kurtsinger, Get Off paid $7.40.

Sandy Boot, a New York campaigner, made good in his first Maryland outing. Excellently handled by Jockey Ira Hanford, he came from far back and won by a length and a half from Sir Jim James. White Sand accounted for show money. The winner was the favorite at $4.60.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANILA BAY, $67.70, $26.80, $14.00; FAIRY DALE, $5.30, $3.40; SIMOON, $5.90.

MANILA BAY, slow to begin, worked way to contention on outside, moved up with bold rush to take command entering stretch and held sway under driving tactics. FAIRY DALE, within striking distance from start, went to leaders with good energy when asked, but could not resist winner. SIMOON, slow to begin, gained gradually throughout running to show good effort. FINE AIRS, keen forward factor from beginning, weakened in closing test. ARCADIAN went evenly. MAHLETTE had speed in spots. HARRIET ANN stopped after racing. FRANCO SAXON into defeat to get to front after a half. LANCASHIRE had early speed.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROMAUNT (entry and dead heat), $2.90, $2.80, $2.60; LACKAWANNA (dead heat), $88.90, $36.10, $14.20; DRAWOUT, $4.30.

ROMAUNT, forwardly placed from break, was steadied along, disposed of SAVING GRACE when put to drive and closed with good courage under punishment. LACKAWANNA raced close to leaders on outside, moved up approaching stretch and closed full of run. DRAWOUT lacked racing room in early stages and closed with belated rush. SPANISH BUNT came strongly at end. GREEN ICE was held safe. READY-ABOUT had early speed and stopped. SAVING GRACE quit badly.

FOURTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. The Carrollton. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:55. Off 2:58½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GET OFF, $7.40, $4.70, $3.50; BALLOTER, $5.30, $3.40; BRAXTON, $8.30.

GET OFF, within striking distance of pace from start, took command with bold move leaving backstretch, opened a gap, but had to be put to pressure at end. BALLOTER to contention on outside, but weakened in final furlong. BANNER MAN worked way BIG RED gained gradually throughout running. FELSUN was not dangerous. BALMY SPRING pressed early pace of SHORT CAKE and weakened. SHORT CAKE stopped badly.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SANDY BOOT, $4.60, $2.90, $2.30; SIR JIM JAMES, $6.00, $3.40; WHITE SAND, $3.10.

SANDY BOOT, not hurried in early stages while racing on own courage, improved position with rush when asked, took command entering stretch and was kept to drive to end. SIR JIM JAMES was steadied along for half, got to front leaving backstretch and closed with good energy. WHITE SAND, under heavy restraint to backstretch, came through on inside entering stretch, but hung in closing drive. SWEEPSTAFF was not a serious factor. HONEY CLOUD and HEADIN HOME quit from hard usage while setting and pressing pace.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $2,500 added. The Baltimore Autumn Handicap. For all ages. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:58½. Off 4:02½. Winner, A. C. SUN EGRET, within striking distance from start, came between horses with rush to take command and opened a lead to hold sway to end. MOWER, sent up on outside, went in the thick of contention and closed gamely while in close quarters. THE FIGHTER, in the early pace and fought it out willingly when displaced, but lacked racing room in closing stages. LADY MARYLAND improved her position gradually and was going with good energy at close. BENJAM closed gamely. ACCOLADE was shuffled back at break. GOLD FLAG had a rough trip. HIGH LARK had early speed. CREOLE MAID weakened. FAIR KNIGHTESS could not keep up.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KINROSS, $33.60, $13.30, $6.70; SHINING SUN, $8.20, $3.60; MONUMENT, $5.80.

KINROSS, going in best form, was allowed to settle into stride while far back, responded boldly when called on, came between horses while charging in early stretch and was up in final stride under strong handling. SHINING SUN was taken back when BRIERTON was sent to front under hustling tactics, took command approaching stretch while racing on inside and closed gamely. MONUMENT went wide for racing room leaving backstretch and closed full of run. ROYAL BUSINESS, rated to stretch, lacked racing room. WAR EMBLEM weakened in final quarter. JACK PATCHES tired after reaching serious contention. CHIMNEY TOP weakened. BRIERTON was through after a half. GOOD FLAVOR quit.

Jones Denies Utility Accord Is Propaganda

Bankers 'Co-operating' Finance Power Program 'Beginning of Recovery'

By Sidney Olson.

Jesse H. Jones, RFC chairman, declared last night that "business is definitely better in all lines," denied there was any "pre-election propaganda" in the rapprochement between the Administration and the utilities and said that numerous leading private bankers "believe this is the beginning of recovery."

Other factors in the business picture were:

The ICC gave authorization for the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad to proceed with its proposed financial readjustment, intended to save millions of dollars yearly in fixed interest charges.

Jones said the RFC stands ready to lend the utility industry $250,000,000 of the $2,000,000,000 needed for its national defense power expansion program, while private bankers are "anxious to co-operate."

And he said his corporation would continue financial aid to the railroads until "they are stabilized."

Conferred With President

His announcement came after he had conferred with President Roosevelt and with Floyd Carlisle, utilities spokesman. Jones said the RFC could make the needed loans to the utilities without difficulty.

He stipulated, however, that only companies which have submitted integration plans under the utility act's "death sentence" clause for holding companies would be eligible for loans.

In answering New Deal critics who have sniped at the defense-power program as "election window-dressing," Jones declared:

"This program is to me a definite indication that this Administration does not in any sense intend to be unfair to any utility or any other industry.

"Naturally, violators of laws enacted by Congress would not be accorded the loans. But any and every utility which signifies its intention to comply with the law will be eligible to borrow. We will expect co-operation between the banks and the RFC."

The Government, Jones said in discussing other phases of the business situation, will continue as the principal banker for the railroads until they are stabilized. He smiled noncommittally when asked to say when he thought the roads would be stabilized.

He then made his better business prediction, adding that he expected to get more applications for equipment loans as traffic picks up.

The I. C. C. stated that the alternative to the B. & O. financial plan was "clearly" reorganization under the bankruptcy act. The plan provides for a reduction in the annual fixed interest charges on funded debt from $31,421,742 to $18,644,679 for an eight-year period, with $11,376,435 a year of contingent interest charges. The extension of approaching maturities totaling $185,000,000 during the next four years also is proposed.

Loans $6,500,000

Before the exchange of any securities for new securities can be effected, at least 90 per cent of the holders of each issue must signify their acceptance. Contingent interest will accumulate, and payment may not be deferred beyond the maturity of the obligation it is related to. August 15 outstanding capitalization of the B. & O. and its three subsidiaries was $1,000,151,613.

Jones announced the RFC had agreed to make a $6,500,000 loan to complete reorganization of the Chicago Great Western Railroad. In return the RFC will receive a first mortgage on the reorganized property.

He also noted the corporation had agreed to lend the Western Pacific's receivers $10,000,000 to meet December maturities. ICC approval is required on this application.

Earlier yesterday Jones told the ICC his agency would insist on recognition of its rights in reorganization of the St. Louis-San Francisco Railroad. The Frisco owes the RFC about $5,190,000, plus interest, advanced in 1932 loans. Jones contends the loans were made with the understanding that the corporation would be given prior treatment in a then pending reorganization plan.

That plan failed to be adopted and the ICC now has before it an amended proposal by the Frisco. Jones said he would not have voted for one Frisco loan of $3,390,000 in June, 1932, if he had not believed the loan would be "properly protected." His comments, addressed in a letter to Commissioner B. H. Meyer, were made part of the record over objections of Frisco attorneys.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Washington Choral Society, under the direction of Louis A. Potter, presents the German Requiem by Johannes Brahms in Washington Cathedral, assisted by Robert Barrow, organist, and musicians from the National Symphony Orchestra. Soloists: Ruby Potter and Edwin Steffe.

A large and attentive audience assembled in Washington Cathedral last evening to hear the third annual performance of Brahms' choral masterpiece, "Ein Deutsches Requiem," by the Washington Choral Society under the direction of Louis A. Potter. As on previous occasions, the instrumental score was played by members of the National Symphony Orchestra, and the optional organ part by Robert Barrow. The presentation was the most impressive yet given by the organization, which showed an increased mastery of the music, both in technical matters and in interpretation.

It was once more made evident that music of devotional nature should always be heard under conditions which preclude applause. Demonstrative interruptions between the sections of an oratorio, for example, are not only incongruous with the spirit of the work but also disturbing to those who wish to absorb themselves in the mood of the subject. Mr. Potter's choice of the cathedral as the locale for the German Requiem has, therefore, been an eminently wise one.

In this majestic and profoundly moving work Brahms expressed the depth and power of his religious faith and revealed the noble qualities of mind and heart which he was accustomed to veil from the world under a brusque and gruff manner. As is well known, the inception of the music came in the hours of grief which followed the shock of his mother's death, and in the writing of the requiem he found a consolation that nothing else could give him.

It seems incomprehensible to us now that the first performance of three numbers of the uncompleted work in 1867 should have aroused criticism on the ground that he had put aside the traditional Latin words of the requiem mass and selected his texts from the Bible. As we understand the work today, the fact that the words are Scriptural and in the common vernacular is one of the strongest points in its appeal. The years have proved that Brahms was right in his hope that the passage of time would bring about an international use of his requiem by people of many languages.

The beauties of the requiem are manifold from the sombre richness of the opening chorus, "Blessed are they that mourn," to the serene peace of the finale, "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord henceforth." Into its massive structure are woven choral fugues of contrapuntal difficulty and brilliant effect, and the music abounds in melodic invention of unquestionably sincere inspiration.

Carmen Proves Popular Guest At Belasco

Aged 63, but Sprightly Miss Bernhardt Sparkles Chigi Encore Forced

National Opera Company of New York presents Georges Bizet's opera, "Carmen," in the Belasco Theater under the direction of Otto Lehmann. The cast:

Carmen	Louise Bernhardt
Don Jose	Patrick Henry
Escamillo	Alfredo Chigi
Micaela	Louisa Coronina
Dancaire	Lloyd Harris
Morales	Raoul Carrere
Frasquita	Rose D'Amato
Mercedes	Taissia Peters
Remendado	Bernard Poland
Dancaire	Raoul Carrere

That "Carmen," aged 63, is still a strikingly popular lady was evidenced last night when the company now performing at the Belasco drew the largest crowd of its season, one which almost filled the orchestra floor as well as the balconies.

To that first Parisian audience the hair-pulling, cigarette-smoking vixen was as vividly realistic as an Orson Welles radio show. The notable thing about that premiere was not, as is popularly supposed, that Carmen bored or displeased her audience, but that she amazed it with such openly bitter realism. Although the familiarty of years has somewhat softened our conception of her, last night's audience found her more hot-blooded as the evening wore on.

This ultimate success was largely due to the well schooled performance of Louise Bernhardt in the title role. Unfortunately not overly blessed with the rich vocal coloring so important to this part, nevertheless by excellent projection of her middle tones and well-timed dramatic technique Miss Bernhardt gave sparkle and life to the oft-reincarnated gypsy.

As has been his habit this week, Alfredo Chigi brought down the house with his rendition of one of opera's great arias. This time it was the famed toreador song which he sang with so full a tone that the audience demanded an encore. Besides a full voice Mr. Chigi boasts a forceful stage personality and an assurance in acting.

Patrick Henry as Don Jose and Luisa Coronina sang the "Parlemoi de ma mere" gracefully. Rose D'Amato and Taissia Peters lent some support to Miss Bernhardt in her dramatically successful card scene. They did not, however, dare the quicksands of the toreador finale, employing instead the simplified choral ending.

The small orchestra was unfortunately completely unequal to the gorgeous coloring of Bizet's score and many of the rich points of the opera were thus no more than water to many in the house who may have been hearing it for the first time.

Lehman, Farley Attack Dewey, Who Fights Back

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Gov. Lehman tonight branded Thomas E. Dewey, his Republican rival for the governorship, an enemy of civil service and Dewey countered with an attack on the Governor's boasted record of utilities legislation tonight.

Dewey, now Manhattan district attorney, replied to Lehman's assertion yesterday that he had evaded the utilities issue with a declaration that "New York is one of the nine most backward States of America in getting cheap electricity for its people."

Saying his own civil service record needed no defense from Dewey's "reckless condemnation," the Governor declared that Dewey as special Manhattan prosecutor had maintained a staff of 100 per cent exempt from civil service.

Funeral Set Today For George Hane, Real Estate Man

Funeral services for George F. Hane, 78, president of the George F. Hane Real Estate Co., will be held today at 2 p. m. at his residence at 1400 Old Georgetown road, Bethesda, Md. The Rev. Howard E. Snyder, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Atonement, will officiate, and burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Frederick, Md.

Active in the work of the Lutheran Church, Mr. Hane was a leading figure in the establishment of the congregation of the Church of the Atonement and in the construction of the church building. He was a member of Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar; Federal Lodge, No. 1, F. A. A. M.; Eureka Chapter, No. 4, D. C., and Almas Temple. He was also a member of the board of directors of the District Title Insurance Co.

Don't Be Fooled About Constipation!

Many people, when constipation hits them, just reach for the medicine shelf, dose up with a physic, and try to forget it—till the trouble comes back. And come back it usually does—more and more often—till you get at its cause.

If you eat what most people do—just bread, meat, potatoes—chances are just this fact causes your trouble: lack of "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and aids elimination.

If that's the reason for your trouble, what you need is a good dish of crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast. It contains the "bulk" you need plus Nature's great intestinal tonic, vitamin B1.

Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and join the "regulars." Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Wheat Prices Advance With Crop Fears

U. S. Surplus to Be Sold Exports Will Be Aided Gains Come Late

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Stimulated by prospective augmented efforts to enlarge export sales, and by trade fears of a short domestic crop, wheat prices today scored late fractional gains.

Special attention as the day drew to an end was given to a statement from Secretary Wallace of the Department of Agriculture that the farm administration might resort to direct salesmanship in its attempt to dispose of 100,000,000 bushels of United States wheat in world markets.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1/8 off to 3/8 up compared with yesterday's finish. December, 63 3/4; May, 65 7/8-66; corn, 1/8-1/2 down; December, 44 3/8-44 1/2; May, 48-48 1/8; oats showing 1/8 decline to 1/4 advance; rye unchanged to 1/4 bulge, and provisions unchanged to a setback of 2 cents.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 2.—The stock market was favorably impressed, on the whole, with Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech in Parliament Tuesday and prices today held steady. Gilt-edge issues were especially in demand. Transatlantics were well sustained. Inquiry for Kaffirs featured a quiet mining group. Domestic rails sagged on receipt of disappointing traffic figures, while industrials were neglected.

Paris.—Bidding for government bonds highlighted quiet trading in the bourse today. Bank of France closed 205 francs higher. Rentes were up 45 to 80 centimes. Suez Canal dipped 100 francs.

Liverpool.—Activity in cotton futures trading was again hampered today by uncertainties over American cotton policy. Nearby liquidation was more than offset by Bombay and local buying and prices finished 1 to 3 points up. Wheat futures declined in sympathy with weak North American values Tuesday, increased pressure from all shippers' offers and favorable Argentine crop and weather reports. Final prices were 3/4-7/8d lower.

Cotton Steady; Foreign Buying

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Firmness of distant months on foreign buying featured cotton today. October advanced from 7.78 to close at a high of 7.90, while March, which had advanced from 8.40 to 8.44, finished at 8.41. Final prices were unchanged to 13 points net higher.

Early orders were evenly divided, but the tendency for forward positions to strengthen soon became evident. Hedge selling which had concentrated largely on next October contracts was partly diverted to the current December delivery. Trade buyers, however, were less aggressive and longs transferred accounts forward.

Steel Output Advances to 57% Capacity

Rise of 3 Points Pig Iron Up 18.3% Detroit Leads Nation

New York, Nov. 2.—A rise of 3 points in steel ingot production to 57 per cent for the past week; a gain of 18.3 per cent in pig iron output in October, and substantial buying of steel scrap for both domestic consumption and export shipment are indications of the faster tempo of business recovery in the steel and iron industry says Iron Age today in its weekly summary of the industry.

Striking increases in ingot production have occurred at Chicago and Detroit. The Chicago rate is up 9 1/2 points to 56 per cent, while at Detroit the independent steel plant there is running its open-hearth department at 100 per cent, and the average rate for Detroit, 83.5 per cent, is the highest in the country.

"Pig iron production for October is estimated at 2,054,000 gross tons based on reports which were gathered by telegraph on November 1. This compares with 1,680,435 tons in September. The daily rate last month was 66,258 tons against 56,015 tons in September, a gain of 18.3 per cent.

"Steel scrap purchases by domestic mills within the past week may have amounted to as much as 100,000 tons. Export buying has also been on a large scale. Japan is believed to have bought close to 100,000 tons, and there have been additional sales recently to European countries. These transactions, together with rising ingot production, point to the possibility of a further rise in scrap prices.

"Steel awards for building construction are at a fairly steady level, with public work predominating. Lettings in the week were 18,400 tons, the largest of which was 6,540 tons for buildings at the Philadelphia Navy Yard. New projects out for bids total 21,000 tons, of which 4,500 tons is for hangars at the North Beach Airport, New York. Reinforcing bar awards of nearly 10,000 tons include 4,800 tons for the Queensbridge housing project in Queens, New York.

"The Southern Railway has ordered 2,575 freight cars instead of the 2,400 inquired for; 27,000 tons of steel or more will be required. The New York Central has ordered 29 Diesel-electric locomotives."

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gave notice yesterday that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 91-day bills, and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve Banks, or the branches thereof, up to 2 p. m. Friday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Trading Volume Lowest in a Month Steels Lead Modest Advance Chrysler Dividend After the Close

New York, Nov. 2.—Share prices worked a little higher today under the leadership of steels, but trading volume fell to the lowest level since September 23 with turnover of 783,950 units about 50 per cent of recent totals. Bonds were dull and narrow. Wheat finished 1/8 cent lower to 3/8 higher and cotton was unchanged to 13 points up on moderate activity. Foreign exchange dealings witnessed some improvement in rates of leading European currencies.

Despite the slump in turnover, trading on the big board was representative, with 789 issues traded on which 40 recorded new highs for the year or longer. Advances exactly matched declines at 290 and 209 stocks were unchanged on the day. The composite average of 100 key shares finished at an advance of 0.10 point.

Steel News Bullish

Bullish news contained in the Iron Age midweek review contributed to the interest in steel shares, the forecast being for further gains in operating rates. A number of favorable items were enumerated, including a rise in scrap steel prices coinciding with large purchases of the metal for both domestic needs and exports; increasing specifications for sheets and strip as consumers are faced with the possibility of a tight delivery situation, particularly on low-price business placed recently; signs of a resumption of buying in tinplate; encouraging sales by the automotive industry, and hope that at least essential business from the railroads will develop before the year-end. Government steel requirements, expected to be placed before December 31, are also estimated to be substantial.

Chrysler Dividend

One of the most cheerful developments of the day was reserved until after the close of the market, Chrysler Corporation directors announcing a $1.25 dividend on capital stock against 25 cents a share in the preceding quarter and 50 cents before that. The payment, which will be made December 12, however, compares with $3 a share on the like 1937 date.

The management reported that the company's business has been improving steadily for some months. While net profit for the September quarter was considerably less than for the June period, this merely reflects the change-over from old to new models and expense connected with such operations. The last quarter, it is felt, should be much the best of the year. Chrysler stock sold at $63 in San Francisco following issuance of the earnings statement and dividend news, up 50 cents from the New York close.

Aircraft Issues Active

Aircraft issues were again briskly traded, with Consolidated leading the list for a net advance of a point. Sperry, United and some others, also turned in a good showing. Gains of a point or more were recorded by Allied Chemical, Atlantic Coast Line, Union Pacific and a few others. Quite a few stocks, including Bethlehem, which advanced sharply in the morning, were subject to profit-taking and finished under their best levels of the day.

Coppers Sag

Coppers were inclined to sag a bit more than other descriptions, probably explained by the fact that markets for the metal have settled into a grove for the time being, with price changes small and trading interest low. Scrap copper, considered a barometer of refined prices, was marked down fractionally today. In the opinion of the trade, however, the domestic price is firmly established at 11.25 cents a pound.

Bond Trading Dull

Bond trading showed the same tendency toward apathy apparent in the equities department today, and changes were small and irregular. Best grade investment issues hardly appeared on the bond tape.

Rail Issues Decline

Among speculative railroad bonds losses were more pronounced than the gains, but there were quite a few plus signs. Local tractions engaged in another upswing on the assumption that the $315,000,000 unification issues would be approved at the polls. Foreign dollar obligations were in quiet demand. The turnover was only $5,950,000.

Treasury Issues Decline

Long-term United States Treasury obligations drifted slightly lower, owing mainly to the prospective financing of the December quarter-date. Large institutional investors will tend to hold aloof until the terms are disclosed a month hence, unless special developments intervene. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations also were quiet. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were motionless, at or close to the highs of the year.

Secondary and default railroad liens were inclined toward softness, but numerous small gains also appeared. Trading was dull pending further moves in the wage situation. Local tractions were active and higher by fractions to 2 points, on the election proposal for issuance of New York City bonds to effect unification. Communications bonds were in demand, but amusements were dull. Holding company bonds, convertibles and other special groups were quiet.

Germans Advance

German bonds were active and higher in the foreign group, on the admission by the British government that Berlin controls the destinies of Danubian countries. Italian bonds likewise did better, while Japanese bonds improved on the prospect of control of all of eastern Asia by Tokyo. Argentine issues were off slightly in anticipation of the new issue.

Business Improving, Bank Says

Reserve Index Higher Market Rebounds Orders Are Heavy

New York, Nov. 2.—"The month of October has brought further evidence of business improvement, and despite some disappointments the indications for the near future have continued favorable," the National City Bank of New York said today in its monthly letter.

"In the equipment industries particularly the demand is still lagging, and retail trade has been held back by unseasonably warm weather. Nevertheless, the business indexes have been moving upward.

"The Federal Reserve index of industrial production rose to 90 for September, from 88 in August, and the preliminary figures indicate another and probably greater rise in October. Moreover, some important upward revisions of factory schedules, which will apply to November, have been announced.

"The rebound in the markets, which followed the Munich agreement and the relief from the strain of the European crisis, seems to answer in the negative the question whether the weakness in September was due to domestic causes as well as the war danger.

"The evidence now is that the trend here all along has been upward. The pace has slackened since the middle of the month, but the business is on the books where it will support production."

Chrysler Corp. Votes $1.25 on Its Common

New York, Nov. 2 (AP).—Directors of Chrysler Corporation today declared a dividend of $1.25 a share on common stock, payable December 12 to holders of record November 14. On September 14 last a payment of 25 cents a share was made and 50 cents was paid in June. For the full year 1937 the company paid $10 a share on common stock.

The company reported for the nine months ended September 30 net income of $6,671,877 after all charges, equal to $1.53 a share on common stock. This compared with $40,424,211, or $9.29 a share in the comparable 1937 period.

Indicated earnings for the September quarter amounted to $962,279, equal to 22 cents a share on common stock, compared with $3,599,630, or 83 cents a common share in the preceding quarter and $12,967,602, or $2.08 in the comparable 1937 period.

Sales, President Keller said, totaled $236,732,940 for the first nine months of this year, compared with $572,217,107 in the like 1937 period. The number of cars sold in the first nine 1938 months was 318,137, against 877,734 in the similar 1937 period.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Nov. 2 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Fairly large weights of fine territory wools were being taken out of the Boston market today at firm to advanced prices. Under urgent buying, sizable weights of average to short French combing lengths fine territory wools, in original bags, were sold at prices ranging 66 to 69 cents, scoured basis. Good French combing lengths fine territory wools, in original bags, moved at prices ranging 67 to 70 cents, scoured basis. A number of buyers, however, were not willing to bid over 65 cents, scoured basis, for average to short French combings or more than 66 to 68 cents, scoured basis, for good French combing lengths fine territory wools in original bags.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1938—

TRUSTEE'S SALE OF VALUABLE IMPROVED REAL ESTATE CONSISTING OF A MODERN TWO-STORY BRICK, SEMI-DETACHED DWELLING KNOWN AS PREMISES 720 TEWKESBURY PLACE NORTHWEST, WASHINGTON, D. C.

Default having been made in the payment of the principal and interest on the debt secured on the hereinafter described land and premises by a certain deed of trust bearing date September 1, 1928, and recorded September 19, 1928, in Liber 6323 at folio 22, et seq., one of the Land Records of the District of Columbia, and at the request of the holder of the note secured by the said deed of trust, the undersigned as Substituted Trustee under said deed of trust by virtue of a decree passed October 6th, 1938, in Equity Courts of the United States for the District of Columbia in Equity No. 87667 will offer for sale under the provisions thereof, at public auction in front of the premises on FRIDAY, THE FOURTH DAY OF NOVEMBER, A. D. 1938, AT THREE-THIRTY O'CLOCK, P. M., the following described land and premises situate in the County of Washington, District of Columbia, known and distinguished as Lot numbered Twenty-seven (27) in the Subdivision of lots made by Harry Wardman and Thomas P. Bones in Square numbered Thirty-one Hundred and Sixty-three (3163), as per plat recorded in the Office of the Surveyor for the District of Columbia in Liber 83 at folio 41.

TERMS OF SALE: Sold subject to a prior deed of trust securing $4,000. Further particulars of which will be announced at time of sale. Of the purchase price over and above said deed of trust, one-third is to be paid in cash, of which a deposit of $250 will be required at time of sale and the balance to be secured by second deed of trust on the property sold, payable in one and two years after date of sale, with interest at the rate of five per cent (5%) per annum, payable semi-annually, or all cash, at the option of the purchaser. Terms of sale to be complied with within 15 days from date of sale in default of which the property will be resold at the risk and cost of the defaulting purchaser after five days' re-advertisement in some newspaper published in Washington, D. C. All conveyancing, title examination, recording and revenue stamps to be at the expense of the purchaser.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, Substituted Trustee by Decree passed on Equity No. 87667.

Bob Burns Says—

Whenever you see an actor look easy and natural on the screen as though he wasn't actin' at all, you can jest bet that he had to do an awful lot of actin' to look easy that way.

The other day I heard a director bawling an actress out because she didn't show more emotion in the scene. He says, "Remember, your husband is leaving you—he's walking out of your life! For goodness sakes, show how you feel about it!"

The actress says, "I am—I've had six husbands walk out on me and I'm jest gettin' so I don't care any more!"

Convention Begins Plan New Recipes Told 'Daffy Doodle' Party

A $2,250,000 advertising campaign to keep the public posted on advancements in the ice industry was launched on a co-operative basis yesterday at the twenty-first annual convention of the National Association of Ice Industries at the Mayflower.

The money will be collected from "volunteers" and expended over a period of three years. It will be an "increased follow-up" of the three-year program just ended and as a result of which the iceman staged a comeback that is making commercial history.

Smart tricks in ice uses were demonstrated at the afternoon session by Eleanor Howe, director of the home economics department of the association. Not ice alone, but many different varieties and sizes of ice and up-to-date ways of cooking and serving, were explained by Miss Howe. Many new "ice recipes" were presented.

Marjorie Shuler, writer who recently completed a trip around the world on commercial planes, spoke at the luncheon on the benefits of ice to hot countries.

Others on the Tuesday program included R. C. Suhr, president; R. J. Bailey, vice president; Hurley G. Hust, advertising director; George Steers, jr., chairman of the finance committee, and L. W. Dawley, of the Southern United Ice Co.

The annual dinner dance of the group was held last night in the main ballroom of the Mayflower.

Today the sightseeing trips will include a visit to Mount Vernon. Eight speakers will appear on the morning program, and tonight a "daffy doodle" party will be held.

Studies Fur for U. S.

DR. THORA M. PLITT, formerly with the Bureau of Standards and now with the Department of Agriculture, has begun research with Agriculture because current fashions are demanding more and more fur despite the diminishing supply of wild-life pelts. The fur industry is turning to pelts of animals raised in captivity and Dr. Plitt is studying their quality

O.H.P. Johnson Metropolitan Bank President

White's Successor Jacobsen Vice President Other Aides Promoted

O. H. P. Johnson, a vice president of the National Metropolitan Bank since January, 1909, was elected president, succeeding the late George W. White, at a meeting of the bank's board of directors yesterday.

Other official changes voted at the meeting were the elevation of Cashier C. F. Jacobsen to executive vice president, a new office; promotion of Francis E. Hildebrand, an assistant caishier, to a vice presidency, and advancement of Horace F. Stokes, an assistant cashier, to the post of cashier. Memorial resolutions on the death of Mr. White were adopted at the meeting.

Johnson, the bank's new chief executive, is well known in financial circles and his entire business career has been largely with the institution he now heads. He was born in this city September 23, 1878. His father, E. K. Johnson, was president of the former Citizens National Bank, which was consolidated with the National Metropolitan many years ago. He was educated at Georgetown University and St. John's College and is a member of the Washington Stock Exchange and a former treasurer of that organization. He is at present treasurer of Catholic University and a member of the Metropolitan and Chevy Chase clubs.

Jacobsen has been cashier of the bank since July 5, 1917, and with the bank since 1903. Hildebrand entered the bank's service in 1918, and has been an assistant cashier since April 30, 1930. Stokes became associated with the institution April 1, 1934, and prior to that time was with the office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

Cornell Trustee Resigns

Resignation of Judge Frank Harris Hiscock, of Syracuse, N. Y., as chairman of the board of trustees of Cornell University was announced yesterday by President Edmund E. Day. Judge Hiscock had been chairman for 22 years.

Satisfied Man Jumps Into River and Swims

Chester Walter Smith, colored, 32, of 1203 Third street southwest, who expressed his satisfaction with everything yesterday by diving into the Potomac in his underwear, waited in a Harbor Precinct cell last night until police could learn what charge to place against him.

Seen swimming in the river near Eleventh street southwest, Smith was pulled to shore by Policemen C. A. Parker and A. E. Pywell, who thought he had fallen overboard. When they discovered he wore only underwear in the near-freezing water, they wanted to know why.

"I like everything," Smith explained.

Separated From Mate, Woman Found Dead

Mrs. Margaret Emerson, 34, died of illuminating gas in her apartment at 2505 Thirteenth street northwest yesterday. She was found unconscious by a friend, Lila Brackney, 4512 Fourteenth street northwest, and a colored elevator operator, who went to the apartment after smelling gas.

Police were told that the woman has been separated from her husband and that she has been in ill health. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald was investigating last night.

Park View Body Hits Closing of Otis Place

A protest against the closing of Otis place, in the block west of Warder street northwest, was lodged with the District Commissioners yesterday by the Park View citizens' committee.

The citizens group said closing of the street would necessitate rerouting of traffic over the only route available—Sixth street, which is described by them as "quite narrow, with narrow sidewalks, around a blind curve, and up a steep hill on Newton place."
